Astronaut Plans To Skindive Now

GRAND TURK, B. W. I. (AP)— Was astronaut Malcolm Scott Carpenter confused, preoccupied or simply reflective during his last whirl around the globe? Space officials seem unable to agree on an answer.

As they weighed today this and other questions which arose during the 37-year-old naval officer's thrilling space journey, he had a date to go skindiving with other astronauts off this tiny West Indies island.

Then there were to be more questions about his three — orbit flight, more debriefing, with astronauts John H. Glenn Jr., Walter M. Schirra Jr., Virgil I. Grissom and Leroy Gordon Cooper Jr. joining in the interrogation.

Carpenter himself will have a chance to answer questions about his condition during flight when he returns to Cape Canaveral tomorrow for a welcome home celebration and a news conference. On Monday he will fly to his hometown of Boulder, Colo., for another welcome.

The question of Carpenter's condition during his last orbit arose late Thursday night, several hours after he had been plucked from his tiny life raft in the Atlantic 250 miles beyond his target landing area. The 17 Project Mercury tracking stations got together on their world-girdling radio network for a post-flight critique.

The Kauai, Hawaii, station said Carpenter sounded tired and his voice was weak as he flew over:

"He was quite concerned about his capsule attitude and therefore, on several occasions, when Capcom (the capsule communicator) tried to get him on his retrosequence, he kept returning to what he was doing.

"We told him to get ready for the retrosequence and he started doing something else.

"We had the impression that he was very confused about what was going on. But it was very difficult to assess whether he was confused or preoccupied."

The Woomera, Australia, station came in to say, "We also feel the astronaut was acting somewhat tired on the last pass." It said his voice was weak.

When he was asked to comment later on the critique, the medical expert who monitored Carpenter's flight said the astronaut obviously was tired. But, Dr. Stanley T. White said, Carpenter performed his tasks "in an appropriate manner."

His theory was that the tracking stations thought Carpenter was confused because he was too busy— too preoccupied—at times to make the requested responses.

At Grand Turk, the psychiatrist who talked to Carpenter after he came back to earth said he didn't even think the astronaut was tired during the trip.

"Quite the opposite," said Dr. George Ruff, of the University of Pennsylvania, "I think he was quite alert on the whole flight."

So far as making decisions goes, Dr. Ruff said, people differ. Some, given 10 seconds for a decision, will make it in the first second. But Carpenter, he said, is the type who will think about it for nine seconds, considering the alternatives, before making the decision in the 10th second.

Whatever his condition on the last orbit, Carpenter was hungry, exhilerated and apologetic once he came back to earth.

As he bobbed in his life raft waiting for recovery forces to pick him up, Carpenter sampled the food from his survival kit and sipped water.

"He pulled out a bar of concentrated food and began munching on it," said Sgt. Ray E. McClure of Mt. Sterling, Ky., one of the two paramedics who jumped into the Atlantic to aid the astronaut.

(McClure is assigned to the 41st Air Rescue Squadron at Hamilton Air Force Base.

(The other paramedic was A/1c John F. Heitsch, also of Hamilton, who lives at 2078 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael.)

Cross, Tired Little Boy, 2, Is Run Over

By LOREN MacARTHUR

Little Marc Robert Steers, 2, was cross and irritable yesterday evening as he walked down Lincoln Avenue beside his parents, pulling a toy.

Leonard and Wilhelmina Steers didn't notice their boy was gone until they heard a shout and turned around to discover him dead, run over by a car.

Eugene Lackenbach, driver of the car and owner of Eugene's Restaurant in San Rafael, told police he was turning off Lincoln Avenue into the driveway next to his restaurant but did not see Marc, who according to witnesses had lain down on the driveway sidewalk.

Mrs. Steers ran to the boy and carried him into Eugene's, where Lackenbach called police and asked for an ambulance. They boy was rushed to San Rafael General Hospital at approximately 6 p.m. where he was dead on arrival. The coroner's report said he had probably died instantly of a fractured skull and multiple injuries.

The Steers had moved to Marin only two weeks ago and were staying at the El Camino Motel, corner of Mission and Lincoln Avenue, while Mrs. Steers searched days for a home.

Hint Strike Deadlock May Be Broken

Negotiations between striking laborers and Associated General Contractors in northern California were idle today, but contractors hinted the deadlock might soon be broken.

Three major construction firms signed separate agreements with the AFL-CIO Laborers Union Thursday, and last night the AGC executive committee urged court action against the firms for breaking their agreement to be "bound by the by-laws and actions of the AGC."

M and K Corp., Fred J. Early Jr. Co., both of San Francisco, and Peter Kiewit Sons Co., a nationwide firm, all signed contracts granting laborers 72-cent hourly wage and benefit increases over three years.

A fourth firm, Carl N. Swenson Co. of San Jose was said to be negotiating for a separate contract with the union today.

None of the firms has jobs in Marin County.

Terrorists Blow Up Nine Schools

ALGIERS (UPI) — Terrorists blew up nine primary schools in Algiers and the former city hall of the Bab El Qued suburb today.

Authorities immediately suspected the blasts were set off by the Secret Army Organization.

Criticism Answered By Keaton

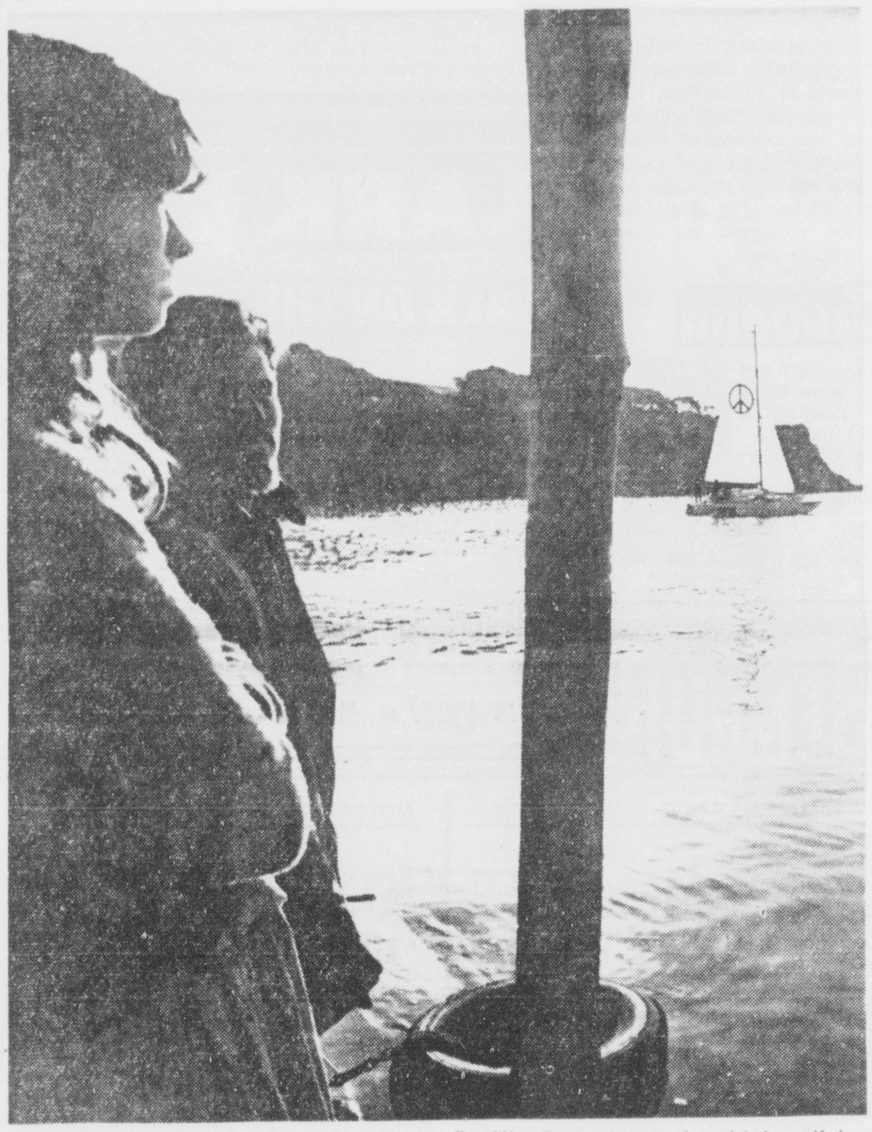

Coroner Frank J. Keaton today angrily denied the county physician's allegations yesterday that the coroner was "inefficient and inadequate" in his investigation of a county jail inmate who died in his cell Monday.

John Joseph Powers, 41, of Inverness died in jail Monday night shortly after County Physician Rafael G. Dufficy Jr. had examined him at San Rafael General Hospital and returned the patient to his cell.

"Our office has done and is doing as complete an investigation as any law enforcement agency in the state," Coroner Keaton declared. "I didn't particularly appreciate the statements (of Dr. Dufficy) when the person who made them has not even looked at our complete reports."

Keaton had with him more than a dozen reports which he had accumulated on the case

PHONE PLAN IS A WRONG NUMBER—HAYAKAWA

By FRED WYATT

"It is quite clear that the telephone company wants us to quit using our memory," semanticist S. I. Hayakawa of Mill Valley said today.

Hayakawa, author and speaker and professor of English at San Francisco State College, made his wry observation in announcing the determination of the Anti-Digit Dialing League to give the figits to the phone company over its numbers game, the new all-numbers telephone number system.

Hayakawa commented to an Independent-Journal reporter after a meeting of eight or nine newspapermen, telelvision newsmen and photographers in the San Francisco Press and Union League Club yesterday. Speaking at the meeting yesterday besides Hayakawa were Carl May, executive secretary of the Great Issues Foundation; attorney George Brunn; and Jack Block, associate professor of psychology at the University of California at Berkeley.

Brunn disputed the phone company's claim that there are insufficient lettered prefixes to accomodate all the phones that will be in use.

He said there are 600 possible combinations of letters and 10,000 possible combinations of numbers. This, he asserted, would be "enough for six million phones in San Francisco alone."

Hayakawa told the group: "If the government imposed this on us, we would scream at such ineptitude. Why do we submit to a private monopoly?"

Today the Mill Valley educator told the I-J:

"Apparently the telephone company wants to discourage

Everyman Sailing In U.S. Defiance

Coast Guard Stands By To Chase Vessel

Gentle winds swept the nuclear-test protest boat Everyman through the Golden Gate and into the Pacific today while a 95-foot Coast Guard cutter stood by awaiting order to follow in hot pursuit.

The Everyman sailed from Sausalito today at 7 a.m. in defiance of a federal court order forbidding the vessel to leave its moorings.

Its three crew members, Harold L. Stallings of Los Altos Hills, Evan D. Yoes of Berkeley and Ed Lazar of New York City, plan to protest nuclear testing at Christmas Island.

They departed with the "sympathy" of President John F. Kennedy, whose concern apparently was not shared by his brother, Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy, who ordered the restraining action.

At the last moment United States Attorney Cecil Poole in San Francisco sought a federal judge to sign an order holding the Everyman's crew in contempt of yesterday's court order.

As of noon, the order had not been signed, but a big Coast Guard cutter was ordered to be ready for a pursuit this afternoon, with deputy marshals aboard who would order the Everyman to halt.

Federal authorities, acting under Atomic Energy Commission power, may follow the ship beyond the usual three-mile coast limit.

Stallings, skipper of the Everyman, said before sailing: "We're more concerned about

I-J SALUTES GATE BRIDGE ON BIRTHDAY

The Golden Gate Bridge turns 25 tomorrow.

As a birthday salute to the world's longest suspension span, your Independent-Journal Marin Magazine today is devoted to telling the story of building the bridge and its present operation.

You'll find 48 pages crammed with photographs of the bridge past and present, and with stories of its birth and colorful history.

Mysterious Explosion Caused Crash

CENTERVILLE, Iowa (UPI) — Federal investigators said today a mysterious explosive force blew apart a Continental Airlines' jet liner and sent 45 persons crashing to their deaths.

Robert F. Six, the airline's president, said in Denver that Continental experts on the crash scene had found evidence indicating that a man-made explosive had been set off in the rear of the five-million-dollar Boeing 707 jet as it cruised over southern Iowa Tuesday night.

The evidence has been turned over to the FBI, Six said.

At Centerville, Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) public relations officer Edward E. Slattery Jr. said "an explosive force of unknown origin" ripped the aft of the jet.

Wife Slain, Man Leaps From Bridge

A San Francisco scavenger apparently stabbed and strangled his estranged wife to death and then plunged to his death from the Golden Gate Bridge last night, police reported.

Dead were Louis G. Scurini, 27, and his wife Lorraine, 26.

The bridge plunge, 225th known suicide from the span, took place on the 25th anniversary of the opening of the bridge.

Discovery of the murder and suicide came after California Highway Patrolman Frank Webb stopped on the south side of the bridge at about 7:55 p.m. to investigate a car parked near the south tower.

Webb found the names of Scurini and his wife on the registration slip of the car, a new one. San Francisco police and CHP officers discovered that Scurini had left his four children with his parents at about 7 p.m.

They broke down the door of the wife's home and found her body on the floor of a rear bedroom.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

U.S. Fallout On Japan

TOKYO (AP) — A marked rise in radioactivity in rainfall over northern Japan, reported in the past two days, apparently was caused by U.S. nuclear tests in the Pacific, the Central Meteorological Agency said today.

Paper Shut Down

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The Venezuelan government has shut down the leftist opposition newspaper Clarin for 15 days on charges of publishing a false report that gunmen tried to assassinate President Romulo Betancourt.

Royal Accident

GRIMSTON, England (AP)— A royal family limousine on the way to pick up Queen Elizabeth knocked down and injured a 5-year-old boy yesterday.

Peace Congress

LONDON (AP) — Bertrand Russell says he will serve as a sponsor of the World Peace Congress in Moscow despite threats to expel him from the British Labor Party.

"I shall go on doing what I think fit and if that means the Labor Party does not want me, I don't mind very much — I can do without them perhaps," said the 90-year-old philosopher.

Excuse To School

BLACKDUCK, Minn. (AP) — Heavy rains that swelled lakes and rivers in this northern Minnesota area prompted this note from Mrs. Howard Bowers to the high school principal:

"Please excuse Sandy in slacks today and tomorrow, as she has to go by boat three miles to catch the school bus."

Arab Rocket Shot

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The only rocket society in the Arab world today announced the successful firing of a two-stage rocket made from a $6 steel pipe and launched with the help of 15-cent flashlight batteries.

Called the "Cedar Two," the rocket soared to more than 36,000 feet and dropped into the Lebanese mountains near the ski resort of Dahr el Baidar.

Envoy Sees De Gaulle

PARIS (AP) — U.S. Ambassador James Gavin was received today by President Charles de Gaulle for the second time in 10 days.

No reason was given for Gavin's call at Elysee Palace, but it came when U.S.-French relations are undergoing new strains over De Gaulle's insistence on creating an independent French nuclear striking force and U.S. refusal to aid such a scheme.

'Splinter' Thinking In GOP Hit

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Republican State Chairman John Krehbiel says GOP candidates and principles were betrayed when a county chairman's statement told precinct workers not to push a large vote for the June 5 primary.

Krehbiel yesterday sent a letter to 2,500 party leaders in the state advising them:

"A big vote on June 5 will lead the way to victory in November. I hope you will join in reversing defeatist sentiment by impressing upon every Republican the importance of going to the polls."

The statement decried by Krehbiel was made in a letter by Leonard S. Thomson, Kern County Republican chairman. He suggested that precinct workers "remain as aloof as possible" from the contest between Richard M. Nixon and Joseph C. Shell for the GOP gubernatorial nomination.

Thomson later termed the letter a mistake caused by an error in telephone dictation.

Mrs. Patricia Hitt, Republican national committeewoman, charged that an "insidious splinter movement" is seeking a light vote. She called Thomson's statement a "ridiculous piece of political heresy" and a "direct slap at our entire democratic system."

Meanwhile, Nixon, speaking in Glendale, attacked the "complacency of some of our fellow Republicans."

He said:

"We must all remember that the June 5 primary will determine more than who heads our state ticket in the fall. It will also test our strength across the board.

"The size of the Republican vote in the primary will be our way of saying, 'We are strong, we are on the move, we will win in November.'"

He said that Gov. Edmund G. Brown, fewer than eight months after he was elected in 1959, announced he would accept the Democratic nomination for president.

"We all know how his frustrated ambitions ended in a fiasco at the 1960 presidential convention," Nixon said.

Brown speaking in Bakersfield, generally confined his comments to nonpartisan topics. He declared that California is now the undisputed leader in the new frontier of space, pointing out that the state has nearly 25 per cent of all government contracts for space and defense work.

Prince As Salesman

TORONTO (AP) — Prince Philip, often called Britain's best salesman, says he's "a sort of impresario."

He told a group of high school students yesterday that the "impresario" description fitted his role in organizing the Commonwealth Study Conference held in Canada.

Asked how the privately sponsored conference was financed, he replied: "By a system of blackmail and an extraordinarily efficient treasurer."

Algiers Blast Deaths

ALGIERS (AP) — A time bomb planted in a pickup truck exploded on the Algiers waterfront today killing at least four persons and wounding a half dozen.

One European perished, but all the other victims were Moslems, police said.

Hundreds of screaming Moslems surged out of the nearby Casbah at the sound of the blast, bringing members of the newly formed Moslem police force on the run to head off a riot.

Fire engines and ambulances rushed to the scene, but most of the ambulances returned empty.

Moslems generally refuse to let European-manned ambulances transport their wounded or allow European hospitals to treat them.

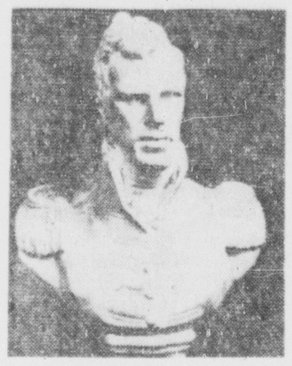

Shell To Visit In Marin County

Assemblyman Joseph S. Shell of Los Angeles, a Republican candidate for governor, will pay a brief visit to Marin County next week on his windup tour of Northern California.

Mrs. James L. Heynemann, Shell For Governor co-chairman, said Shell plans to be in San Rafael next Thursday and will speak from the courthouse steps between 2:30 and 3:30 p.m.

BENNY GOODMAN OLD FASHIONED?

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union's top jazzman said today many Russians think Benny Goodman is old fashioned but, "We will make a very good welcome for him."

"His roots are Russians, his parents came from here, and we have a very favorable attitude toward him," said band leader Leonid Utyosov.

Utyosov leads the State Variety Orchestra and is also considered this country's top expert on popular music.

"We have groups here who already consider Benny Goodman is old-fashioned. They know everything. They prefer Stan Kenton."

He didn't say so, but the youngsters learned about American jazz from the Voice of America.

Bicycle, Bermuda Shorts Day Is Held At Terra Linda High

It was "Bicycle and Bermuda Shorts Day" at Terra Linda High School yesterday as more than 600 of the school's 800 students and more than half the faculty showed up in casual attire.

About 250 students pedalled to school from Marinwood, Terra Linda and Santa Venetia to prove high school students still know how to ride bicycles.

The special day was declared by the student council because students said they were miffed by San Francisco disc jockey Don Sherwood's remarks that Terra Linda students would scoff at anyone riding a bicycle to school.

Shorts were worn by most students and teachers to emphasize the springtime, sporting atmosphere of the event.

A dance and swimming in the school's new pool completed the day.

Tiburon Incorporation Is Due Supervisors

Marin County Board of Supervisors will convene at 10 a.m. Monday for a hearing on proposed Tiburon incorporation.

Also to be considered during the day will be a revised plan prepared by Administrator Alan Bruce for allocation of space in the San Rafael courthouse after removal of many present courthouse offices to the new civic center.

An opinion by County Counsel E. Warren McGuire indicates that the board will find legally admissable the petitions for Tiburon incorporation.

The Citizens Committee Against Increased Taxation Through Incorporation has alleged that the petitions are old, but McGuire has found no statutory time limitation. Neither has McGuire found any legal requirement for a single petition or for an affidavit as to the genuineness of all the 63 sections. But, he says, the board has the right to inquire into alleged defects.

Bruce has found means to accommodate the whole county probation department in the courthouse after exodus of many of the present occupants and substantial savings in rental of extra quarters should be achieved.

Decision on the new plan is expected to be made before conclusion of the Monday session, which was continued from last Tuesday afternoon.

The supervisors will convene their regular weekly session at 9 a.m. Tuesday with a number of continued matters added to the regular communications, departments of public works and planning commission business.

Notable among the subjects not completed last Tuesday was the proposed Open Area Ordinance on which the board wishes to discuss legalities with McGuire.

San Rafael High's Art Festival Set

More than 1,000 San Rafael High School students are expected to take part in the school's first public Creative Arts Festival from 2 to 5 p.m. June 3.

As preliminary, a large group of the students turned out at 9 a.m. today to dig, paint and otherwise completely re-do the music patio which will be used for part of the three-hour complex of events.

First number on the program will be a "Promenade Concert" by the San Rafael High School Band on the front steps of the main building. At this same location there will next be a dramatic production by foreign language classes.

A play will be given by drama classes on the Music Patio.

Following the dramatic production, the front steps will be used for a fashion show.

Meanwhile displays of paintings, sculpture and ceramics will be given on a space east of the main building by a redwood grove.

Final event of the day will be a concert by the San Rafael High School Orchestra under direction of Hugo Rinaldi on the main steps, starting at 4:15 p.m. and continuing to the end of the festival at 5.

Sergeant Whose Wife Was Slain Set Free

The murder of a soldier's wife whose body was found on a Marin hillside remained unsolved today after release of her husband from the Presidio stockade in San Francisco.

S/Sgt. Ruben E. Rudolph, 34, has been released in administrative restraint and is free to perform his duties but must remain in the Sixth Army's headquarters area, said Frank L. Price, San Francisco agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The FBI has dropped the case after determining that Liesolotte Eve Rudolph, 36, was not killed on federal property, Price said. The body was discovered Sunday in Fort Barry by a WAC corporal.

Meanwhile Inspector Edward Huegle of the San Francisco Police homicide detail said the murder had not been accepted as a San Francisco case.

"We're investigating," Huegle said. "There is indication that she was murdered in her apartment in San Francisco, but we can't prove it. She could have been killed in some other area."

The woman's body was found bludgeoned to death 22 feet down a bank from a road in the military reservation.

Rudolph was taken into custody early Tuesday in his San Francisco apartment by FBI, Marin and San Francisco law officers. Until Thursday he had been held in the Presidio stockade.

Before refusing to comment further on advice of his attorney, Rudolph told officers he last saw his wife May 16 when he took her to San Francisco airport for a return trip to France the day after her arrival. Her luggage and other personal effects were found in his apartment.

muted daily to San Francisco by bus. His wife and son walked to the bus station each evening to meet him. They were returning from the bus depot yesterday when the death occurred.

A witness, William W. Shannon Jr. of San Rafael, told police he was stopped near Eugene's because of traffic piled up for a light at Third and Lincoln when he saw the boy lying in the driveway.

As Lackenbach turned in, Shannon realized he couldn't see the boy and blew his horn. Shannon's father, also in the car, shouted. Lackenbach said later he had heard a horn blowing but thought nothing of it because of the heavy traffic.

Patrolman John Riordan said the accident was apparently unavoidable. A parked car helped block Lackenbach's view of the driveway.

the use of memory. That's what the Mr. Bumbles commercials on television are about. The telephone company knows this system is harder on the memory than letters.

"They want us to look up phone numbers and keep lists in books. They don't want us to carry them around in our heads because we sometimes make mistakes. It is quite clear from letters they've sent to me that they don't want us to use our memory."

Hayakawa said that under the old lettered prefix system a person could tell where a call was coming from. "If you get a Cypress number you know it is San Jose," he said. "With all numbers you can't tell whether it is Belmont or San Francisco or Petaluma. Numbers are far more difficult to remember.

"After you are in this area you get to know an Oakland number by its prefix. Unless the phone company plans to issue a directory with all these many new numbers that you have to look up all the time, you don't know where calls are coming from.

"It's very strange in some cities. I believe it is in New York and Cincinnati that you have to dial 10 numbers to get information."

Hayakawa said the Anti-Digit Dialing League was begun by May early this week with advertisements in personal columns of newspapers. The ads read:

"DIGIT DIALING DELIRIUMS? JOIN ANTI-DIGIT DIALING LEAGUE
ADDL UN 3-3076"

May was flooded with enthusiastic calls, Hayakawa said. Later May phoned Hayakawa for support, and yesterday's organizational meeting was held.

since Powers' death. They range from inebriacy commitment papers and court orders concerning Powers to a certificate of medical examiners and a pathological report giving a complete medical history on Powers.

"And I spent the whole day Thursday at the man's home in Inverness investigating the death," said Coroner Keaton. "I started from the beginning and brought the whole investigation to date.

Dr. Dufficy's criticism of Coroner Keaton followed the release by the coroner of information contained in a pathologist's report on Powers' death. Keaton disclosed that the pathologist's report on the death gave this "tentative diagnoses":

Alcoholism, paraldehyde, possible broncho-pneumonia, acute hemorrhagic gastritis, and pulmonary emphysema.

Stinson Man Faces Charges Of Battery

Stinson Beach property owner George Turner Marsh, 27, accused of hitting and kicking a mail truck driver in a running fight from Stinson Beach Post Office to Bolinas Post Office, faces a battery charge Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Dist. Atty. Roger P. Garety yesterday filed a criminal complaint against Marsh, charging him with two counts of battery against mailman William James Roberts, 32, of 505 Bonita, Sausalito.

Sheriff's Deputy William S. Christensen, who investigated the Monday morning scuffle, said witnesses saw Marsh drag or pull Roberts out of the mail truck at Bolinas, then kick him while the mail carrier was on the ground. Marsh wore heavy boots at the time.

Both Marsh and Roberts told the officer the argument started over a padlocked chain fence strung across the receiving entrance to Stinson Beach Post Office.

A Stinson Beach resident broke up that fight. Marsh told Deputy Christensen he drove home, changed into old clothes, then drove to Bolinas Post Office to wait for Roberts. When the mailman drove up in Bolinas, the fight resumed.

Roberts suffered a black eye, and wounds on his shoulder, face and head.

the consequences of the tests than the consequences of violating the court order."

The 30-foot trimarin sailed from its mooring place at Kappa's Yacht Harbor at Waldo Point while about 40 well-wishers stood by.

The Everyman then tacked to Marina Green in San Francisco, where about 75 more observers watched the boat turn and sail through the Golden Gate.

Robert Swann, who directed construction of the three-hulled motorless boat, yesterday refused to accept a copy of the court order, served on him by four United States deputy marshals as he worked on the boat in Sausalito.

Lazar, who took part in the San Francisco-to-Moscow Peace March, said:

"I see nothing illegal in our voyage, and I question the legality of any action to stop us."

Request for the restraining order was made to District Judge William T. Sweigert by Poole, who said he was acting on orders from Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy.

After completing a shakedown cruise to Bodega Bay earlier this week, the Everyman was declared ready for its 2,500-mile voyage to Christmas Island, estimated to take about three weeks.

The ship is equipped with two-way radios and food and water for 90 days.

St. Luke's Becomes Church In Special Rites Tomorrow

REV. RALPH SHANKS
Organizing pastor

St. Luke's Presbyterian Church in San Rafael will hold its official service of organization at 3 p.m. tomorrow, announced Rev. Ralph C. Shanks, organizing pastor.

Organization Rites will be conducted by the Presbytery of the Redwoods at the church site, 10 Bayview Drive near Point San Pedro Road. A commission appointed by the Presbytery will receive the charter members and the selection, ordination and installation of ruling elders and deacons will follow. Paul A. Streett, chairman of the nominating committee will present the list of nominees.

A sermon will be delivered by Rev. Robert D. Bulkley, general presbyter of the North Coastal Area.

St. Luke held its first worship service on Nov. 20, 1960, in the manse at 50 Las Casas Drive in Villa Real. Classes for children were held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Walker, next door to the manse and at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Dallas Wagner in Country Club Estates. In June, 1961, the congregation moved to the cottage on the knoll of the three acres purchased in Bayside Acres. The congregation is planning the erection of a new manse and permanent chapel on the site.

Beginning tomorrow through the summer, worship and church school sessions will be held simultaneously starting at 9:30 a.m. only, announced Rev. Shanks.

Between his high school and college career he attended the Academy of Advertising Art in San Francisco and later served in the Coast Guard for three years.

Land graduated from the San Anselmo seminary cum laude last year. He was president of his senior class and editor of the Dialogue, a student newspaper. This past year Land has undertaken independent graduate study in San Anselmo.

Atheists Get Conversion Credit

By LOUIS CASSELS
U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The great English essayist, G. K. Chesterton, who became a Christian late in life, once remarked that he owed his conversion to atheists.

The more he studied the arguments by which atheists sought to disprove the existence of God, Chesterton said, the more he felt that they had a pretty flimsy case. As a result, he said, "there arose in my mind the first wild doubts of doubt."

Russian cosmonaut Gherman Titov recently gave Americans an excellent demonstration of what Chesterton was talking about.

While visiting the Seattle World's Fair, Titov got into a discussion of religion. "I don't believe in God," he said. That statement was not surprising, since Titov is a dedicated young communist, and the nonexistence of God is one of the prime articles of communist faith.

Then Titov added, as if that clinched the case, that he had looked all around for God while he was orbiting the earth in his space capsule, and "I didn't find anyone there."

Anyone who thinks Titov was joking should note that Moscow Radio has been belaboring the same point, in great earnestness, for several months. The fact that Soviet cosmonauts didn't see God during their trips through space has become the chief theme of communist anti-religious propaganda.

Intelligent Christians may be inclined to dismiss this whole argument as too ludicrous for discussion. But it ought to be taken seriously, because it sheds a good deal of light on the reason why disbelief is so prevalent in the world today, not only among communists, but also among sincere and upright citizens of America and other free nations.

The reason is succintly stated by J. B. Phillips in his superb book, "Your God Is Too Small," published by the MacMillan Co., and currently available in paperback ($1.10).

"The trouble with many people today is that they have not found a God big enough for modern needs," says Phillips. "While their experience of life has grown in a score of directions, and their mental horizons have been expanded to the point of bewilderment by world events and by scientific discoveries, their ideas of God have remained largely static. It is obviously impossible for an adult to worship the conception of God that exists in the mind of a child of Sunday-school age, unless he is prepared to deny his own experience of life."

One of the most urgent tasks of the church in our day, Phillips believes, is to hold up for skeptics and half-hearted believers an authentic Christian concept of God who is at once the Ground of all being, the Creator and Sustainer of the whole vast universe which man is beginning feebly to explore, the Author of the incredibly complex laws which science is seeking dimly to understand, the Source of all truth, beauty and purpose — and who is yet, at the same time, so close to each of his human children, so full of loving kindness toward them, even in their waywardness, that the One who knew Him best could think of no human term which described Him better than "father."

The convinced atheist may find this concept of God incredible, too. But it is surely better for men to reject—or accept—a mature idea of God than to argue pointlessly over childish caricatures.

Nazarenes Get Officers

New officers of the Church of the Nazarene have been elected, Rev. Harold Bonner, pastor, announced today.

The officers, who will serve for a year, are as follows:

Trustees: Dick Williams, George Jeffords, George Tucker. Stewards: Barron Haney, Peter Paolino, Lena Phillips, Stan Thomas. Church school board: Rachel Caldwell, Ruth Haney, Ruth Brandt, Stella Onizuka.

Mrs. Barbara Baker, president of the Missionary Society; John Caldwell, president of the Young People's Society, and Kinne Terrell the superintendent of the Sunday school.

Clergy Now Come From Other Careers

SEWANEE, Tenn. — Episcopal clergymen come increasingly from other careers into the ministry, instead of moving directly from college to seminary to priesthood.

A survey of the current enrollment here at the School of Theology of the University of the South shows that backgrounds include:

Architecture, airlines security work, auto mechanics, banking, chemistry, finance, forestry, food brokering, government service, high school and college teaching, industrial design, industrial management, insurance, journalism, landscape design, law, the Methodist ministry, naval gunnery, personnel work, pharmacy, photography, public relations, printing management, retail business, research physiology, statistics, piloting for Royal Air Force and Royal Canadian Air Force, and service as U.S. Army and Navy officers.

CONTRIBUTIONS KEEP PRAYER ON TELEPHONE

An undenominational prayer-sermon by Rev. Paula Scott, minister of the Family Church of Marin in San Anselmo may be heard 24 hours per day on Dial-A-Prayer, announced Mrs. Sam Pettijohn, church member.

The religious service is possible only by contributions, explained Mrs. Pettijohn. The service's telephone bill is $26 per month, and newspaper advertisements are $2.50 per week, she said.

Dial-A-Prayer is GL 3-6204.

Bible Society Man Will Speak Tomorrow

Dr. Samuel Nelson, field representative of the American Bible Society, will be the guest speaker at a 7 p.m. service of the First Baptist Church of Corte Madera tomorrow, announced Rev. Gerald Moyer.

For several years Dr. Nelson was president of the Spanish American Baptist Seminary in Los Angeles. Following his lecture the Women's Missionary Society will serve refreshments.

Christian Science

Divine healing is a theme of the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Soul and Body" to be heard at Marin Christian Science services tomorrow. Matthew's account of the healing by Christ Jesus of the centurion's servant who was "sick with the palsy" will be included in the Scriptural readings.

KEEPING HUSBAND ALIVE

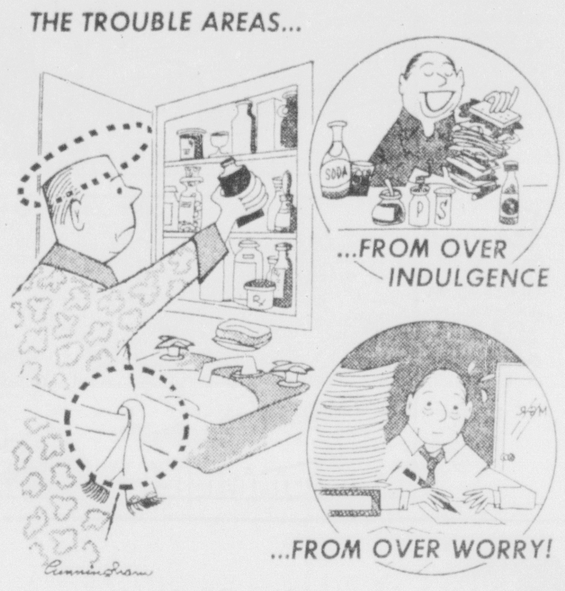

Is He Addicted To Medicine?

By KENNETH HUTCHIN, M.D.

When you see a man paying excess baggage at the airport because he has to take a suitcase full of patent medicines with him, you can be pretty sure that he could save himself money, worry, and pain by leaving them all at home.

A great many people who devote that amount of care to their stomachs have nothing wrong with them. Many are on self inflicted diets for their self inflicted stomach troubles. The measure of how much it suits them is that they have to take various medications immediately after their diet. A little later they have to take another medicine to counteract the effects of the medicine they have already inflicted on their stomachs, and so their life goes.

In some ways, stopping this habit is like stopping smoking. If you stop buying stomach medicines, you have nothing to take. "But, doctor," they may answer, "if I do not take my medicine I shall have all this pain." But sir, if you have all this pain and X-rays have proved that there is no reason for the pain, then I would like to suggest that the pain is in your mind, not in your stomach.

IT MAY BE that your husband has been told that his pain is due to spasms of the stomach. This may be true, but the spasm is due to his way of life. Or, he may have made up his mind that it is due to wind. Well, the wind can only get there if he swallows it. Gas is not produced in the stomach from the effects of fermentation or acidity.

Your husband must find out how and when he swallows all this air. You may find it difficult to believe that all this belching, all this pain and distention, are a result of swallowing air, but it is a fact. He may swallow air when he smokes, when he eats, and most likely, when he drinks. Some people swallow air when they breathe.

Worry will produce sustained loss of appetite.

Imagine the situation of a man suffering from nervous dyspepsia due to stress which is preventing his stomach from pouring out hydrochloric acid to digest his food; the level of hydrochloric acid does not rise, therefore the door to his small intestine remains closed.

He puts more alkali—the reverse of acid—into his stomach so that his door continues to remain tightly shut, and digestion is delayed further. He continues to feel uncomfortable so he takes more alkali and delays matters even more. No wonder he feels uncomfortable. His stomach may even go into a spasm in order to force open the valve into the duodenum so he has some pain. This makes him think he has an ulcer. He then begins to worry about his non-existant ulcer. So he takes more alkaline powder or more tablets to cure his ulcer.

Now this man has a very simple remedy for his troubles. He can have his case properly investigated so that he can be shown that he has no ulcer. His doctor can then tell him exactly what he can do with all his powders and pills and medicines. He can then go home and leave his stomach behind at the doctor's.

HAVE YOU EVER seen anyone red in the stomach? When a man is aggravated by anger, exasperation, or resentment, flushing is not limited to his face. His stomach flushes as well. So every time you see your husband red in the face with anger, remind him that he is red in the stomach as well.

Other things, aside from a state of aggravation, can cause the stomach to blush. There is a form of self-injury common among businessmen in which they hurl insult upon insult at their unfortunate stomachs. They are constantly eating too much of the wrong food and getting too little exercise. They smoke incessantly and drink too much alcohol, often on an empty stomach.

This prolonged over stimulation often results in peptic ulcers.

An ulcer is an area in which the mucous membrane lining of the stomach has broken down, so that the underlying tissues become exposed to the action of acid. Such an ulcer may be in the stomach or in the duodenum. If it is in the pain in the upper abdomen about half an hour after meals, due to the action of the acid secretions on the exposed tissues. This type of pain is relieved by taking alkaline stomach powders. If the ulcer is in the duodenum the pain is known as "hunger pain" because it occurs about half an hour before meals. It is caused by the fact that the previous meal, plus acid secretions, have passed through the valve into the duodenum where they irritate the ulcerated area. This type of pain is relieved by taking more food.

An ulcer patient may have a period of some weeks or months without any symptoms at all. Then, when he has some minor infection, like a cold, or when he is particularly overworked or overaggravated, or when he has neglected himself in some way, the symptoms will recur.

THE BODY IS always trying to heal these ulcers. If it were possible to protect the ulcerated area for some time, healing would take place rapidly. The next best thing is to reduce the amount of acid by avoiding everything that will stimulate its secretion, and at the same time to dilute whatever acid is present by constantly having food in the stomach, and by the aid of long acting alkaline medicines. In some cases an operation known as a partial gastrectomy is performed.

If your husband has an ulcer he must have bland, non-irritating foodstuffs every two hours in order to use up the acid in his stomach. Your doctor will order the diet, but it usually consists of four main meals and five extra feeds.

To cure his ulcer, your husband must first stop being easily aggravated, a luxury he cannot afford. Strong feelings are as bad for him as strong drink.

An excellent method of unseething bottled-up aggravation is to talk to oneself. You should encourage your husband to do this if you find yourself unable to listen to him without disagreeing with him. Talking to oneself is an age-old way of relieving pent-up ill feelings which it would be unwise to voice in the hearing of an employer, superior officer, or wife.

MARIN'S SOCIAL WHIRL

Samuel W. Gardiners Giving Large Cocktail Party May 29

By FLORENCE DONNELLY

The Samuel W. Gardiners of San Rafael are entertaining about 200 friends at a cocktail party Tuesday at the Meadow Club. The Gardiners recently jetted to Seattle to see the World's Fair. After that they rented a car and drove down the Columbia River Highway to Portland, Ore., and over to Mt. Hood. The road was blocked by a heavy fall of snow so they could not stay at Timberline Lodge as they had planned. They flew back from Portland.

A FAREWELL PARTY honoring Mrs. William Noon of San Anselmo was given recently by Mrs. W. Raymond Vizzard, formerly of Ross, at her San Francisco home. Mr. and Mrs. Noon and their son, Mark, are moving to San Diego June 15. It will be a business transfer and promotion for Bill, who has spent his entire life in Marin (his father, the late Mark Noon, was a long time and popular official at San Quentin Prison). Bill has been made manager of the San Diego office of Norbert Cronin and Co. The Noons have a home under construction in San Diego and have bought new furniture and furnishings for it.

The Noons, who have lived in the same house into which they moved 19 years ago, have sold it to Maj. William Gerard, USA ret, and his wife who live in San Francisco. Major Gerard is a close friend of Maj. Gen. William Dean, who was a prisoner of the Communists for nearly three years. General Dean, who was the speaker at the Lincoln Day luncheon of Marin Unit of Pro America, intends to write a book on his experiences in the Army.

Guests at Mrs. Vizzard's luncheon were Mesdames Noon, Ralph Alden, John Kyle, Robert McKendry, Watson Conner, Robert Cary, Leonard De Martin and Fred Sloat.

Mrs. McKendry will give a luncheon for Mrs. Noon June 1 and several other affairs are being arranged for Noons.

MRS. DAVID POLAK of Bayside Acres was elected president of the Philomath Club at its annual meeting at Mark Hopkins Hotel. The club is a cultural organization. Mrs. L. H. Hymans of Belvedere was elected recording secretary. Among others on the board are Mrs. Charles Rosenbaum, whose son, Charles Rosenbaum Jr. resides in San Rafael, Mrs. Stuart Greenberg, whose son, Stuart Greenberg Jr. resides in Greenbrae, and Mrs. Leon Morse, whose daughter, Mrs. Evan Hirsch, is a Sausalito resident.

WINE TASTING will highlight the annual fund raising luncheon of Sleepy Hollow Unit of Marin County Junior Theater at the Sleepy Hollow clubhouse. Guests will taste numerous unlabeled wines and attempt to identify them. Awards will be made to those who name the greatest number of wines correctly. After that Werner Lefebre of Christian Brothers Winery will speak on the distinguishing characteristics of wines.

Mrs. William Worrall and Mrs. Patrick Young are co-chairmen of the event. Assisting are Mesdames James Smith, Irwin Gold and John Dearborn. Mrs. James Kephart is taking reservations.

Mrs. Burton Milnes was recently elected president of the Sleepy Hollow unit. Serving with her are Mrs. Wallace Painter, vice president and workshop chairman; Mrs. Jack Everson, recording secretary; Mrs. Robert Keller, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Kyle Mauk, treasurer; Mrs. James Smith, historian; Mrs. Richard Godfrey, membership chairman, and Mrs. James Furlong, publicity chairman.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

One Of Most Important Things To Remember: Count Points

One of the most important things to remember about bridge is that each deck contains only four aces, four kings and so on. You're entitled to complain if you find a fifth queen in the deck.

South dealer
Both sides vulnerable

	NORTH ♠ A Q 2 ♡ 7 4 3 ◇ J 7 2 ♣ K J 9 6
WEST ♠ 10 8 3 ♡ 8 2 ◇ K Q 10 9 5 ♣ 7 4 2		EAST ♠ 9 7 5 4 ♡ A 10 9 6 ◇ 8 6 3 ♣ A 8
	SOUTH ♠ K J 6 ♡ K Q J 5 ◇ A 4 ♣ Q 10 5 3

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	All Pass

Opening lead — ◇ K

West opened the king of diamonds, and South won with the ace. He led a low spade to dummy's queen and returned a low heart from dummy.

NAIVE HOPE

East played low, naively hoping that South was planning a finesse and that West might win with the queen of hearts. As we shall see this would have been possible if there had been five queens in the deck.

As it happened, there was no finesse. South won a heart trick and immediately switched to clubs.

East took the ace of clubs and returned a diamond, but it was too late to defeat the contract. South could win three spades, one heart, two diamonds and three clubs.

SHOULD COUNT

East should have counted points as soon as the dummy appeared. When bidding notrump particularly most bridge players count 4 points for each ace, 3 for each king 2 for each queen and 1 for each jack. The opening bid of one notrump shows 16 to 18 points.

East could see 8 points in his own hand and 11 points in the dummy. Allowing declarer his minimum of 16 points the total for the three players was 35 points.

Since there are only 40 points in the entire deck, West could have only 5 points at most. The opening lead of the king of diamonds, obviously made from a suit headed by the K-Q, accounted for West's 5 points.

In short, West couldn't possibly have any high cards aside from his diamonds. If West held the queen of hearts the deck contained five queens instead of the normal four.

East should defeat the contract by stepping up with the ace of hearts immediately and returning a diamond. West would play low, allowing dummy's jack to win. South would have only eight tricks and would have to tackle clubs, whereupon East would take the ace of clubs and lead another diamond to give West the rest of the diamonds.

Today is Saturday, May 26, the 146th day of the year with 219 to follow in 1962.

The moon is in its last last quarter.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening star is Venus.

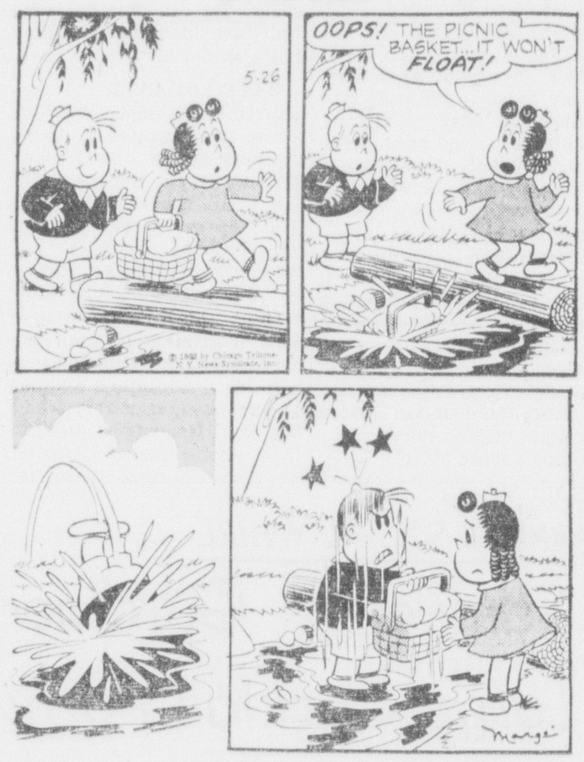

On this day in history:

In 1868, President Andrew Johnson was acquitted of impeachment proceedings in the Senate on charges of "high crimes and misdemeanors."

In 1958, Samuel Cardinal Stritch, archbishop of the Chicago Roman Catholic Archdiocese, died in Rome.

A thought for the day: Russian novelist Dostoyevsky said: "Men reject their prophets and slay them, but they love their martyrs and honor those whom they have slain."

Why Doesn't Giant Mound Staff Retaliate In The Bean Ball War?

Why the squawk?

Remember the other night when Willie Mays got "dusted off" by Stan Williams, L. A. Dodgers' ace righthander?

CONNOLLY

Well, there is a story behind the story of the attempted "beaning" of Mays. It may not be clubby to reveal it, but newspapermen are not supposed to create news, just report it.

You never saw the "Say Hey Kid" of the Giant outfield squawk so long and so loud. And his protests were of no avail to the plate umpire who claimed Williams was "wild" and not intentionally trying to frighten him or clip his whiskers.

But it now develops that Willie was squawking and somewhat concerned, because he heard, along the grapevine route, that even pitcher Jack Sanford would no longer go along with retaliating tactics in beanball flurries.

One oldtime pitcher, when asked why it was that Sanford never brushed back any of the Dodger sluggers, explained it thusly: "Did it ever occur to you that Sanford refuses to be the only pitcher with the Giants with spunk enough to "dust off" opposing batters?

"IT IS quite possible, said my informer, "that Sanford decided to no longer carry the torch (alone) for his batters, unless the other staff members agreed to follow the same methods.

"Sanford, shocked from accidentally winging young Hubbs, the Cubs' second sacker a few weeks ago, feels if he is the only pitcher involved in bean ball flurries, he'd just as soon forget the whole plan."

So there's the story behind the story of Willie May's squawk. You might think it is an indication of unrest or namby pamby stuff by the pitchers. But if you check over the list of veteran pitchers you'll find only a few of 'em might be classified in Sanford's category.

Youngsters like Duffalo, Bolin and Perry are not expected to challenge opposing hitters to curb beanballing. But vets like Don Larsen, Stu Miller, Juan Marichal, Billy Pierce and Billy O'Dell could be those refusing to join in retaliating beanball tactics.

AS FAR as this observer is concerned, Jack Sanford would have been justified if he knocked down Tommy Davis, Dodger slugger, just for his own protection. But Jack refused to become involved in what he thought might make him a "beanball goat" for the entire Giant staff.

It strikes me as a rather unclubby alliance on the part of Giant pitchers to sidetrack a beanball controversey when the opposition starts it.

In the past, when it was apparent that a pitcher was deliberately "throwing at" batters, the other team's pitchers did likewise. It sort of evened up the hazardous business and usually the teams joined in a truce and quit bean balling one another.

WHEN PEOPLE say nobody can hit Willie Mays with a THROWN BALL, they forget this is Willie's 11th year in harness. Today he isn't as agile, nor as fast as he used to be. His reflexes are not as sharp either. I've noticed Willie doesn't fall down nearly as graciously or as easily as he used to do. He hits the dirt real hard and comes up ruffled to his eyebrows.

In some quarters the constant effect of being exposed to the beanball is blamed for Willie's recent batting slump.

I'm not advocating the beanball, but I'm a firm believer that if the opposition chooses to use it, the Giant pitching staff should unanimously consent to the same tactics.

From my TV chair the other evening, I'd solemnly swear Stan Williams was trying to hit Willie Mays on the whiskers. At least he deliberately knocked him down twice.

And it appears strange that his "control" was only off when Mays was at bat. The other Giants never suffered from his wildness.

Pierce Well On Way Toward 20 Wins

By DICK BARNES

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco Manager Alvin Dark admits he "didn't know what to expect" when veteran American Leaguer Billy Pierce came to the Giants this spring.

All the 35-year-old lefthander has done is win seven games in seven starts—the best record in the National League and a prime reason why the Giants are 1½ games ahead of the pack.

The New York Mets, who did the Giants no favors by dropping three straight to second-place Los Angeles, moved into Candlestick Park today for the opener of a three-game series.

Jay Hook (3-3) started against San Francisco's Billy O'Dell (5-2). A double-header is scheduled tomorrow.

Pierce won again last night, stopping Philadelphia 10-7. He needed relief help from Stu Miller with one out in the ninth—but for seven innings the amiable, balding hurler stifled the Phils with his full repertoire of pitches.

"Let him pitch six or seven good innings—that's fine at his age," says Dark, who tries to give Pierce five or six days rest between starts. Pierce has been knocked out in four of his victories, but has given the opposition more than three runs only when Giants' bats were booming.

"That's one thing I have to watch," Pierce comments. "I have to be sure not to relax when I get ahead."

Pierce, more than one-third along the path to 20 victories with the season only one-quarter gone, won't set any goals except a San Francisco pennant.

"After the spring I had, my goal at first was just to go two or three innings," he laughs. "Sure, every pitcher would like to win 20, but I mainly want us to win the pennant." Pierce is also just four wins shy of career victory No. 200.

Tony Gonzalez' eighth-inning home run with one aboard, and Johnny Callison's three-run blast in the ninth chased Pierce last night. But home runs by Willie Mays and Orlando Cepeda, plus four gift runs, had earlier put the Giants far ahead.

Mays' home run in the third inning with two aboard was San Francisco's first hit off loser Jack Hamilton. But the Phils' starter had walked two men and thrown wildly on a bunt to set up the big inning. Another walk by Hamilton preceded Cepeda's four-bagger in the fifth inning.

The home runs were No. 14 for the co-league leaders. And their singles wrapped up the four-run sixth, in which the Phils committed three errors and two other Giants received free trips to first base.

Add Banks To Friday Jinx List

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Baseball's Friday jinx has struck again. The latest victim —Ernie Banks.

Banks, Chicago Cubs' homer hammerer, became the third top star hurt in a strange series of accidents on successive Friday nights when he was beaned and suffered a concussion during the Cubs' 2-1 loss to Cincinnati.

The 31-year-old infielder was knocked unconscious in the ninth inning when a pitch from Moe Drabowsky hit Banks just below his protective helmet. Ernie collapsed at the plate, was carried from the field on a stretcher and rushed to a hospital.

A spokesman at the hospital said examination showed the two-time National League most valuable player did not have a skull fracture. Banks was reported in fair condition and scheduled for further tests today.

FRIDAY JINX

Last Friday, Mickey Mantle of the New York Yankees collapsed while running to first base and suffered a tear in a thigh muscle expected to sideline him for a month. The Friday before Minnie Minoso of St. Louis fractured his skull running into a fence while chasing a fly ball. He has been placed on the disabled list.

Meanwhile first-place San Francisco thumped Philadelphia 10-7, as Billy Pierce won his seventh without a loss, and remained 1½ games ahead of the Los Angeles Dodgers who clobbered the New York Mets 17-8. Hank Aaron drove in five runs with two homers and a double in Milwaukee's 11-8 victory over St. Louis and Pittsburgh edged Houston 4-3 in 13 innings.

In the American League, Cleveland climbed into a tie for first place with New York by beating Washington 2-1 while the Yankees were losing to Detroit 5-4. Chicago's White Sox edged Minnesota 5-4; Baltimore belted Boston 9-5, and the Los Angeles Angels defeated Kansas City 5-4.

PHILS SCORE — Philadelphia outfielder John Callison slides safely across plate in first inning against Giants last night. Catcher Ed Bailey couldn't quite get the ball on Callison as the Phils took an early 1-0 lead, only to lose 10-7. Callison had tripled and scored on sacrifice fly. (AP Wirephoto)

Tam Golfer Wins Junior Tourney

By firing a 79, best score of the day, Tim Higgins of Tamalpais High School yesterday won the championship of the San Rafael Junior Chamber of Commerce's junior golf tournament at Peacock Gap Golf and Country Club, San Rafael.

The 79 following his opening round of 80 gave him a 159 low gross score for the 36-hole competition. He thus qualifies for the junior chamber's state championship tournament next month.

Higgins nosed out Novato High School ace Robb Shultz for the title. Shultz shot an 84 yesterday following his opening round 77 for a 160 total. Two players tied for third — San Rafael's Bill Wallace 77-84—161 and Novato's Barry Hachmeyer 78-83—161.

The tourney's low net championship was won by Steve Varney with a 129. Three tied for low net runner-up honors — Craig Ballentine, Terry Young and Phil Hiaring, all with 133.

From the desk of

Louis Concilio

ULCERVILLE OR KOOKSVILLE

Dear ole mom and dad provided me with at least two basic requisites for survival in this crazy auto business. The first is my Italian-type hot temper with a built-in escape valve of desk-shattering tantrums of extremely brief duration. The other is a sense of humor which permits me to see the comical or ludicrous aspect of almost any given problem or situation that may occur.

IT is the latter trait which can be credited with staving off the common occupational disease of ulcers and the milk-and-crackers bit. It has, however, labeled me as a prize "kook" in the automotive circle. If I had my "druthers" this is the route for me.

Many people, incidents, situations, and even problems present certain aspects calculated to tickle the funny bone. Some of these can be briefly outlined in this space, limited by the expense-minded eye of my boss and the vagaries of the good editor who might continue the last two paragraphs in the "Situations Wanted" column.

Salesmen who spend more time conning the salesmanager than selling the product and the customer amuse me. Employees who embezzle not money but time from their employers by sandbagging work in hidden drawers, and who rise in self-rightous indignation upon discovery and dismissal bring me an amused chuckle.

Our competitors in Ford and other makes who bleat out at Ames Ford from every angle, deploring our policy of selling at such small markups to their factory representatives, while shouting in print to a hopefully gullible public that they will sell for less than we do, are an amusing irritant, much like the yapping puppy nipping at the Great Dane.

Each day provides more grist for the mill. It is a nice way to spend the time. To enjoy your job is more important than money. (Hear this well, grocer and landlord.)

If this be kooksville, I've joined the club.

Four Marin Semi-Pro Teams Play Tomorrow

Four Marin teams take the field tomorrow in the county's first semi-professional baseball games of the new season.

Billings-Hutchison Builders, San Rafael's new team, plays its first contest tomorrow against the tough Benicia Merchants at Albert Field, San Rafael, 1:30 p.m. The Tiburon Pelicans host the San Francisco Indians, 2:30 p.m., Judge Field, and the Ongaro Plumbers will be hosted by the Mill Valley Merchants, 1:30 p.m., Project 17.

Starting pitcher assignment for the Builders is a toss-up between Fred Thurman, Jack Sovereign, Bob Ostaggi and Frank Burch, announced manager Joe Anselmo. San Rafael's redhot lineup includes several of Marin's top prep players this year and last: Rich Curry, second base; Jerry Smith, shortstop; Jerry Daniele, center field; Art Quinn, first base; Bill Gallagher, right field; Steve Joses, left field; Joe Hebel, catcher, and Terry Jarcik, third base.

The Pelicans will start against the Indians with either hurler Fred DeMartini or Buzz Wensloff. Tiburon had the best record in the county last year with 13-6. The Pelicans will field younger bloods this year. Among the ex-little league rookie starters are Dave Sederquist, Frank Ubhaus and Bob Melbern.

Probable starting battery for the Plumbers will be veterans Bob DeRosa on the mound and Bill Buffalow catching, announced manager Bob Johnston. Both he and Mill Valley headman Bob Selna plan to substitute freely tomorrow to assess their rosters.

Mrs. Steele Wins Marin Golf Title

Mrs. Robert Steele of San Rafael, who served the Marin Golf Club as women's captain last year, tacked a new honor onto her golf record yesterday.

Mrs. Steele defeated Mrs. James O'Donnell 5 and 4 to win the club's handicap championship.

In other flights:

Second Flight—Mrs. Gordon Wardlaw d. Mrs. Ed Abramson, 4-2; Third—Mrs. Hal White d. Mrs. Mel Bleadon, 2-1; Fourth—Mrs. Pat Quigley d. Mrs. Art Schallock, 5-4; Fifth—Mrs. Jack Morrison d. Mrs. Henry Helbig, 4-3.

NICK KOBSEFF TO SPONSOR NOVATO TEAM

Nick Kobseff of Rancho Nicasio has agreed to sponsor Novato's new semi-professional baseball team, announced manager Bill Kline today.

A team nickname is yet to be decided. One commentator suggested "The Novato Nicks."

The club will hold tryouts tomorrow at the Novato High diamond at 1 p.m. and June 3, at 10 a.m. A player of any age may seek a position on the club, said Kline, organizing manager.

Tryouts Tomorrow For Hub Merchants

Manager Pete Maggi will continue tryouts for his San Anselmo Merchants semi-pro baseball club tomorrow, he announced today.

Players interested in seeking a position with the club should report to Maggi at the Drake High School diamond in San Anselmo at 1 p.m.

The Merchants are members of the new Marin Semi-Pro League which will begin on June 10.

Cushley Tops M.V. Golf In First Round

The second round of the Mill Valley Golf Club tournament gets underway tomorrow with Ed Cushley at the head of the list with an 18-hole total of 71.

Cushley rebounded on the second nine last Sunday after he was led by Jack Hurley who fired a one-over par 34 on the front nine, two under Cushley's 36. But Cushley picked up three strokes with a sizzling 35 on the back nine, and Hurley slipped to a 38 for a 72 total.

Other low gross swingers in the annual 54-hole medal play were Elwood Frink, 35-38—73; Dil Hughes 36-39—75 and Bill Hogan, 37-38—75.

Low net leaders were Frank Lyman, 75-18—57; John Meeman, 88-30—58; Keeler Nash, 78-20—58; Grant Wyatt, 76-16—60; Frank George, 86-26—60.

The final round in both the medal and net fields will be June 23.

Campbell, Ragan Share The Lead

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Hoosier Joe Campbell, playing a familiar course, and charging Dave Ragan of Sun City, Fla., shared the lead today in the 72-hole $50,000 "500" Festival Golf Tournament with 11-under-par 131s.

Bob Rosburg of Portland, Ore., who matched Campbell's early leading 63 Thursday, was only one stroke back after a 69 yesterday.

Bill Casper, who set the Indianapolis Motor Speedway course record of 62 two years ago, and long-hitting, George Bayer were challenging with 9-under-par 133s for two days' work.

The Broncos won the opener of the best two-of-three series 6-1 last night behind the four-hit pitching performance of Bob Garibaldi. Santa Clara rallied for five runs in the second inning on two singles, a pair of walks and two Fresno errors.

Winner of the series hosts Oregon State University June 1-2 for the right to take part in the NCAA finals starting June 11 in Omaha, Neb.

John Boccabella of San Anselmo, Santa Clara's batting champion for the season, went hitless in four times at bat last night.

State Willing To Landscape San Rafael Entrance If—

The entrances to San Rafael from the 101 Freeway are neither utilitarian nor aesthetic.

It isn't easy for visitors to find their way onto or off of the freeway. And there is nothing that might be mistaken about beauty or attractiveness about it.

Now the State Division of Highways is in the process of planning a new expanded freeway, with more serviceable service roads, through San Rafael.

Most of the length of the freeway through the city will qualify for landscaping. And the new approaches presumably will make it much easier for visitors to get into or out of our town.

Perhaps at long last we are on the threshold of a much needed change in the "face" our county seat city pesents to passing travelers.

But there is, as the old saw says, a fly in the ointment.

Gene O'Conner and his San Rafael Beautiful Committee have ascertained that the stretch of freeway extending from the foot of the Skyway at Irwin Street along Francisco Boulevard to the San Quentin Overpass will not — as things stand now—qualify for landscaping.

It seems there is a lapse in the San Rafael billboard control ordinance which permits offending signs along that section of the freeway.

If the city wants the Francisco Freeway strip landscaped by the State Division of Highways, the city will have to tighten its billboard controls to meet the state's requirements.

In a meeting with state highway representatives the other day, the San Rafael Beautiful group was advised that the new freeway will be so designed as to have a 15-foot strip between shoulder and fence on each side available for landscaping.

Also, in the center dividing area, a 6-foot wide strip will be suitable for appropriate planting.

And the open areas around and under the overpass structures at each end of the Francisco strip likewise would accommodate landscape planting.

All that O'Conner and his committee have to do now to win this landscaping for San Rafael is to persuade the city council to adopt the necessary amendments to the billboard control ordinance.

We wish them speedy success.

MARIN LOOKS AT POLITICS

Gardiner 'Teams' Seek Control Of Demo County Central Committee

By CHAPIN A. DAY

'CHIP' DAY

We've previously noted in this column the unusual and healthy competition this year for seats on the county central committees. There is competition in all five of the Democratic districts and in three of the five Republican.

This is a healthy situation, because the county central committee is the official voice of the political parties on the local level. It is coordinator of party activities, whether for candidates in an election, fund raising or other. It is the official contact for office holders to their party on a county level and, as such, is often the clearing house for patronage appointments. And it is directly connected with the State Central Committee which performs similar functions on a statewide basis.

The central committees are legal entities, set up under the laws of the state. Their members are all elected by the party voters, making them in fact party officeholders and representatives of the party members in that particular county.

It is this which has led to a spirited battle now being waged in the Democratic Party.

Samuel W. Gardiner, several times chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee, believes the Democratic central committee is representative of the county's Democratic clubs, but not of the county's Democrats. So he did something about it. He urged some of his friends to run for the county committee.

And now he's out to see that they get elected.

Gardiner has prepared two mailings, one each to the Democrats in the First and Second Supervisorial Districts. These mailings carry the names of five candidates out of 10 in the First and seven out of 15 in the Second. These candidates "endorse each other and solicit your vote for us as a team."

"It's not that I have anything against the clubs," Gardiner declared, "I'm in favor of them and have been a member ever since they were first organized. But the people they have been electing to the central committee don't represent anybody, certainly not the Democratic voters of Marin."

We asked if his "teams" represented the voters better.

"Ten times as well. These are people who know the people of Marin and have been active in Democratic work, with the single exception of my son," he declared.

But some of the club members are more than a little upset by the situation. First they see themselves "spending money electing the committee when we should be using it to elect our candidates." They estimate it might cost as much as $2,000 for a proper mailing campaign.

They're also upset that Gardiner is challenging the clubs, and some are irked because Gardiner's "teams" don't include any women. And they say the "teams" are largely inactive or never active in party affairs.

Some are inferring that Gardiner has been discontented with the party since he failed to be appointed to an appeals court vacancy last year. They say he wants his "team" elected so he can become county chairman and run party operations here.

Not so, says Gardiner, "I am not a candidate for chairman, I will not accept if it is offered to me, and I will not serve if I am elected." That ought to clear that up.

Why does he want the team effort then?

"Some of the Democratic clubs, not so much those in Marin, have been coming out with way left resolutions, like criticizing the President for resuming atomic testing. These don't represent the thinking of the majority of Democratics. I'd like to stop such resolutions," says Gardiner.

But how can the central committee stop club resolutions?

"It can't, of course, but it can pass its own resolutions opposing these far-out ones and as far as the official representatives of the party speak what Democratics think about these things."

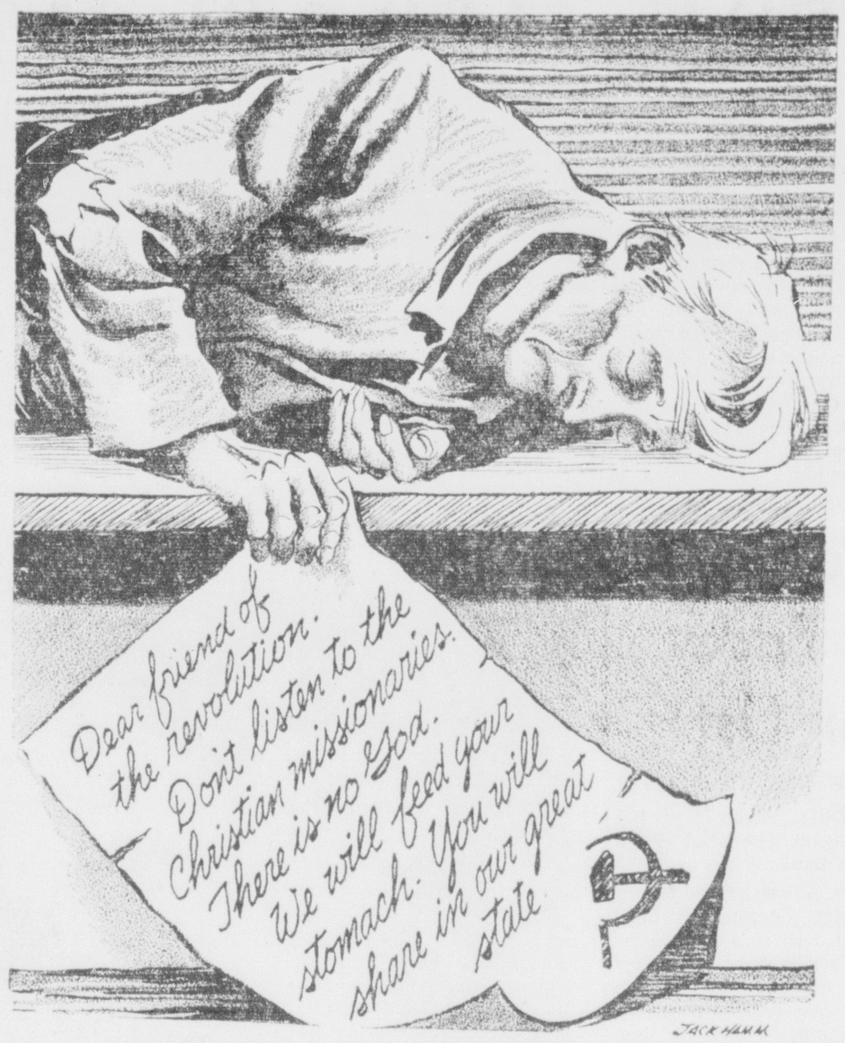

And that's the party battle the voters will settle June 5.

Time To Apply Ability To Liberty

EDITOR,
Independent-Journal:

The position of those of us who oppose organizations such as Women For Peace, is often misunderstood. Because I have stated my belief in the necessity for military preparedness, Mrs. Burnett, in her letter of May 18, erroneously concluded that I believe "that reliance on military means and a willingness to fight will solve the problem."

I do believe, however, that the $50 billion a year arms budget, if coupled with a firm stand against Communist imperialistic expansion, will buy us the time to solve the problem. I do not subscribe to the "Better Red Than Dead" philosophy of Bertrand Russell. I see no reason why we should be either one, for if we, as the bastion of the free world, have the moral integrity, the strength of purpose, and the will to survive as free citizens of a democratic republic, then there is no problem that we cannot solve, Communism not excepted.

We are not predestined to survive as a nation, and our ability to do so depends upon the ability of our citizens to understand the true nature of the Communist threat. In my opinion, the women in these peace movements do not understand Communist tactics or propaganda techniques or they would not support these dubious organizations.

The military can give us the time to find a solution, but the final battles will be waged in the minds of men. What greater opportunity for the intellectual than this?

After 30 years in the foggy wilderness of far left field, wouldn't this be an opportune moment for the intellectuals to forsake the philosophies of C. Wright Mills, Bertrand Russell, Arthur Schlesinger Jr., and addle-brained psuedo-intellectuals of similar persuasion, and to apply their considerable abilities, to the problem at hand, i.e., the preservation of a free society threatened by dictatorial Communist imperialism.

(NOTE: Reader Halm enclosed a Seattle Times article telling of the arrest of 15 juveniles, eight boys and seven girls all from "good" homes, for going joyriding in a stolen automobile. The boys were from 13 to 15 years old, the girls all 15. "These children have not applied the law to themselves," the judge said. "They had to make a decision and they failed." And he told them, "You must decide now what your values will be and follow through." He also admonished the children's parents to "retain absolute control on the hours, activities and companions" of their children. "If you can't exercise this control, I urge you to return them to us," the judge declared.)

BE FAIR ABOUT IT

Does your job suffer because you spend too much time complaining and too little in fulfilling the responsibilities you are being paid for?

Then listen to this advice from Elbert Hubbard:

"If you work for a man, in Heaven's namt, work for him.

"If he pays you wages which supply you bread and butter, work for him; speak well of him; stand by him and stand by the institution he represents.

"If put to a pinch, an ounce of loyalty is worth a pound of cleverness. If you must vilify . . . resign your position . . . but as long as you are part of the instiution do not condemn it."

In short, show the same fairness to your employer that you would expect from those on your payroll if you happened to be on the hiring end.

Strive to correct legitimate grievances, to be sure. But recognize also your obligation before both God and man to put in a dollar's worth of cheerful effort for every dollar you take out in a paycheck.

Grand Jury Studies Vets' Exemption; Blondes Really Do Have More Fun

This new grand jury really seems to be tax conscious.

They tell me a committee is quietly studying this business of veterans' tax exemptions. Seems there are many vets who claim exemptions although they aren't eligible because they have more property than the law allows.

DO BLONDES really have more fun than brunettes and redheads?

"Definitely," says a vivacious young secretary in the city hall. She ought to know. Since she's been here, she's been a redhead—a deep coppery red. Then suddenly this week, she shows up for work as "natural" a blonde as you ever saw.

The boss walked in the first morning and immediately backed out the door. Thought he was in the wrong office.

SPEAKING OF blondes, there's a striking one registered in a local guest house (run by the sheriff) who has talents you wouldn't suspect at first glance (or even the second glance).

Realizing she's in for a long stay, she's taken up painting and art. Some of the scrolls and mosaic work she turns out from her cell are almost professional.

ONE THING you can say about the San Francisco Giants, they aren't grandstand players. Just ignore them for a while and they proceed to wallop every club that comes along.

But just give them some attention. Get home early from work, gulp down supper, take a shower and relax on the couch for an evening of pleasure on the TV screen. And pffft! They fall down and play dead.

You vow you'll never watch 'em on TV again. But next night, you just gotta take another peek, and you find yourself glued to the bitter end. Another evening ruined.

YOU STILL haven't heard the last of those complaints against the new all-digit phone dialing system that crept into Marin.

Just the other day, attorney John G. Buresh was telling us about how one of his youngsters called up a classmate to consult about homework and got a local bar on the line. This all-number dialing violates "our right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," the barrister fumed.

Now we're not one to complain about every little change made in the name of progress. But after trying this all-number dialing for several weeks, we've come to the conclusion that this is the type of thing that gives people neuroses. You get inferiority complex.

In the good old days of B.C. (before changeover), we could remember and rattle off a dozen phone numbers. We could look a phone straight in the eye, whiz the dial around with the confidence of a complete master. But in this modern A.D. (all digit) era, we cock an unsure finger at the phone, squint back and forth between book and dial, then wait in trepidation to see who's gonna answer.

Well, I guess that's the price of progress. Progress?

WALTER LIPPMANN

Despite 'Der Alt,' Coalition Opposes Franco-German Europe

WASHINGTON — I have previously outlined Gaullist ideas of a reorganized Europe led by France and Germany —in which Great Britain and the U.S. would have no part. French problems of instability involved seem balanced, in part, by an educated population.

But German instability has profounder consequences. Dr. Adenauer's retirement cannot be far off. Under his iron leadership West Germany followed his foreign policy, but it is improbable that there is any successor whom the parties and factions will similarly follow.

The Franco-German combination, keystone of Gen. de Gaulle's policy, will no doubt remain. But I find it hard to think from what I learned in Berlin and Bonn that the existing policy will be followed with the same discipline, inflexibility and dogmatism.

I SAY THIS because I am persuaded that West Germany —defeated, divided from the rest of Germany, and still haunted by the memories of Nazism—has not yet achieved the kind of sovereignty and self-assurance which enables it to make its own national policy. West Germany has made a brilliant economic recovery. In world politics it is not a principal power.

It is the object of the diplomacy of other powers. Its inner life is pushed and pulled from the outside. All Germany is the object of the great conflict between the Soviet Union and the Atlantic Alliance. West Germany itself is the object of the conflict within the Atlantic Alliance as to whom shall lead the West.

Adenauer is aware that these conflicting external pressures work within Germany. Because of them he is insecure and feels that the least risk inflexibility and standing pat.

THE "HARD LINE," de Gaulle's specialty these days, is designed primarily to keep the Germans from straying from the Franco-German combination, to keep them from working with Americans and British to find an accomodation about Berlin, or—always a possibility for the Germans —of going along with Dr. Kroll towards a larger Russo-German deal.

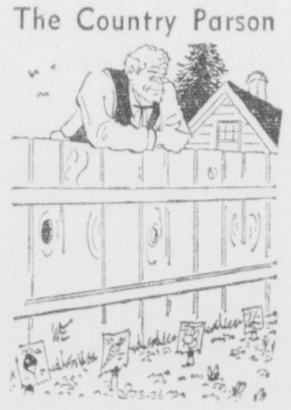

Opposed to the exclusive and restrictive de Gaulle-Adenauer-Europe, there is a liberal party within the whole Common Market area. Its leaders are Jean Monnet himself, Foreign Minister Spook of Belgium; Dr. Hallstein, chairman of the Commission of the European Economic Community, and leading spirits of the present Italian coalition.

In Germany, men belong to this party like Erhard, who may be Adenauer's successor; leading big German industrialists, Free Democrats on the right and Social Democrats on the left.

SOME OF THEM want a more federated Europe than they are likely to get. It is to them that de Gaulle referred when he spoke of "Utopian construction."

A federated Europe may well be a Utopian idea, but what matters practically is that the men and grounds named are all of favorable to British membership and adamant in support of the Atlantic Alliance.

Marines Man Defense Line In The Land Of Old Siam

By TOM HENSHAW
AP Newsfeature Writer

Once it was Lae and Palau and Iwo Jima, names that recall the landings and battles of World War II.

Then it was Pusan and Inchon and Panmunjom, which hark back to the Korean War.

Now it's Udon and Ubon and Nakhon Ratchasima.

Those are names that may soon be familiar. They are towns in eastern Thailand where last week U.S. troops moved in to help the Thais repel possible invasion by Communists from neighboring Laos.

Eastern Thailand, which some 5,000 American GIs will call home for an indefinite period, is a rather bleak, isolated plateau which geographers classify as a tropical grassland.

Its people, called Thais, are distantly related to the Chinese. They make a valiant but barely successful effort to grow rice and cotton. They do a better job of raising hogs and cattle.

It's a warm land, where the temperature rarely drops below 60 degrees. It's a relatively dry land compared with other sections of Southeast Asia—only 30 inches of rainfall in a year—but during the June-October monsoon season it is subjected to floods.

The chief river of eastern Thailand is the Mekong, which rises in the mountains of Tibet and flows 2,600 miles to the sea in South Viet Nam. Its delta is one of the greatest rice growing areas in the world.

For more than 500 miles the Mekong is the boundary between Thailand and strife-torn Laos. It's along the Mekong that U.S. troops will stand guard on the rim of the free world.

Here are some of the places you can expect to be hearing about during the next few weeks:

BANGKOK—The capital of Thailand, with its population of more than 1.5 million, is about the size of Detroit. Only four cities in the United States are larger. Much of the population lives on boats in the Chao Phraya River, Thailand's most important stream.

Bangkok is quite cosmopolitan, with a gay night life. Strangest to Western eyes are its ancient pagodas topped by long, sharp spikes designed to keep evil spirits away, and its boxing matches in which anything goes, feet, elbows and knees as well as fists.

A hundred years ago it was the home of King Mongkut of the novel "Anna and the King of Siam" and the Broadway Musical "The King and I." The current ruler, King Phumiphol, plays a jazz saxophone and once wrote a song called "Blue Night" for a New York musical.

NAKHON RATCHASIMA—About 150 miles northeast of Bangkok and connected to the capital by a modern asphalt highway, Nakhon Ratchasima is the gateway to northeast Thailand. It is connected to most of the important northeast cities by all-weather roads.

Most important, it is linked by railroads to Udon, which probably will be the northern anchor of the U.S. defense line, and Ubon, which probably will be the southern bastion. A battle group of the 27th U.S. Infantry is camped 50 miles away.

Thus, Nakhon Ratchasima, also called Korat, whose ancient walls are reminders of its past glories as a fortress, will become the key supply point for troops stationed along the Thai-Laotian border about 250 miles away. It's also an important trading center with a population of about 21,000.

UDON—Pronounced OO'don and sometimes called Udon Thani, it is a city of about 12,000 that promises to become the northern strong point on the U.S. defense line. It lies in the midst of a not very productive farming area devoted to the growing of rice, cotton and sugar cane.

UBON—A trading center on the Mun River and probably the southern anchor of the U.S. defense line. It has about 10,000 people who plant rice, cotton and tobacco, weave cloth and raise hogs and cattle.

SAKHON NAKHON—A town of about 6,000 located 85 miles east of Udon. The road between Sakhon Nakhon and Udon is now the site of an encampment of 1,400 U.S. Marines. (Nakhon, incidentally, is Thai for "town" so simply the name "Sakhon" may occasionally be used.)

NONG HAN—A village, population unavailable, about 20 miles east of Udon and 40 miles south of Vientiane, the anti-Communist capital of Laos. Some 1,600 U.S. Marines are encamped at Nong Han.

FINAL DECISION

Israel's Verdict On Eichmann Due In Just 3 Days

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

JERUSALEM, Israel — In three days the state of Israel concludes its case against Adolf Eichmann, the man it has accused and found guilty of being Hitler's willing tool in the slaughter of six million European Jews.

From April to August last year, Israel presented its case, heard Eichmann's defense — that he was a simple soldier following orders — and found him guilty. In December, sentence was passed that he be "hanged by the neck until dead." In March, for six days, five supreme court judges heard defense counsel Dr. Robert Servatius argue that Israel had no legal right to try and carry out judgment on Eichmann.

Now, on Tuesday, the high court is to give its decision. It will be the final judicial decision in a case that began on May 11, 1960, when three young Jewish commandoes kidnaped Eichmann in Buenos Aires, where he had been hiding under an assumed name, and had him flown secretly to Israel.

It is regarded as practically certain the supreme court judges will uphold the verdict and sentence by unanimous vote.

If he loses the appeal as anticipated, Eichmann will have no further recourse in Israeli law except an appeal for clemency to President Itzhak Ben-Zvi. Servatius has announced such a request will be made but no one expects the president to intervene.

Then all that will remain, barring some unpredictable move by Servatius, will be announcement of the time and place for the hanging.

The place is expected to be Ramle Prison near Tel Aviv, where Eichmann has been held, and the time within the next four to eight weeks.

When he stands in his bullet-proof, half-glass cage to hear the appeal verdict Tuesday morning, Eichmann may be making his last public appearance. Israel already has announced the execution will be private, with possibly one newsman present to confirm for the world that the sentence had been carried out.

Whatever happens Tuesday or thereafter, Eichmann is expected to accept his fate calmly. He had had no illusions of what awaited him since the day in Buenos Aires when he confessed his identity to his commando captors, agreed to return to Israel and gave them a written statement saying, "I want at last to achieve inner peace."

In his recent weeks of captivity, Eichmann has been visited frequently by Rev. and Mrs. William Hull. They are Canadians. Hull attended all sessions of the Eichmann trial and the appeal as representative of the Protestant clergy in Israel.

It was Hull's idea that Eichmann should see a minister. Servatius carried the proposal to his client and just before the appeal was heard in March, Eichmann agreed to Hull's visits. Mrs. Hull speaks German and has been the interpreter at the meetings, conducted by microphones through soundproof and bulletproof glass.

Although Hull has not said it in such words, he obviously has been baffled by Eichmann's impenetrability. "If we succeed in our objective of convincing the condemned man to accept Jesus as the Savior," the minister said recently, "it should bring about a complete change in his life, or what there is left of it."

The prisoner's only other visitor at Ramle Prison has been his wife, Vera, whom he had not seen since he was abducted. This meeting April 29, also had its strange aspects, according to prison informants.

Eichmann was calm throughout. If he felt any emotion, he showed none. Mrs. Eichmann was outwardly calm until it was time to leave, when she broke into tears and "Eichmann calmed her."

It was at this meeting that Eichmann was reported to have told his wife he had come to the decision "that anti-Semitism is wrong, and one must diverge from it."

And that "anti-Semitism was the fatal mistake and the great error of the Third Reich. . . A great catastrophe happened to the Jewish people and I greatly doubt if this can ever be remedied."

Richardson: Field General

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lt. Gen. James L. Richardson Jr., the new U.S. field commander in Thailand, has the reputation as a "quiet, scholarly soldier and a gentleman down to his fingerprints."

Richardson

He also is regarded as an expert on jungle guerrilla warfare where little attention is paid to fingerprints. Richardson learned his guerrilla lessons 17 years ago in another part of Southeast Asia—the Philippines.

The Nebraskan, 52, moves to his new job from what is becoming the Army's maid-in-waiting assignment. However, he will continue to wear his old hat—that of deputy chief of U.S. Army forces in the Pacific. The Army gave no reason for his holding on to the command except, perhaps, there has not been time to name a successor.

"He got the word from the Pentagon only 15 hours before he left," one of his staff officers explained. "He packed his bag, kissed his wife, held a couple of quick conferences and took off."

Richardson will lead a joint task force consisting of air, sea and ground units in Thailand. He'll work directly under an old boss and longtime comrade, Gen. Paul D. Harkins. It was Richardson who replaced Harkins when the latter was tapped for the U.S. military assistance command job last February.

Richardson and Harkins have had parallel careers the past two years. Both arrived in Hawaii the same month, August, 1960, with Harkins taking the deputy Army post and Richardson the dual command of the 25th Division and U. S. Army Hawaii.

When Harkins was promoted to chief of the military assistance force in Viet Nam, it seemed only logical his successor would be Richardson.

Only three months later, when Harkins' responsibility was expanded as part of the shift of emphasis to protect Thailand, the first high-ranking officer called was Richardson.

While heading the 25th Division, Richardson developed the unit's guerrilla warfare ability in the hills of Hawaii. War games raged across the jagged peaks of Oahu and the island of Hawaii. A guerrilla training compound was set up behind Schofield Barracks, headquarters of the 25th.

Some 2,000 of these 25th Division troops will be with Richardson in Thailand.

They know what their old leader demands and he knows what they can produce.

Astronaut Risked Life, Did People Care?

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Scott Carpenter's spine-tingling adventure in space lost some of its impact because too many persons take too much for granted.

The same thing happened when astronaut Virgil (Gus) Grissom made a suborbital flight that ended with a swim for life in the deep Atlantic. Some people with both feet on the ground were unenthusiastic because they felt Grissom had only duplicated a flight by astronaut Alan Shepard.

But had not Grissom repeated Shepard's courageous flight, Project Mercury would have had to postpone Glenn's triple-orbital flight.

Another pass around the earth three times may be necessary before the United States expands its space project but Carpenter proved to the world that the Glenn flight was no fluke, that it can be done again.

And scientists knocked down published reports that Carpenter was too tired and confused to carry out his mission properly, landing 200 miles beyond his designated "splash" area.

To the contrary, said the scientists and doctors who attended Carpenter after he was retrieved from a life-raft in the Atlantic, the astronaut was less fatigued than Glenn and much hungrier.

De Gaulle Suffers Setback With Salan

Across the Atlantic French President Charles de Gaulle suffered a bewildering setback when a military tribunal spared the life of former Gen. Raoul Salan.

Salan admitted he was the head of the organization which had spilled French and Moslem blood from one end of Algeria—to the other. But he based his defense on a patriotic desire to keep Algeria French.

It had been expected that Salan would receive the death penalty because one of his subordinates, former Gen. Edmond Jouhaud, had been condemned to die for his activities in the OAS.

Now Jouhaud is demanding a new trial.

Other major news developments this week:

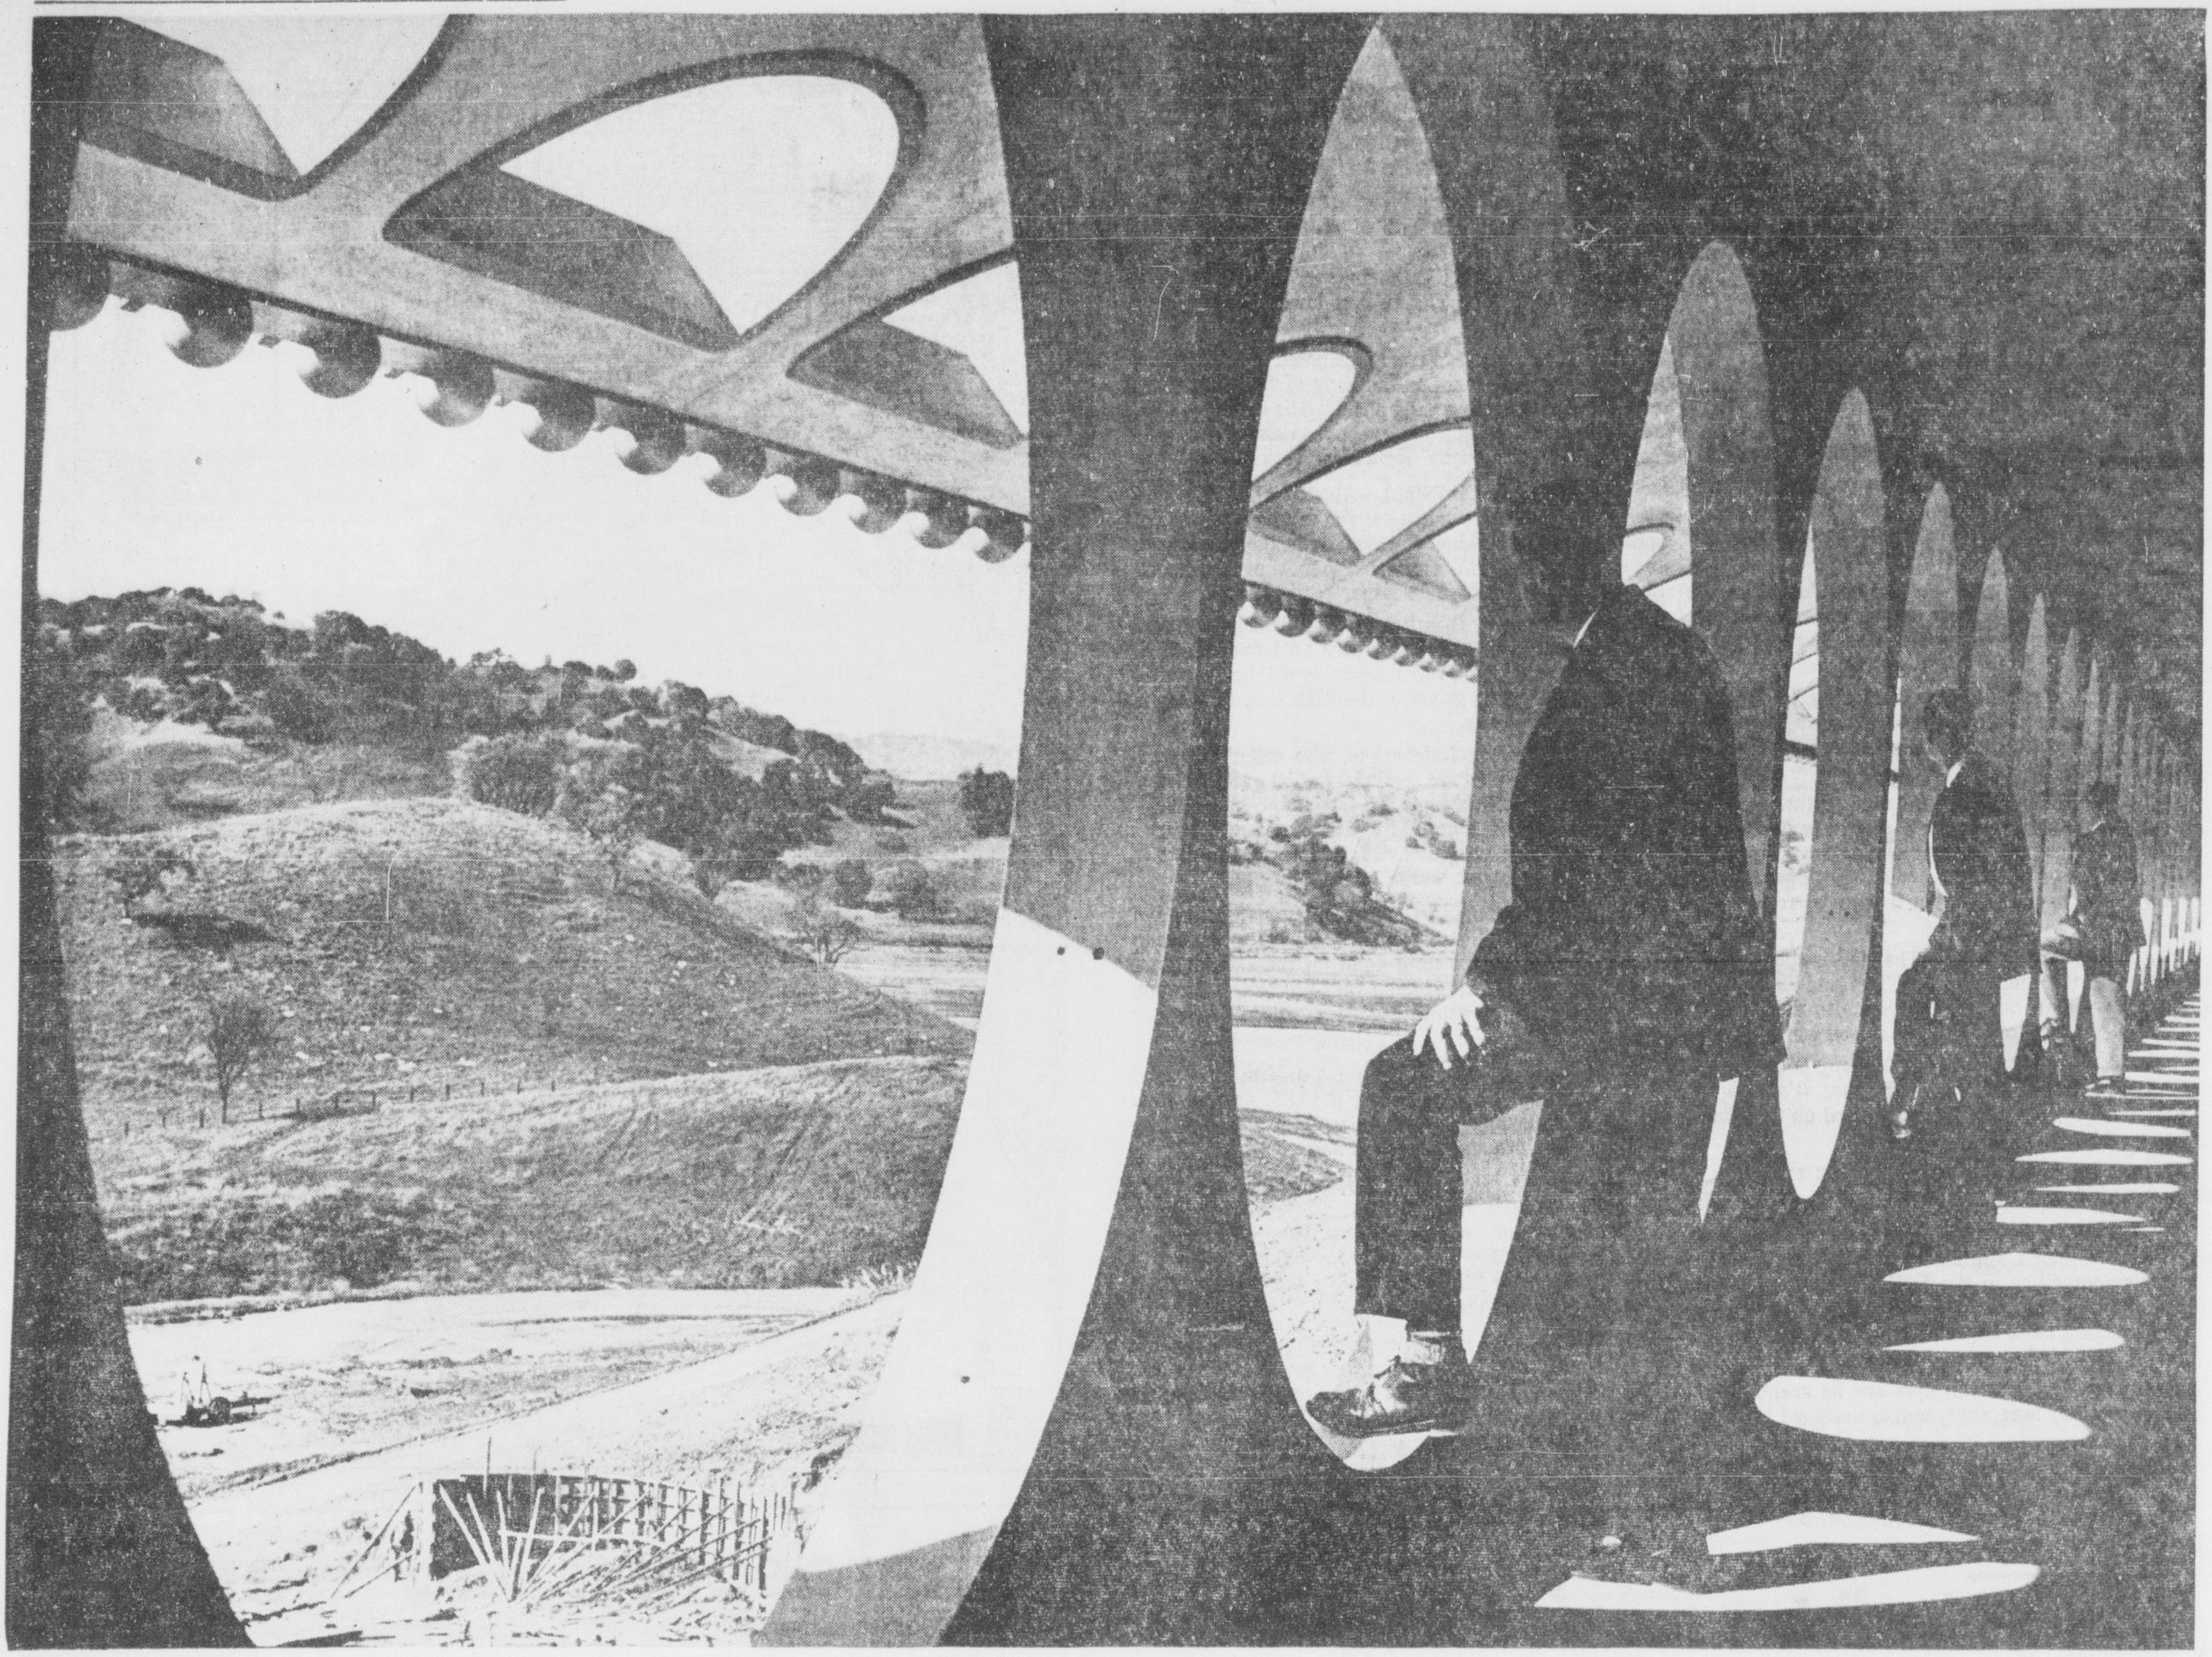

Crash — A Continental Airlines Boeing 707 jetliner crashed at Centerville, Iowa, following a violent thunderstorm, killing all 45 persons aboard.

Marshall — An autopsy on the exhumed remains of Henry Marshall, an Agriculture Department official who investigated Billie Sol Estes, indicated he may have been murdered but the possibility of suicide was not ruled out.

Chinese — President John F. Kennedy used emergency powers to offer a haven in the United States to thousands of Chinese fleeing their homeland.

Taxes — The House Ways and Means Committee approved legislation to repeal the 10 per cent tax on rail and bus travel. It would cut the tax on airline tickets to Spies — The Defense Department announced that three Soviet ships with electronic instruments were spying on U. S. nuclear tests in the Pacific.

Gallery of Marin County Civic Center, by FRANK LLOYD WRIGHT

Shape of things already here ★ A report on the growth of the county

Designed by Frank Lloyd Wright, the new Marin County courthouse is more than a building, it's an event. As an architectural landmark it promises to become an American Mecca for all who admire bold, imaginative work on a master scale. Thrusting into the future, it is indeed a new symbol of Marin. For the county, like its courthouse, is adding exciting new dimensions as it enters a new era of expansion. Here's a "view from the top" that gives you some idea of Marin's growth—and future.

Marin is becoming a green-leaved city of towns and suburban areas. Population is one of our biggest "industries," up 14,489 or 9.9% since the 1960 Census, for a total of 161,289 people. This makes Marin the third fastest-growing of the 9 Bay Area counties . . . on its way to metropolitan status.

With new people come new businesses. And Marin, gaining 28.0% in just 5 years, out-did all other Bay Area counties except Santa Clara, adding 464 new firms. Adding jobs, too, and a broader base of industry.

Income? It's our "leading product" in Marin. Average taxable return, at $9,781, is highest of any county in California—which helps explain our swimming pools, fine homes, our average of 1.35 cars per family . . . our $10,000,000 worth of boats.

Real estate is the real thing in this county. Look at the figures: real estate loans for 1961, up 33.5% over 1960—new homes, new tracts, waterside and hillside developments everywhere, some with a boat in the backyard, some with golf in the front. What a year! Multiple-listing sales, at $39,697,716, were 22.1% ahead of 1960. And despite the recessive first quarter, building permits climbed 14.7% in dollar value ahead of the prior year.

Telephones added their voice to progress, too . . . with 5,373 new ones installed in 1961, for a total of 76,078.

Around you is the stir and yeast of change. More Marin breadwinners now work in Marin County than in San Francisco—part of the new pattern. New restaurants add flavor to living. New money keeps coming in from all over the U.S., helping develop apartments, cooperatives, new tracts, new industry, marinas and golf courses. It's even expected we'll have two new industrial parks this spring.

The future then, is being created today. You can see it and feel it. You live in a community that's moving ideas into action . . . turning new energies, new business, new life, into the unlimited dimension of growth.

Growth of a newspaper, too, grows from serving the whole community

The Independent-Journal has become the first line of communication for the entire county—bought and read by 2 out of 3 households in Marin. We've added new features, greater coverage of world and local events, new ideas; taken the lead, nationally, in new printing advances. Result: readers have given us readership. This alone explains our own phenomenal growth . . . explains why 70,000 people read the I-J every evening . . . why advertising is so responsive . . . and why the most quoted phrase in Marin County is this: "I see by tonight's I-J . . ."

Those who expect to be away from the county on June 5 may apply for absent voter ballots, either in person or by mail, between now and 5 p.m. Tuesday. Those who apply in person may vote now at special booths set up in the county clerk's office.

Those who apply by mail will have absentee ballots sent to them at their forwarding addresses. These ballots must be mailed back to the county clerk and reach his office by 5 p.m. June 2. The county clerk's office will be open on June 2, a Saturday, to process the absentee ballots.

West Meets East Daily Via Amateur Radio Operators

AT HAM STATION — Retired Associated Press engineer Harold Carlson, writer of this article, talks by code on his ham radio station. Carlson contacts his Russian counterpart almost every day.

By HAROLD CARLSON

CARPENTER, Wyo. (AP) — Probably our most down-to-earth contact with the Russians is through "ham radio."

Literally hundreds of American radio amateurs contact their Russian counterparts every day, some by radio phone, most by code on radio telegraph.

For example, I can tune in on the amateur radio bands in the evening here in Wyoming and more often than not hear one of the Russians in contact with an American ham. When he finishes I can call him and nearly always get a reply.

Usually the exchange consists of telling each other what kind of equipment we are using, including antennas, and how much power.

Then there may be an exchange of local weather information, or something about our respective jobs. The Russian always asks that we send our "QSL" card to him, in care of the Central Radio Club, Postbox 88, Moscow, U.S.S.R.

QSLs are special cards that hams use to confirm in writing some of their contacts with other hams. Hams collect them—I have them from hams in more than 200 different countries.

All written contacts with Russian hams are cleared through Postbox 88, Moscow. I had an unfortunate experience involving a violation of this rule a few years ago.

A Russian ham asked me if I could send him a copy of a particular American technical magazine. He gave me his home address, and asked that I send it there so that he "would be sure to personally get it." I wondered at the time, but made arrangements with the publisher to send a copy of the magazine by air mail.

This ham was one whom I often contacted, and I waited to hear whether he received the magazine. I never again heard him on the air. Almost two years afterward I received a post card, mailed in Italy, from another ham, a Yugoslav who said I would not hear my Russian ham friend any more because he had gotten into trouble

It does indicate though, that perhaps some of the Russians are just ordinary Joes, interested in what is going on outside Russia. They apparently are not all party members. But I would suspect that all of them are monitored by government listening stations.

There often are surprises originating with Russian hams. For example, recently I heard a station calling "CQ," the invitation for any amateur to answer, and he used an unlisted call "UPOL-10." I called him, and he replied. He said he was at the "exact North Pole base." I couldn't get him to say whether it was the geographic, or magnetic pole, but he may not have understood my question. He asked me to send my QSL card to Postbox 88, Moscow, confirming my contact with "Jan" at the North Pole.

Some hams do a novel job with their QSL. A Japanese school teacher sent me his in the form of a Japanese doll. A ham in the Belgian Congo sent a carved ebony elephant. I have quite a collection.

Ham radio can be useful too.

All our military bases abroad and in the states have their amateur radio stations, using the most modern equipment. The GIs use it to communicate with the folks back home.

They get in touch with a radio amateur in the home town who has a "phone patch." This is a device for telephoning a local person so that he can talk with the distant ham.

The military also has its own amateur radio system, MARS (Military Amateur Radio Service), which keeps busy sending and receiving messages for military personnel all over the globe.

And when I was traveling in foreign countries without my wife, we contacted by amateur radio. She has a license which she got for this specific purpose. I have talked to her from such places as Chile, Argentina, Cuba, and Newfoundland.

I visited some foreign radio amateurs in my travels, among them the chief engineer of the huge Breda works in Milan, Italy, a Spanish doctor in the Philippines, an architect in Singapore.

Some of them have visited us at our home, too, including these three. It is a most enjoyable experience to have them drop in.

RUSSIAN HAM CARD—This is the Russian ham card Harold Carlson received in Carpenter, Wyo., from Russia. It was postmarked Box 88, Moscow.

$1.5-Million Motel Under Construction

Grading and leveling for construction of a 1.5-million-dollar motel has begun on the west side of Highway 101 in Corte Madera.

The motel, to be known as Madera Motel Apartments and containing 101 units, is being built by Madera Village, Inc. General contractor is Karp Development Co. of San Francisco.

The building, three stories in height, will front on Tamal Vista Drive about 400 feet north of the Edgewater Inn.

There will be 57 one-bedroom units, 27 two-bedroom units, and 17 of the studio size.

All will have electric kitchens, large rooms and sample closet space, the developers said. The building will have two elevators.

Other features include two sauna baths, laundry facilities, a putting green and a 25 by 40 foot swimming pool. Construction is expected to be completed by November.

The motel apartment development takes in two acres of a six-acre site. Two other buildings are projected for construction following completion of the first unit. They will be similar in design and size.

STATE DUE ANOTHER BAD FIRE SEASON

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California is threatened with another fire season more severe than normal, the State Division of Forestry warned yesterday.

The division said Southern California and the southern Sierra Nevada are particularly vulnerable to fire because of a heavy spring growth of grass and dead growth left over from the drought of the past three years.

Fire potential in the rest of the state will increase as snow melts and spring grasses turn brown.

The division said there were 85 fires totaling 241 acres on state-protected lands last month.

Marin General Hospital Is 10

Marin General Hospital observed its 10th anniversary rather wistfully and with business not quite as usual today.

For the past year routine at the hospital in Greenbrae had been marked by hammering and sawing on a two-and-one-half million dollar expansion to double its capacity for patients.

But that was interrupted on May 14 by a shutdown resulting from a dispute between contractors and the Hodcarriers and Laborers Union.

Completion of expansion will create a total bed capacity of 220, with state license authorizing 254 beds in emergencies.

The hospital was not planning on a ceremony to mark its birthday even if construction was continuing, said Administrator William Turner, and now there's less reason than before to celebrate.

"We appreciate the quiet," he said, "though not the lack of construction."

He added that during his one and one-half years at the hospital there never has been a month when there were not beds in the halls and patients on the waiting list.

It now appears extremely doubtful that the expansion will be completed by the scheduled Feb. 1, 1963, said Turner.

The expansion consists of addition of two wings. One wing will contain 116 more beds. The other will house extension of laboratory and kitchen facilities and labor rooms in the obstetrical ward.

Groundbreaking ceremonies for the 17-acre hospital site were held June 10, 1950, five years after a committee was formed to expand hospital facilities in Marin on urgent recommendation of the State Department of Public Health.

The $1,976,000 hospital was dedicated May 25, 1952, and opened the next day.

ECONOMIC REPORT BY STATE CHAMBER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A report on economic conditions by the California State Chamber of Commerce yesterday said:

California retail trade will reach a record volume of almost 24 billion dollars in 1962, about double the 1950 total.

Reflecting the state's rapid population growth, civilian employment set a new high of 6,158,000 for April, an increase of 166,000 over April, 1961.

In manufacturing, as indicated by the number of wage and salary workers employed in April, favorable conditions were shown in practically all segments.

Farm marketings during the early part of this year were ahead of last year.

Preliminary forecasts suggest heavy farm output during the remainder of the year due to exceptionally good growing weather and the generally good water situation.

Group Seeks To Annex To Terra Linda

About a dozen residents on Knocknaboul Way in Terra Linda plan to start proceedings for annexation of their properties to the Terra Linda Community Services District and Terra Linda Recreation District.

The residents were told by directors of the two districts Wednesday night that first steps toward annexation must include filing of maps with the county boundary commission and circulation of petitions.

Owners of more than half of the total assessed valuation of property in the area must agree to the annexation if it is to be successful. Combined tax rate in the districts is now $1.92 per $100 assessed valuation.

About 30 families live on Knocknaboul Way, which is on the border of the community services and recreation districts.

Proponents of annexation will consult with the county counsel about filing of maps and petitions.

Strawbridge Aides Named

Chairmen of 14 Marin County committees for the election of Gordon W. Strawbridge as county treasurer-tax collector have been announced by his campaign manager, Mrs. Judy Noll of Tiburon.

Area committee chairmen are Paul Micou, Sausalito; Mrs. Thurman Barnes, Marin City; Mr. and Mrs. Carl Mosher, Mill Valley; Dr. and Mrs. William Ferguson, Belvedere; Dr. and Mrs. Alfred Azevedo, Tiburon; Mrs. Patricia Ford, Corte Madera; Peter Krug, Larkspur; Roger Kent, Kentfield; Mrs. Bennet Skewes-Cox, Ross; Mrs. Carleton G. E. Little, San Anselmo; Mrs. Berrien Anderson, San Rafael; John Rockwell, Fairfax; Harold Gregg, Forest Knolls, and Ernest Schallinger, Novato.

Station Wagon Rips Across Two Yards

A station wagon ripped across two front yards in Greenbrae early yesterday bounced off a fire hydrant and tore through another front yard, winding up on a rock wall, Larkspur police reported.

The driver, Martin William Milot, 38, of 85 Corte Toluca, Greenbrae, stepped out of the vehicle unhurt.

The car jumped the curb at 2:20 a.m., tore through the front yard of Rube Graff of 122 Eliseo Drive, knocking down a mailbox and some plants. Then it ran across the front yard of the E.W. Cropper home at 128 Eliseo, chopped off the mailbox, smashed a brick border around some plants, and careened off a tree.

It next ran into a fire hydrant (which did not break), and through the front yard of the Harry Del Grande home at 142 Eliseo. After tearing through plants, the station wagon stopped with its wheels over a rock wall in the front yard.

Milot told Patrolman John Cottle he had fallen asleep.

Stinson-Bolinas School Budget Has $5,000 Hike

An operating budget of $60,000 for fiscal 1963 was tentatively set Wednesday night by Bolinas-Stinson Union School District trustees.

The proposed $5,000 increase is to give salary raises to five teachers, two bus drivers and a maintenance man.

The tax rate is expected to remain the same. It is $1.16 per $100 assessed valuation with 6 cents override, bringing the total tax rate to $1.22.

Last year's total budget, which included $20,000 in a capital outlay fund, was $78,449. The total budget for 1962-63 has not been estimated.

A special meeting of the board will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the Bolinas School to award a contract for purchase of a new school bus.

A.F. Officer Given Highest Scout Award

The Silver Beaver Award, highest Boy Scout award that can be given by a local council, has been given to Maj. William Wetsel, 28th Air Division chief of personnel and administration at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Wetsel, who lives in Sonoma, received the award at a dinner given in his honor at El Rancho Restaurant in Santa Rosa. This is only the 40th award given by the Sonoma-Mendocino Counties Boy Scout Council in the past 25 years. Wetsel is public relations chairman of that council.

Audubon Society Signs Land Option

The Marin Audubon Society today signed its third five-month option to purchase the Audubon Canyon Ranch from Tevis Land and Livestock Co. of San Francisco.

The 507-acre ranch, located near the Bolinas Lagoon, will be used as a wildlife refuge and a nature education center.

The society paid $5,000 today, which with previous payments of $3,000 and $1,000, makes a total deposit of $9,000. It is planned, president William S. Picher said, that a down payment of $90,000 will be made before the end of the year.

Student Rams Back Of Auto At Wolfe Grade

Wolfe Grade and Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, an alleged potential school traffic trouble spot, was the scene of an accident involving a student Thursday.

But the student wasn't walking.

Seventeen-year-old Raymond J. Giordano of 43 Mary Street, San Rafael, was riding west in his coupe at 3:20 p.m. He told the California Highway Patrol he was looking at some mathematics homework papers lying on the car seat beside him.

His vehicle rammed the rear of a station wagon driven by Truman B. Johnson of 479 Redwood Avenue, Corte Madera.

Johnson said his neck hurt but he declined hospitalization.

Nursery School Taking Signups

The North Marin Nursery School in Novato is taking registrations for the fall term which begins Sept. 15, Rev. Richard Wood, executive director, announced.

The school, which has three teachers, is limited to 60 pupils in two sessions.

The nursery school is nondenominational, sponsored by the Northland Assembly of God Church, at 1370 South Novato Boulevard.

The Golden Gate Bridge Has A Birthday

See Page M-20

STANDING ON THE BEACH on the San Franciso side of the Golden Gate Bridge, photographer Jim Kean pointed his camera upward and eastward to take this picture of the span as it looks today. Not all the courageous men who risked their lives to build the structure survived to see their work completed. Some lost their lives. But many still survive and will be on hand for the simple ceremonies which will mark tomorrow the 25th anniversary of the opening of the span, one of the engineering wonders of the world. Old Fort Point can be seen at right of photo.

The Bridge—Twenty-Five Years Ago

It Cost Human Lives As Well As Dollars And Toil To Span The Golden Gate

By CHAPIN A. DAY

It was a sunny Wednesday in 1937, fairly warm for Feb. 17. Thirteen men worked on a wooden scaffolding suspended beneath the nearly completed longest single suspension span in the world, the Golden Gate Bridge.

Nearby hung a similar scaffolding with another crew of men. They were all doing the same thing, removing forms from beneath the concrete paving of the highway above.

Things were moving fast these days. The bridge's opening was only a matter of weeks away. That day the bridge directors had decided to delay opening one week, from May 20 to May 27, to give the U.S. Fleet time to steam into the bay for the celebration.

The fleet had been there four years before when on Feb. 26, 1933, a week-long celebration marked the official groundbreaking for the 35 million dollar structure.

But some of the workers on that scaffolding recalled they hadn't waited for groundbreaking. Actual work had started more than a month before, on Jan. 5.

It had been an exciting, but fairly calm four years. Only one man had lost his life in the construction. A toppling crane killed a steelworker.

A steamer, blinded by fog, had caused some excitement when it plowed through the 1,100 foot long trestle constructed from the San Francisco shore to the site of the south tower. Four hundred feet of trestle had been torn away, but luckily no one was on it at the time; no one had been lost.

HARDLY HAD the trestle repairs been made, when a serious storm battered the Bay Area. When it subsided, 800 feet of the trestle were gone.

After that the level of the trestle roadway was raised five feet and it was anchored by steel cable on each side. And thus it remained until the San Francisco pier and tower stood erect, 746 feet above the water.

Peering down through the square openings of the safety net below them, the scaffold workmen could see the huge concrete fender on the San Francisco side. Almost large enough to hold a football field, it circled the south tower and prevented the waves from eating away at the pier.

That fender itself was a marvel of construction. Lifting out of 90 feet of water, it had been a challenge to an engineer; its location was one of the most hotly disputed arguments of bridging the Gate. On earthquake fault, they said. Swift tides rolled and pushed around it. Ocean storms beat upon its unprotected position.

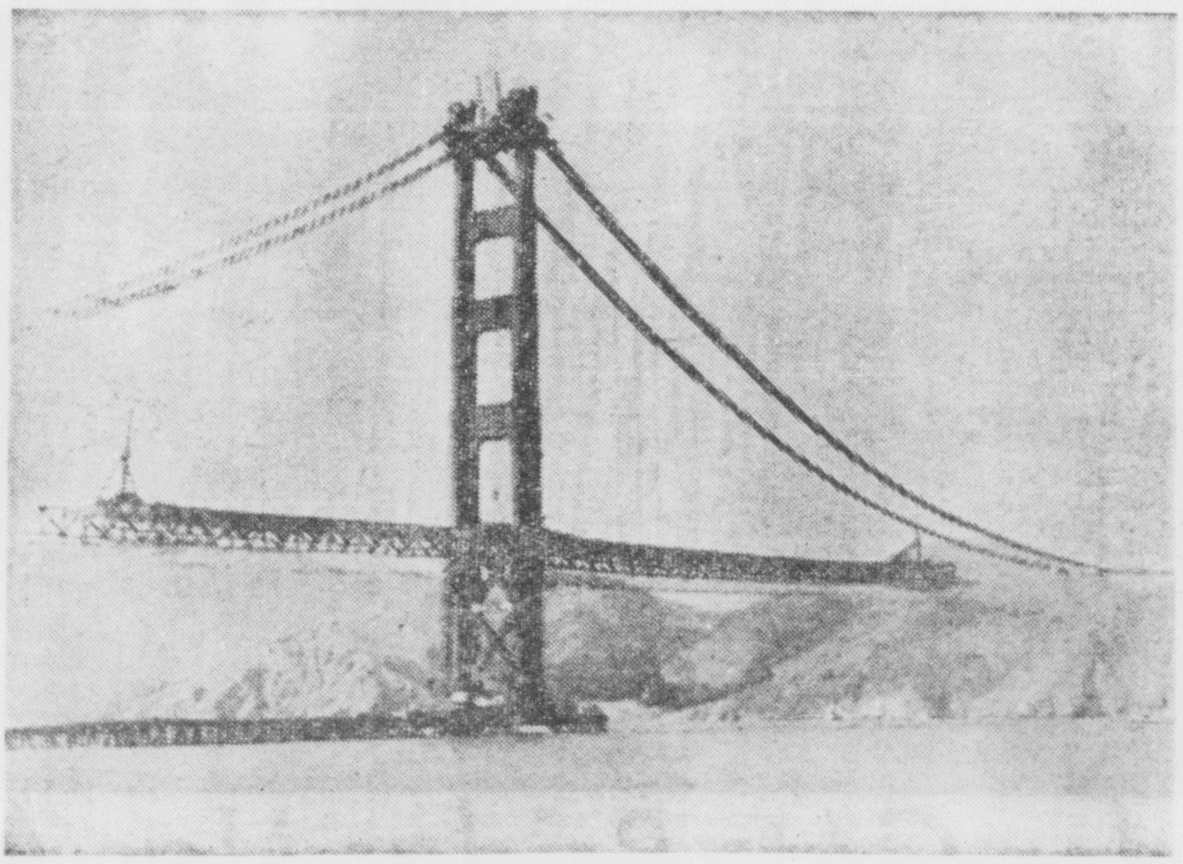

But segment by segment the 30-foot concrete wall of the fender had risen from the solid serpentine rock on which it stood. Then, in the middle, the pier itself formed, like the stamen of a flower, ready for the steel tower on top.

On the Marin shore, meanwhile, a less complicated foundation had been constructed on dry land with a temporary U-shaped steel fender, bulwarked by a stone and wood coffer dam, keeping the water out.

ATOP THAT HAD grown the 690 foot Marin tower, stretching more than 130 feet higher than the new towers of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and only 70 feet less than the famed Woolworth Building in New York City.

Foreman carpenter Oscar Osburg of San Francisco saw that his men on the scaffolding would soon complete removal of all forms at that particular mid-span section. The scaffold could then be moved WHAT'S THIS? A bridge that starts and ends in open space? No, it's the Golden Gate Bridge while still under construction with steelwork stretching out from the San Francisco tower.

A LOT OF MEN had a hand in the building of the Golden Gate Bridge. But the key figure was Joseph B. Strauss, the chief engineer, the man who engineered and directed the construction of the bridge "that couldn't be built." (Photo by Charles M. Hiller, courtesy of Tidewater Oil Co.)

forward on four sets of wheels which hooked up over the sides of the bridge and rolled on top of the bridge's steel girders.

It seemed only yesterday that the first wire had been pulled across the Gate by a tugboat and hoisted into the air between the two towers, 4,200 feet apart. Other wires followed until two wobbly catwalks stretched across the water marking the path for the weaving of huge cables which could carry the full weight of the bridge deck and its cargo of cars and humans.

It had been fascinating to watch that mechanical spider spin the steel web. Back and forth, back and forth it moved until 27,572 separate wires were woven together into a compact cable, more than a yard in diameter and a mile and a quarter long.

In all, more than 80,000 miles of wire supported the steel bridge structure under which the men were working. They couldn't see any of it from where they were. Their view was blocked by the upside down U shape of the steel frame which carried the concrete roadway. But they could see the safety net below them.

THEY WERE reassured by that net. Already 19 men had lost their balance and toppled off the bridge. The net had caught them, bruised or sometimes more seriously injured, but they were alive. It was reassuring.

Nearly 30 years earlier, when San Francisco Supervisor Richard J. Welch had first introduced a resolution authorizing a feasibility study for a bridge, opening day had been but a dream. It was then, in 1918, that Joseph B. Strauss was first approached by the city engineer and asked if he thought a bridge was possible.

At that time, no bridge crossed the Bay at any point, except the one-track Southern Pacific span which pushed through the shallow waters of Dumbarton Narrows in the South Bay. But Welch and the other supervisors wanted to know if the Golden Gate could be crossed for less than 25 million dollars.

It took Strauss a year and a half to answer. But in May 1920, he came back with an answer. It could be bridged, and the cost would be 27 million dollars. Another engineer, who had been asked, set the cost at between 60 to 77 millions. A third engineer didn't even bother to answer.

Strauss proposed a combination cantilever and suspension bridge. Most of the vast center span would be cantilevered out from steel lacework towers with only a small center section suspended.

The supervisors were interested and called a meeting to discuss the idea. From this meeting was born the idea of a district to build and operate the bridge.

The Day Disaster Struck Builders Of Gate Bridge

Ten Men Plunged To Death With Hazardous Jobs Nearing Finish

Thus in January, 1923, a public meeting was called in Santa Rosa. Representatives of eight counties met and argued. Out of it came the recommendation that legislation be passed enabling formation of such a district.

THE LEGISLATURE agreed and the bill became law that May.

By then Humboldt County representatives had cold feet. First they were in the district, then out. Finally out. Mendocino County teetered on withdrawal. But forceful publisher A. R. O'Brien of Ukiah stood firm and carried the most populated part of the county into the district with him. A corner of Napa County dropped out, too, while little Del Norte, farther away than Humboldt, decided a bridge was what they wanted.

Thus San Francisco, Marin, Sonoma, Del Norte and parts of Napa and Mendocino, formed a bridge district.

Then came nearly six years of legal maneuvering. Attempting to destroy the district, attorneys attacked its legality, engineers testified a bridge would cost as much as $112,344,000. But the district withstood the attack. On Dec. 4, 1928, it had been incorporated by the state.

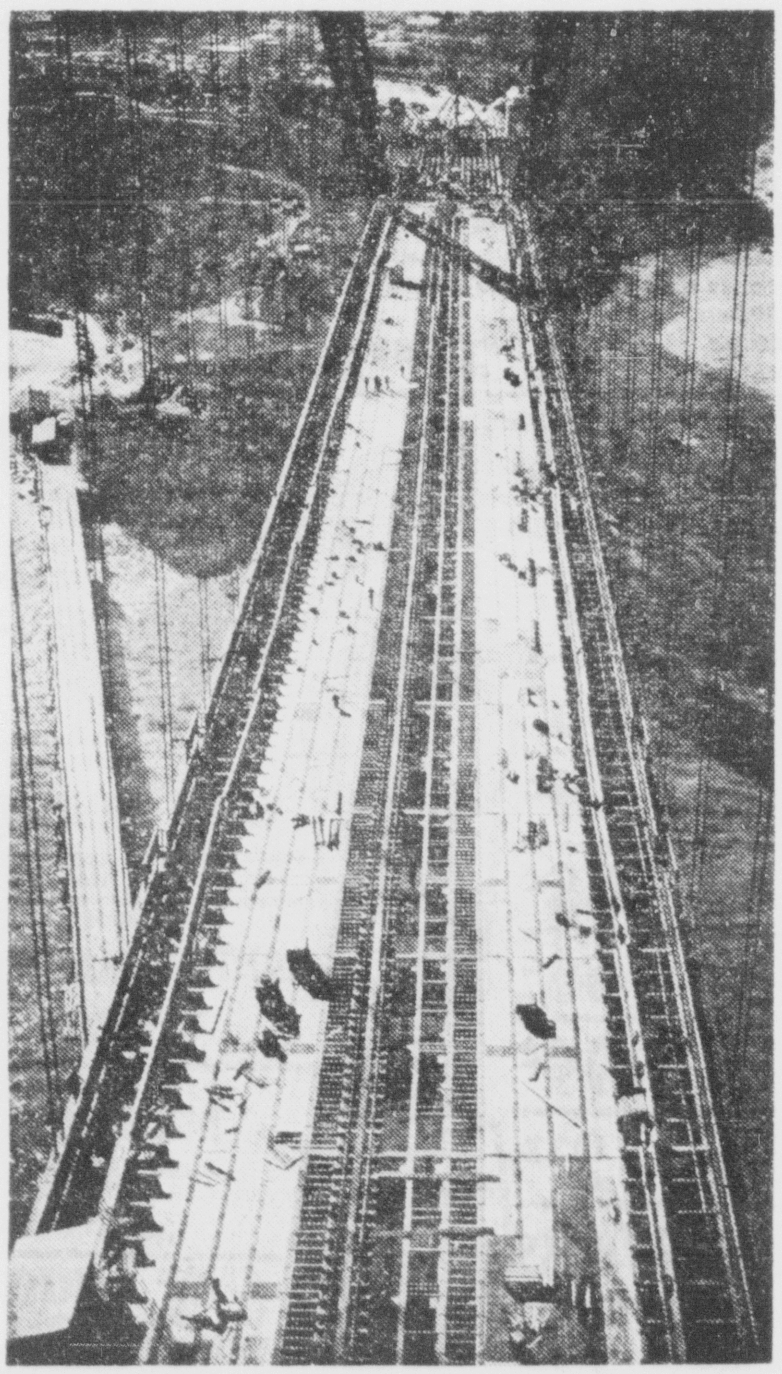

Carpenter E. C. Lambert called to foreman Osburg and pointed to a pair of gloves which had fallen from a workman's pocket and were balancing precariously in the net. Osburg shouted to the deck above him and a workman sheepishly climbed down a ladder and walked out on the billowing safety net with the rolling gait of a sailor on a pitching deck. The net caught all kinds of things besides people.

And everything costs money. The people of the bridge district first paid for their bridge in fiscal 1929-30 when a tax of three cents per $100 valuation was assessed against the property holders of the district. The following year the tax was reduced to two cents—and that was the last tax ever assessed against the people of the district. It had cost less than half a million dollars in tax funds, with all but $57,000 of it coming from San Francisco. Marin

How They Spanned The Gate

It Cost Toil, Money And Human Lives

County taxpayers paid only $14,220.66.

But money for construction was needed. So after a bitter political campaign, and needing two-thirds vote for passage, on Nov. 4, 1930, the district residents approved by a 145,657 to 46,954 vote a 35 million dollar bond issue.

BY THIS TIME Engineer Strauss had changed his mind about the type of bridge he recommended constructing. Instead of a cantilever, he proposed a suspension bridge, one with mammoth sweeping lines, bigger than any such bridge ever before conceived. Its towers would rise 746 feet above the water, each cable and its suspenders would weigh 24,500 tons.

At first he designed it with four lanes of automobile traffic and two lanes for street cars. Then, believing that the era of mass transportation was being ended by the automobile, he eliminated the streetcar tracks.

The men on the scaffold could remember those days. The great depression, which had started in the East in 1929, had finally reached the West. Jobs were few. Builders wanted work.

So when the bridge directors opened bids on construction, they were happily surprised. Strauss' final estimate of cost was $27,165,000. The low bids totaled only $24,455,299.93. This left 10 million dollars of the bond money for all other costs. When the final bills were to be totaled, including engineering inspection and other construction costs, the total would be $27,125,000, only $33,000 less than Strauss' estimate.

The rest of the bond money went into administration, financing and other expenses, leaving a $1,334,000 surplus.

It was now time to advance the scaffolding. Osborn called up to laborer Harold Fox and others to "move 'er up." While the 13 men on the scaffold held on, the crew on the bridge beam started "inching" the 10-ton scaffolding along.

The men looked straight along the inverted U of the bridge's under side, never dreaming that 14 years later, on Dec. 1, 1951, 75-mile per hour winds blowing directly from the west and gusting up to 100 miles per hour would twist the bridge so severely that it would be closed to traffic; that the edges of the bridge would whip up and down 27 feet, and that the bridge directors would eventually spend $3,500,000 to close the open side of that inverted U, making a square

Let's Take Bridge Walk To Vista Point

Though the Golden Gate Bridge was constructed primarily for vehicular traffic, the pedestrian was not forgotten.

In fact it was foot traffic which was given precedence when the great span was first opened. On May 27, 1937, the bridge was opened to pedestrians. And more than 200,000 people took advantage of that opportunity to marvel at the great engineering feat and drink in the scenery that could be seen from the huge structure.

It was not until the following day, May 28, 1937, that the first vehicles were permitted to cross the bridge.

Since the opening of the bridge an estimated more than two million people have walked onto or across the great span. Nearly a million have paid the 10-cent fare charged pedestrians at the San Francisco side. And while no charge is made or exact count is kept of persons entering the bridge walk from the Marin side, it is believed that that number is at least equal to the San Francisco total.

YOU CAN ADD to that figure and to your personal enjoyment by joining the bridge strollers on any pleasant day.

Dress warmly and start from the San Francisco side since the pedestrian underpass at the Marin end of the bridge is closed at present by construction work. Drive across the bridge and park in the big lot at the east side of the span. Pause there to enjoy the view, marvel at the size of the cross section of the main cable which is on display there, and admire the statue of the farsighted chief engineer who played the leading role in the building of the bridge, Joseph B. Strauss.

Fortify yourself then, if you desire, with a cup of hot coffee at the Round House restaurant with its panoramic view. Now you are ready to begin your walk.

Proceed through the toll gate, where you pay your dime, with camera in hand. At the south pylon, which houses the cables, pause long enough to read the dedication plaques and the memorial tablets for the brave men who lost their lives during the construction of the bridge.

LOOK DOWN on old Fort Point which dates back to the days of the Spanish settlement of California, but from which no gun was ever fired in anger.

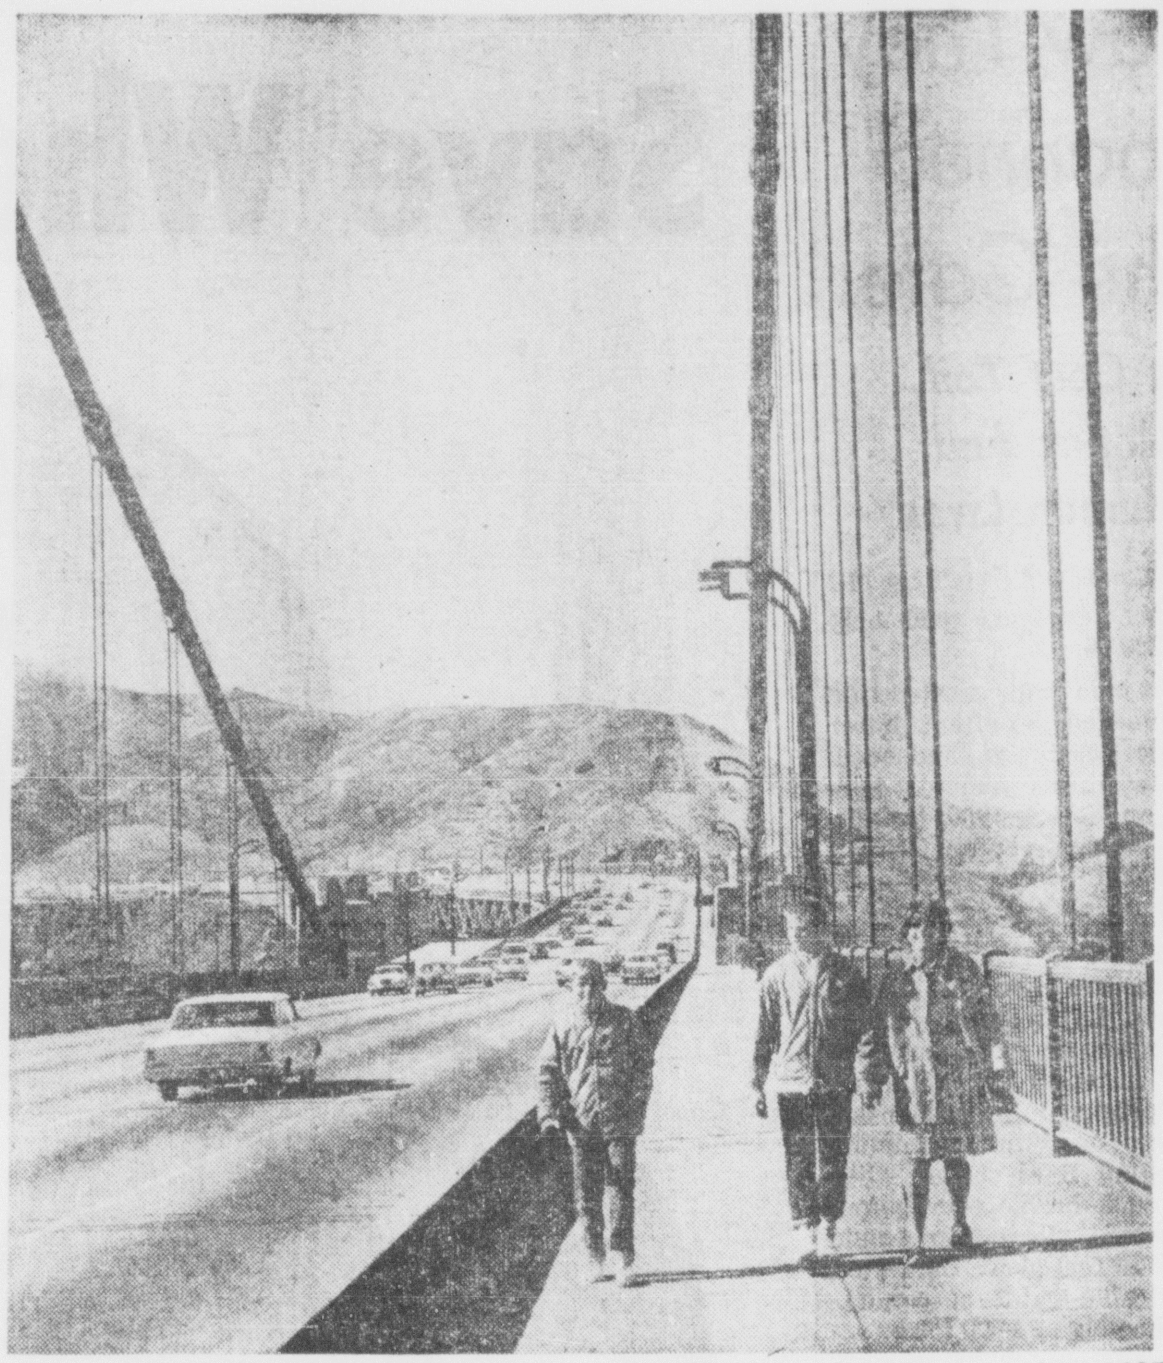

Your view east will stretch from Fort Baker past Corinthian Island, the Tiburon Peninsula and Richmond on the left, to the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and San Francisco's famous hills.

On fogless days you can pick out innumerable landmarks. For instance to the west, on your left, is Mile Rock Lighthouse and Land's End. On the hill to your right you can see the radar station at Fort Barry and Lime Point.

AND IN BETWEEN, on an exceptional day, you can make out the distant Farrallones on the horizon.

On a track at the side of the bridge is the traveling scaffold used in painting the bridge, a continuous operation. And crossing the roadbed at regular intervals are the expansion joints which allow for sway during heavy winds.

At the North Tower you pass into home territory — across the Marin County line.

A WALK ACROSS the Golden Gate Bridge with frequent stops to enjoy the scenery can provide a most refreshing out-in-the-open-air outing. An estimated two million people have used the bridge's walkways since the big span was opened in 1937. Young walkers here are, left to right, Ken Steinhardt, Mark Hazell and Barby Steinhardt, all of Strawberry. (Photo by Jim Kean)

Continue your foot trip to Vista Point on the east side of the roadway on the Marin coast. Here tourists from many states and many lands mingle with Bay Area old-timers in awed admiration of the sweeping view of the Bay, San Francisco and much of the surrounding area. At night the lights of the city and the bridge provide an especially brilliant display.

Vista Point, located on U.S.-owned land leased to the State Division of Highways with easements to the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, came about almost by accident in 1956 although such a view site had been discussed earlier.

The contractor boring the second Waldo Grade tunnel and widening Highway 101 to six lanes used the site as a disposal area for earth and rock he had removed. In agreement with his contract, he then leveled the area so as not to leave behind an eyesore. State highway engineers say that people began, on their own volition, driving onto the area to enjoy the spectacular view. Noting the traffic, controlled access was provided. And improvements are scheduled for the near future, including grading, paving and landscaping.

Two Vista Point projects long advocated by many Marinites have not, however, been realized. There has long been agitation for some kind of tourist information service on the Point.

And many Marinites have urged that access to the Point be provided for southbound traffic. At present such cars must continue on across the bridge, turn around and make the return trip over the bridge before they can turn off and drive onto the Point.

THERE IS A small parking area on the west side of the bridge where southbound motorists can leave their cars and then proceed on foot through a pedestrian underpass to Vista Point. That turn-off and underpass, however, are currently closed by construction work.

The return walk back across the bridge will complete a stroll of approximately three miles—an invigorating, if sometimes breezy, constitutional.

(Editor's Note: This is another in the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine's "See Marvelous Marin" series, prepared in cooperation with radio station KTIM.)

MOTORISTS WHO turn off the roadway at the Marin end of the Golden Gate Bridge to park their cars and drink in the breath-taking view are amply rewarded for that effort. You can also make a stop at Vista Point a part of your walk across the bridge. (Photo by Jim Kean)

Profile Of A Bridge-Building Man

Joe Walton Belongs To A Very Special Breed

By DON KEOWN

What kind of men built the Golden Gate Bridge?

Well, they were men of courage, undaunted by dizzying heights or the powerful tides below.

They were strong and rugged men who could stand up to fierce winds, cold fog, the blazing heat from the sun.

They were skilled and experienced men who had built many bridges before and were to build many more in the future.

They were men of confidence and vision, unmoved by the many doubting Thomases who said the bridge couldn't be built.

And yet they were realists, men calmly aware of the obstacles and hazards that had to be faced and overcome.

They were, then, men like Joseph L. Walton of San Rafael.

FOR JOE WALTON is a bridge-building man in the fullest sense of the term. Not only did he help bridge the Golden Gate, but he was also in, from start to finish, on the construction of the Bay Area's two other major spans—the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge and the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge.

But those are only three among many bridges he has helped to build throughout country. How many?

"Gosh, I wouldn't even try to guess," he says.

A hundred?

"Probably more than that."

Joe Walton began building bridges while still a high school student. Born in Industry, Pa., near Pittsburgh, he began working summer vacations on bridges and other construction jobs while a teen-ager. And immediately upon graduation from high school he plunged full-time into the work that was to become his career.

Now 57, he can look back upon more than four decades of hard, often hazardous, work as a builder.

He can reel off a lengthy list of bridges, buildings and other major construction projects in which he took part, and then add: "Of course, that's only a few of many."

But it's plain that the handsome span across the Golden Gate is his favorite.

"There's a real feeling of pride in knowing that you were part of the building of that bridge," he says. "Wherever you go, if you happen to mention that you worked on the Golden Gate, people sit up and take notice—even the old-timers in the construction business."

WHAT ARE SOME of the other jobs upon which Joe has toiled?

Offhand he can recall the Mathers Tower building in Chicago; the Point Bridge in Pittsburgh; the Rochester-Monaca Bridge over the Ohio River; the Charleroi, Pa., Bridge ("this was a triple truss cantilever with double deck, a magnificent structure"); the Sixth, Seventh and Ninth Street bridges over the Monongahela River in Pittsburgh; the Akron, Ohio, dirigible hangar; the Bayonne Arch Bridge ("the largest arch span in the world, it cost me three of my fingers"); U. S. Steel's Irvin Works continuous steel production plant in Pittsburgh; the new Dodge truck plant in Detroit; the head tower at Shasta Dam; the Polaski Skyway between Newark, N. J., and Jersey City; the Troy and Menanda Bridge across the Hudson River; the Federal Building in San Francisco.

Prior to World War II he worked at the Brooklyn Navy Yard for the American Bridge Co. in the extension of the overhead crane runways that was necessary to make possible the building of the battleship Missouri, and in the erection of a machine shop.

Twice construction jobs took him out of this country, both times to Abadan, Iran, on the Persian Gulf.

In February of 1939 he accepted a job with the M. W. Kellogg Co. of New York City which had the contract to construct bubble towers, catalytic plants and acid works at the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. Ltd. of London refinery at Abadan.

IT WAS NO picnic, Walton will assure you.

"That was blood money—the hardest-earned money of my life," he says. "The heat was so terrific, no one can even imagine it unless he has been there."

Nevertheless during World War II when the call went out again for men for vital refinery construction work in Iran, Walton volunteered for the assignment.

"I felt it was the best thing I could do for the war effort," he explains.

During his two stays in Iran he picked up the malaria bug and it still bothers him from time to time today.

It was the San Francisco-Oakland Bridge job that brought Joe Walton west. He was one of the first men hired for that project by the American Bridge Co. Did he ever harbor any doubts as to the feasibility of that gigantic undertaking?

"No," says Joe. "I had confidence in the American Bridge Co. and its engineers. They said it could be done. And they knew what they were talking about."

Walton had that same confidence when, the Bay Bridge completed, he moved over to the Golden Gate Bridge and went to work for the Bethlehem Steel Co.

He worked on the two big spans as a signal man, rigger and iron worker.

WERE THE MEN who built the Golden Gate Bridge any different from the men you would ordinarily find on a construction project?

Yes, says Joe, they were a special breed. The level of skill was extremely high.

"Most of the key men were brought in from the East because more bridges had been built there than out here in the West and experience was important," he says. "And for that same reason, most of those in the key jobs were middle-aged men."

There was also a special

Money And Securities Policy Can Provide A Merchant With Broad Coverage

A merchant writes for information about insurance that will protect his money and securities against most types of losses.

The broad form money and securities policy not only will cover his money and securities but will also insure merchandise on the premises against burglary from a locked safe, holdup on the premises or robbery from a show window smashed by a thief during business hours. The policy provides broad protection to money and securities while a messenger is transporting them. If the person is also carrying any merchandise or property and is held up such loss is also covered.

In addition, there would be coverage for all damage to property or premises as the result of anyone attempting to burglarize or hold up the shop. This would include damage to the cash register, cash drawers, damage to the safe or vault or damage to any part of the store as a result of someone trying to force his way in.

The best way to describe the broad protection offered is to say that it covers loss of money and securities from practically any cause, including destruction and disappearance, as well as burglary, robbery, larceny or holdup.

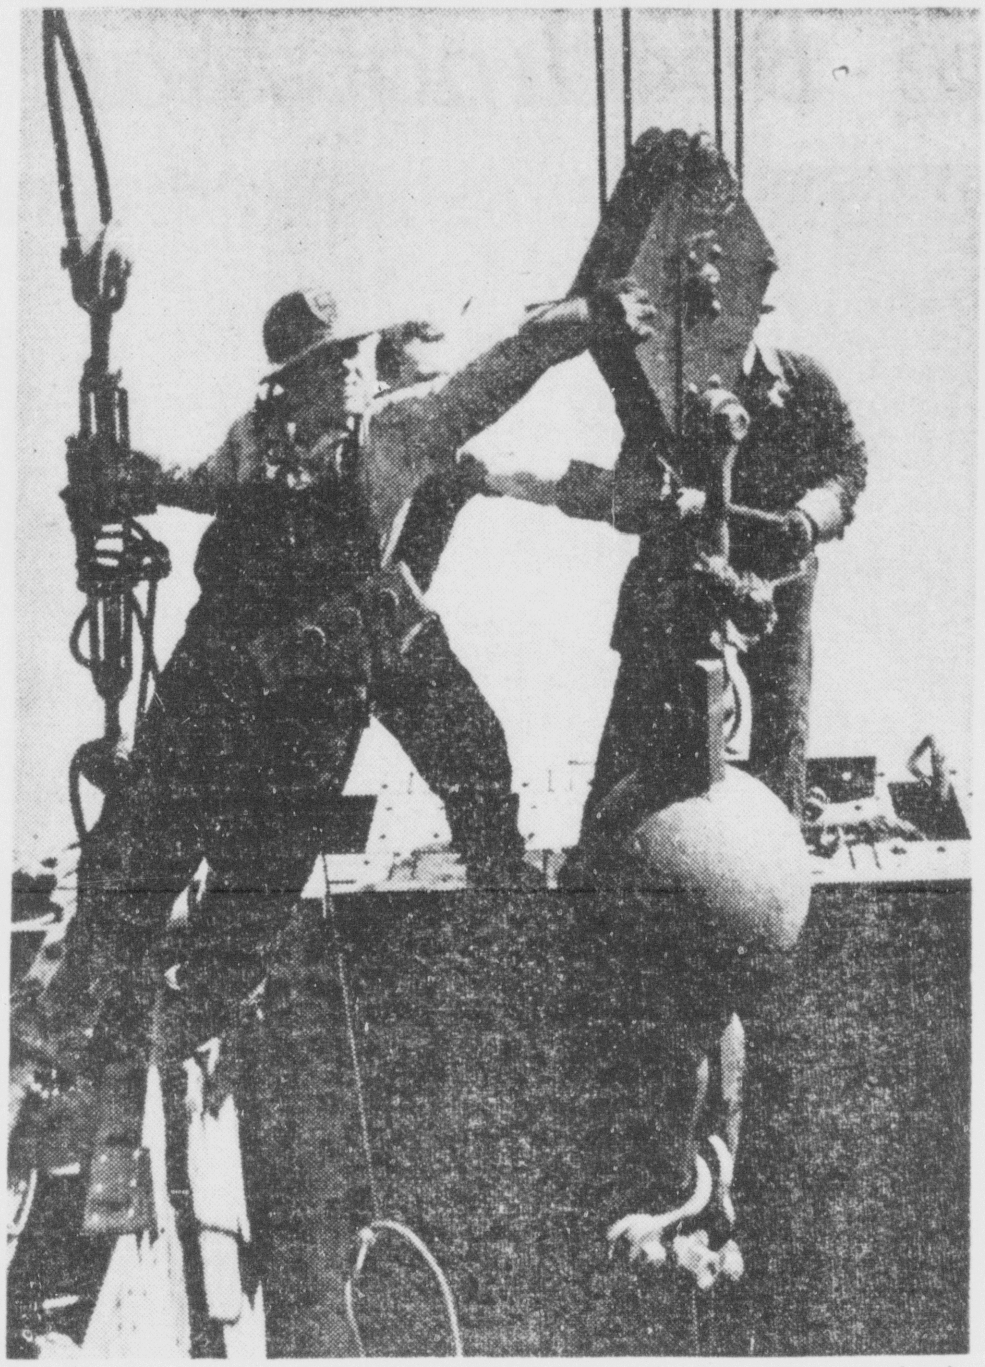

About the only things not covered are losses due to an act of war, insurrection, rebellion, nuclear fission or embezzlement.

The Special Breed Who Bridged The Golden Gate

comradeship and an enthusiasm among the men who built the Bay and Golden Gate bridges that are absent from the run-of-the-mill construction job, Walton says.

"This, I think, was because we all felt a special pride in taking a part in the building of these bridges," he says. "We knew the eyes of the whole world were upon us, watching our progress."

This, Walton feels, was a major factor in the relatively low turnover of personnel.

But realistically, he adds: "You want to also remember that this was during the depression. And a job had to be pretty bad before anyone left it—especially the men with families to support."

But despite hard times, he remembers, there were those few who reported for work and then, after a day or two, failed to show up again. It was just too much for them.

Was the Golden Gate Bridge work really more hazardous than other bridge construction jobs?

NOT ACCORDING to Walton. "Of course, the winds and the fog and the extreme height could make it tricky," he says. "But some of our jobs in the East had been much more dangerous. Wind and fog aren't half as bad as snow, ice and sleet."

The Bay Bridge did, on occasion, however, present a special problem of its own.

"I can remember one day we were working up on tower No. 2," Joe relates. "And down on the Embardero, the strike was on. There was rioting, and tear gas was being used. And the wind was just right so that it carried the gas up to where we were working and held it there.

"Man, I'm telling you, we could hardly see. It was really tough going up there that day."

By no means does Walton minimize the dangers faced by the men who bridged the Golden Gate and the Bay. "Any job of that magnitude is certain to take its toll," he says. "It is part of working in our trade."

The element of ever-present danger is the main reason Joe Walton is happy that none of his three sons plans to following their dad's footsteps as a bridge builder.

"I don't want them to build bridges," he says. "It's too hazardous and too hard a life. I've seen too many of my buddies killed and maimed."

He has a scrapbook of photographs and newspaper clippings from his various construction jobs.

He can point to a picture of himself and seven smiling cronies high up on a tower. "I'm the only one of the eight alive now," he will tell you. "All seven of the others are dead. Not a one died a natural death. And they were fine men, too."

And as you thumb through the scrapbook with him he will pick out still other friends who died in falls or were crushed beneath machinery and steel.

Joe has had his own share of narrow escapes. While helping to move the "traveler" at the top of the arch of the Bayonne Bridge back in 1930 he lost three fingers when his hand was caught in the hemp lines. That was his most serious mishap.

And while he was laboring on the Golden Gate Bridge, a part of a stiff legged derrick toppled, bowling Walton over and killing a friend who was working nearby.

"THAT WAS the second time I was ever in San Rafael —when I came to Keaton's Mortuary for the inquest," he says.

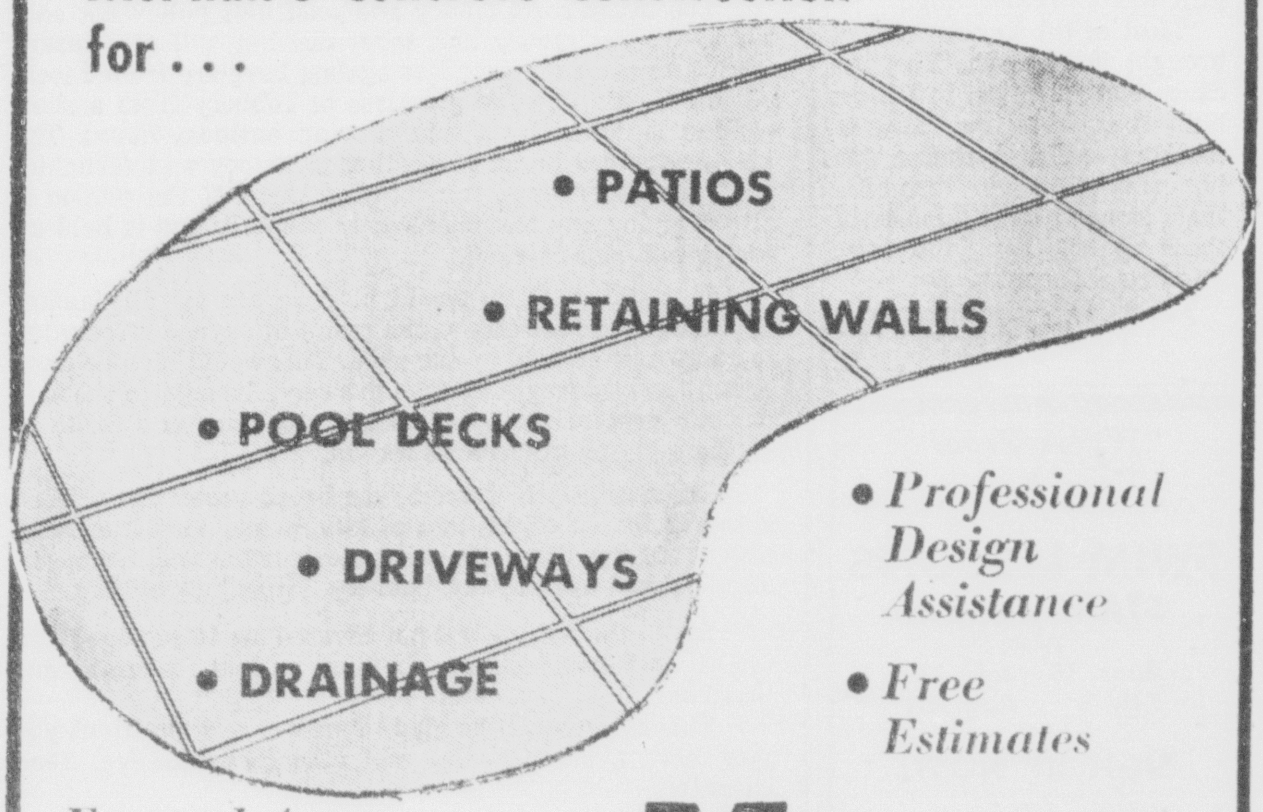

His first visit to San Rafael had also been a mission of sadness and a result of the hazards of the construction trade. A friend had been critically injured while working on construction at Hamilton Field and Walton hurried to the hospital in San Rafael to give a blood transfusion. The effort proved futile.

It was in 1936 that Walton married a San Rafael girl, Doris Warner. For a time they lived in San Francisco, but since 1939 they have resided in San Rafael. They make their home at 902 Mission Avenue with two of their four children and Mrs. Walton's widowed mother.

The Walton's oldest daughter, Sandra Mae, now 23, won national all-America homemaker honors and a $5,000 scholarship while attending San Rafael High School. She graduated from the University of California at Davis, and is now director of home service at Pomona for the Southern California Gas Co.

The Men Who Built The Span

They're Typified By Joe Walton Of San Rafael

Oldest son Richard I. Walton, 22, attended College of Marin and San Francisco City College and is now employed by Baker Hamilton Co. in San Francisco with plans for becoming a wholesale salesman.

Joe, 18, is a senior at San Rafael High; Jack, 15, a freshman at the same school.

Twice since the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge, Joe Walton has returned to that structure for further work. Once, a few years back, he helped repair storm damage and strengthen the great span. Just recently he was working for the R. C. Mahon Co. of Torrence in erecting steel for the new lane on the Marin side.

When he reported for work with Mahon, Walton had a pleasant surprise. His superintendent turned out to be Al Erbie, a fellow member of his work gang during the building of the San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge. They had not seen each other since that job and the two old-timers enjoyed the reunion.

YOUNG JOE WALTON posed with some of his pals during a break in their work while they were building the Rochester-Monaca Bridge over the Ohio River in Pennsylvania. Too many of these old friends have died in mishaps in their hazardous occupation, Walton mourns.

FOR WHILE Joe Walton regards the kind of construction work he has done as "a rough go," he also makes it clear that the toil has not been without its compensations. One such reward is the comradery that exists among the workers.

"Perhaps it's the element of danger which we share," Walton speculates. "Or the fact that we all get kicks from knowing that we are building something solid and substantial. Anyway, it is the truth that you make a good many fine friendships on every job. You keep in contact with most of them, even though you are scattered over the face of the earth. And it's a good feeling to know you have such friends."

Then, he adds soberly, "on the other hand, it makes it hurt all the more when you read about a fatal construction accident somewhere."

Joe Walton also enjoys the outdoor aspect of construction work. This liking for being out in the open under the sky is reflected in his hobbies of fishing and hunting.

It is a paradox that while Joe Walton holds no brief for bridge building as a way of life and wishes that he had devoted his own life to some less demanding trade, he nevertheless looks back upon his years of hard work with considerable relish.

AND HE FACES the future, with all of its perils, with something akin to enthusiasm.

Asked if he has considered going east to work on the new bridge being built across the Narrows of New York Bay from Brooklyn to Staten Island (its completion next year will make it, instead of the Golden Gate Bridge, the world's longest single span bridge), Walton admits:

"Well, you know, I've given that some thought.

"You know the superintendent there for American Bridge Co., Vic Vogel, is a fellow I worked with long ago in the East and I liked him a lot. So I wouldn't have any trouble getting on.

"But there are a lot of reasons for not moving East. And it would be tough work.

"Still, the call is there."

THIS TANGLED WRECKAGE of a fallen derrick on the Golden Gate Bridge construction job almost cost Joe Walton his life. It did kill another workman who was busy nearby.

Thousands Of Tons Of Steel Went Into Building Of Bridge

Bethlehem Awarded The Largest Single Contract Of Big Project

The largest single contract in the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge was held by Bethlehem Steel Co.

That contract: $10,696,562 for the fabricating and erection of the two towers and steel roadway superstructure.

EACH OF THE bridge's two towers is made up of two legs, with steel struts or cross braces tying them together. Each tower is made up of a number of cells, or hollow squares, fabricated from steel plates and angles. There are 97 cells in the cross section of the base of each tower, with the number decreasing to 21 at the top.

Steel for the towers was rolled at Bethlehem's eastern mills and fabricated at the company's fabricating works in Pottstown and Steelton, Pa. Weighing from 45 to 80 tons apiece, the cellular sections were then shipped by rail to Philadelphia and by boat from there through the Canal to Bethlehem's Alameda Works. Here they were assembled and stored until required, then barged to the tower site.

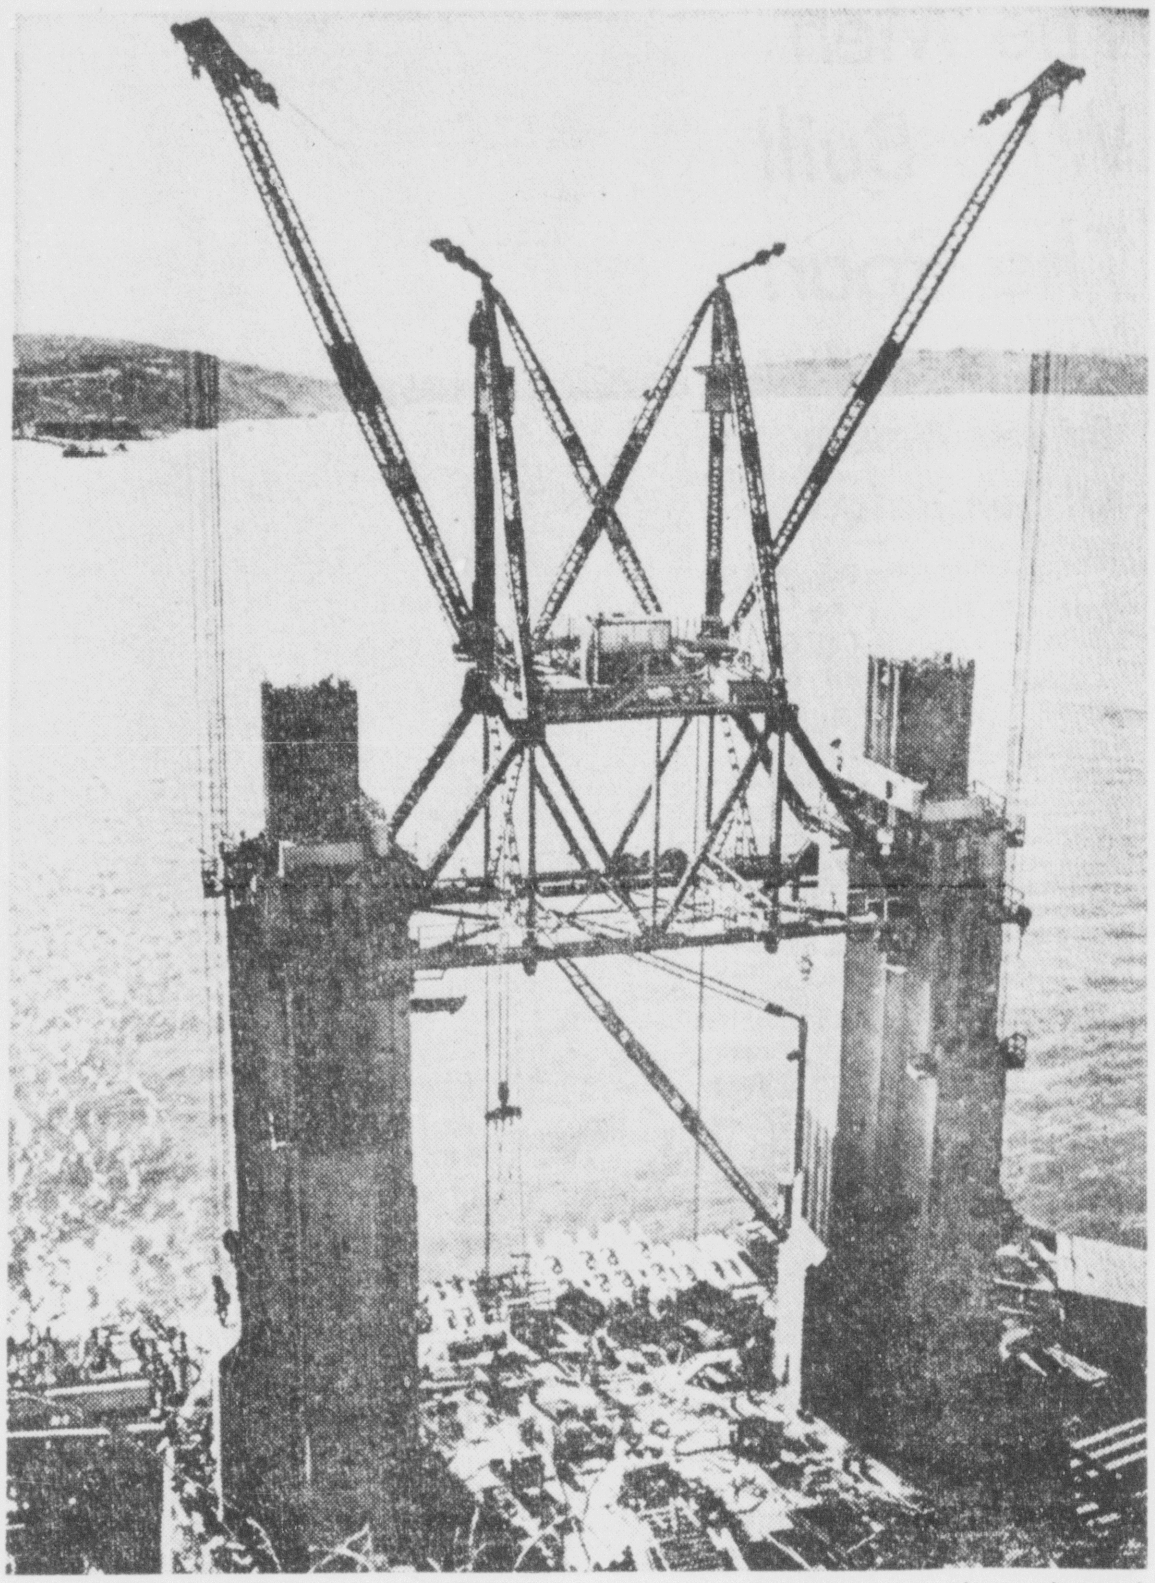

Before pencil was put to drawing board for the final design on the tower sections, however, Bethlehem engineers, using wooden blocks cut to scale, determined their exact size. This was so the two booms on the erection traveler, which would hoist them into position, would have proper clearance.

Erection of the tower sections, involving a total of some 44,000 tons of steel, was accomplished by means of an erection traveler supporting two 90-foot booms which lifted sections from the pier, then lowered them into position for riveting.

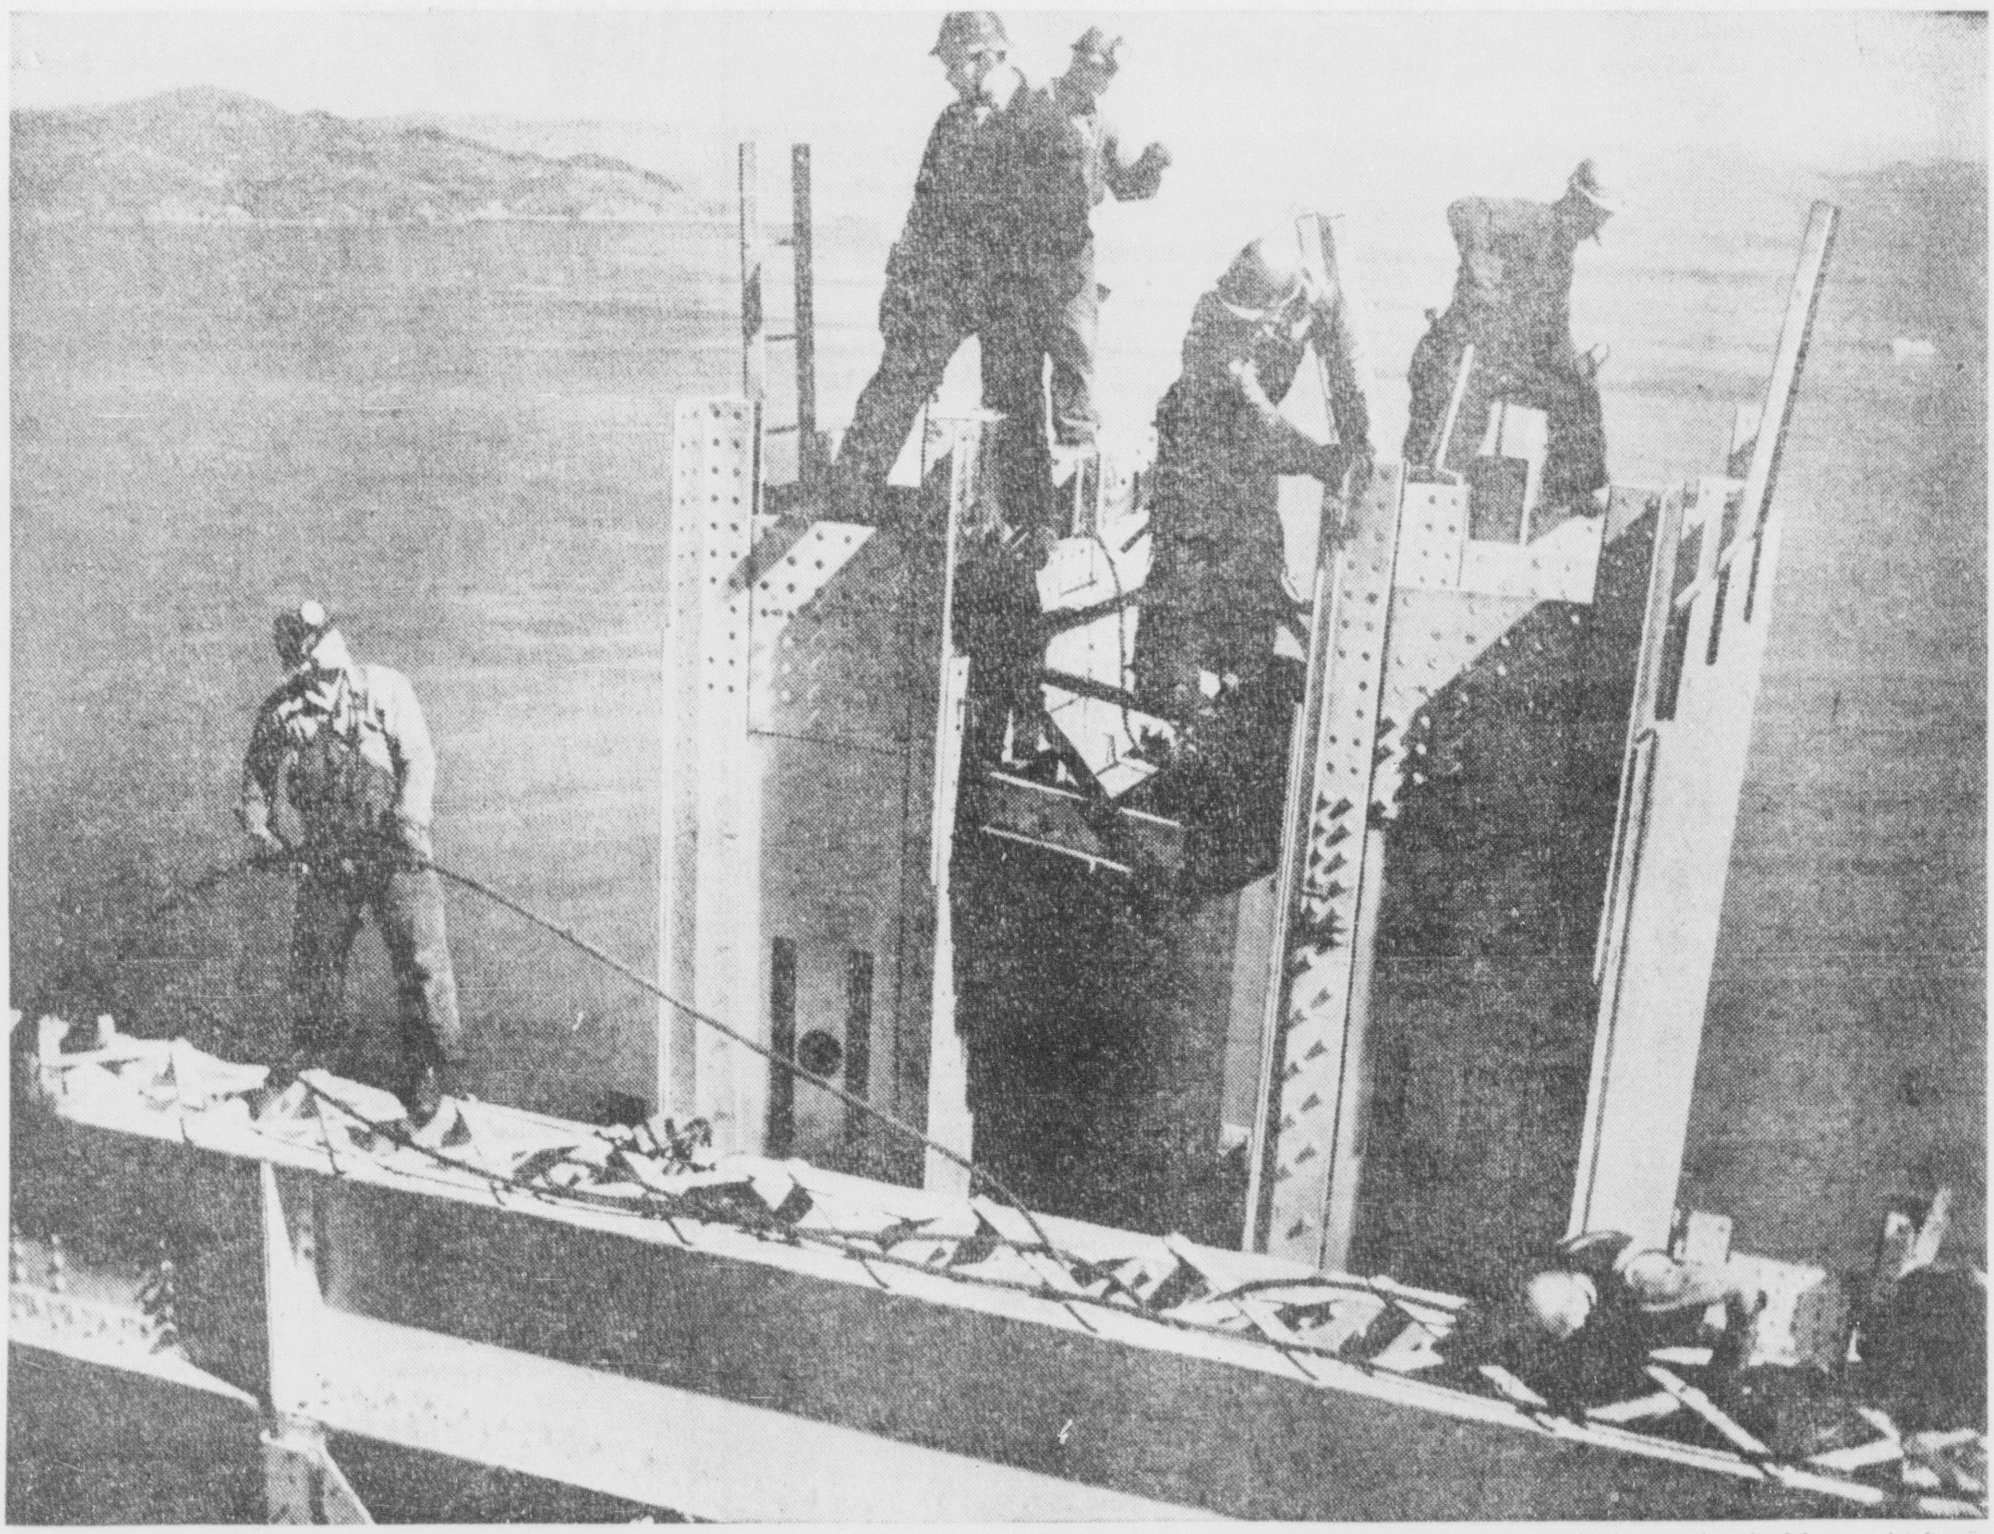

As the tower legs progressed upward, the traveler was raised or "jumped" to higher levels between the two tower legs. The Marin tower was completed in November of 1934, and the San Francisco tower some seven months later.

AFTER THE towers were erected and the cables spun, the final major portion of Bethlehem's job began—erection of the stiffening trusses and floor making up the roadway superstructure. Fabricated steel sections comprising this important part of the

THE TRAVELER was in position to lift and assemble the Bethlehem steel for both legs of the south tower of the Golden Gate Bridge when this photo was taken in 1934. After putting up as much steel as the booms could reach, the traveler then lifted itself to a higher position—and so on up the tower.

STEEL STRETCHED OUTWARD from both sides of each of the bridge towers as the roadway was built section by section. To keep the huge structure in proper balance, the steel roadway was built from both sides of each tower at the exact same rate of progress. (Bethlehem Steel Co. photos)

AND THEN THE STEEL from both the north and south sides met and were joined high over the water. And the Golden Gate was bridged! It was a monumental accomplishment for the workmen who had struggled against great odds to bring about what many had regarded as the impossible.

Steel For Bridging The Gate

job were erected by traveling derricks moving outward from each side of each tower at the same time and at the same rate of speed so as to keep the structure in balance.

Erection of this suspended portion of the bridge started on June 18, 1936, and by December of that year, all suspended steel was erected.

SINCE THE official opening of the bridge over the Golden Gate on May 27, 1937, the huge span has stood unchallenged as the world's largest single-span suspension bridge, a tribute to American engineering prowess.

Sometime in 1963, however, it will lose that title.

For then the Verrazano-Narrows Bridge from Brooklyn to Staten Island, New York, is to be completed. And it will exceed by 60 feet the length of the 4,200 foot Golden Gate span.

BETHLEHEM Steel Co., incidentally, is fabricating and erecting steel for the Staten Island tower and approaches for the New York bridge just as it did for the Bay Area's.

But even with the completion of the New York span next year, Bay Area residents will remain convinced that their bridge, if no longer the longest, is still the grandest.

THINK THE WORK of a Golden Gate Bridge tolltaker such as Ray Alexander, shown here, might be monotonous? Anything but that, the tolltakers will tell you. The bridge is the scene of an unending stream of amusing human interest incidents. (Independent-Journal photo)

On The Gate Bridge, Anything Can—And Often Does—Happen

What would you do if you found a boat on the Golden Gate Bridge?

If a monkey handed you the toll?

With a wistful phone call from 3,000 miles away to find out if the fog had rolled in?

With a priest who forgot his wallet?

It happens every day on the Golden Gate Bridge.

"The facts are certainly funnier than fiction," says Capt. Edward R. Moore of the bridge toll-collecting force, a veteran of 22 years of service who has made a hobby of collecting humorous and unusual incidents on the big span.

Here are some of the occurrences out of Capt. Moore's factual log book:

OFFICERS found one man dazedly wandering around the bridge looking for his wife. "She's in the trailer and I lost it," he explained. The men found the trailer stalled and separated from the auto in the fog at mid-span.

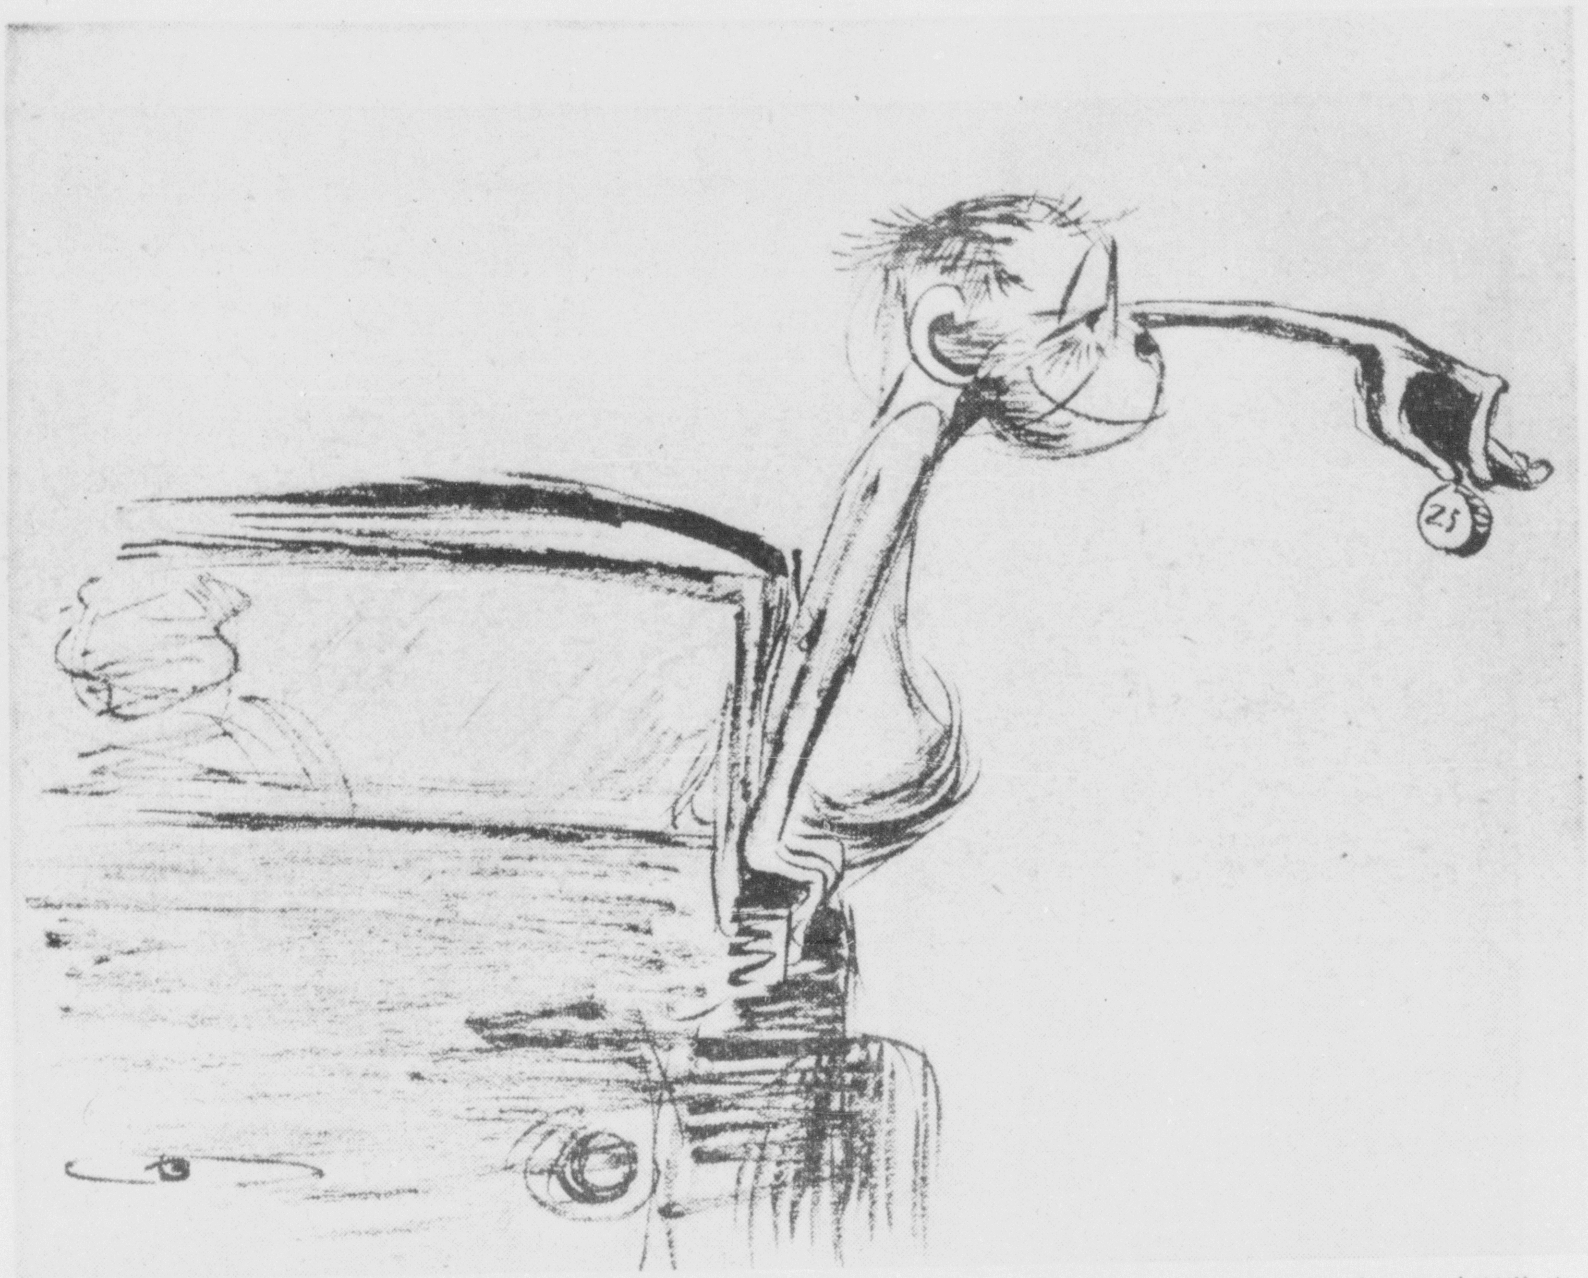

In another incident a motorist was happily puffing along in his auto up the Waldo Grade after competing in motorboat races in Monterey. Tuning in the radio he heard a call going out asking the man who had left a 24-foot speedboat on the Golden Gate Bridge to kindly pick it up. The man looked to the rear and beyond his trailer hitch: no boat. The boat on the bridge was his.

The bridge maintains a free emergency towing service and finds all sorts of customers. Like the man who ran out of gas in the middle of the commuter crush between 5 and 7 p.m.

"But I put two gallons of gas in this morning," he moaned.

Most startled tolltaker on the bridge was the gentleman who smilingly reached out for the quarter and was handed the fare by a monkey. A passenger, not a driver, Moore hastens to add.

Children, who, given the money to pay the toll by a proud parent but suddenly become midget misers and refuse to yield it up form a minor problem, Moore laughs.

A Marin County priest, who like many had switched suits and left his wallet at home, was embarrassed, but passed through with a friendly out-of-pocket loan by a toll collector. The next day the officer received his 25 cents in the mail with a note: "If you are ever in my church when they pass the collection plate, pass it by—it will be on the house."

Other "no fund" incidents are equally bizzare, Moore points out.

ONE HUGE truck and trailer did not have the money and left a bundle of flares worth $40 as security. A month later the police arrived for the flares. The big truck and trailer had been stolen.

Drivers without funds must sign a pledge to return the money or leave an article of value as security. Captain Moore has a collection of tires, knives, wristwatches, books, rings, alarm clocks, tools and miscellania that would do credit to a pawn shop. When it threatens to overflow out of the office onto the toll plaza, a public auction is held.

ONE PARENT caused a king-sized traffic jam while she waited for Junior in the rear seat to empty a piggy bank of the required number of pennies for the 25-cent toll.

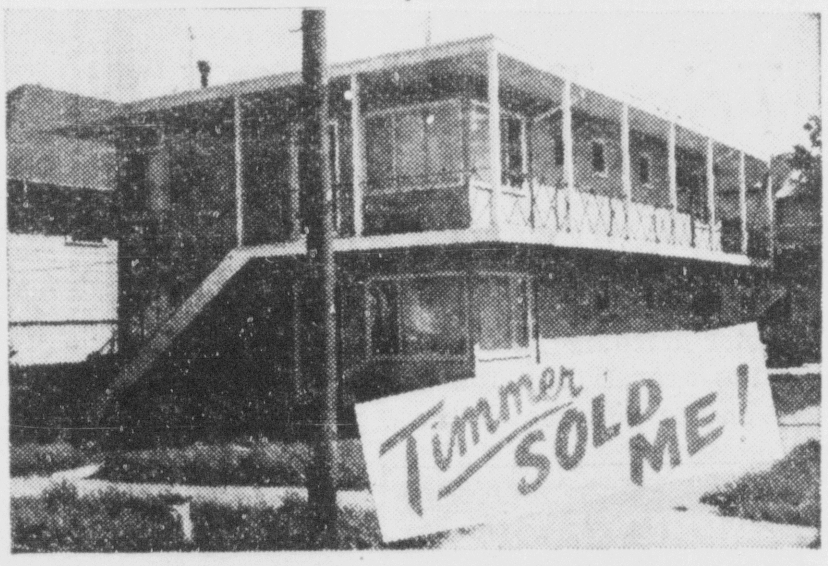

The automatic toll collecting devices, too, come up with their share of bottle-tops, slugs, foreign currency and even thank-you notes. One young lady passes the coin to the collector between her naked toes.

But the best comes when the parent gives the coin to the child to hand to the collector. Junior naturally drops it a half mile before the toll gate. The smiling parent gestures to the bewildered toll collector, "It's back there!"

When The Bridge Was Being Built

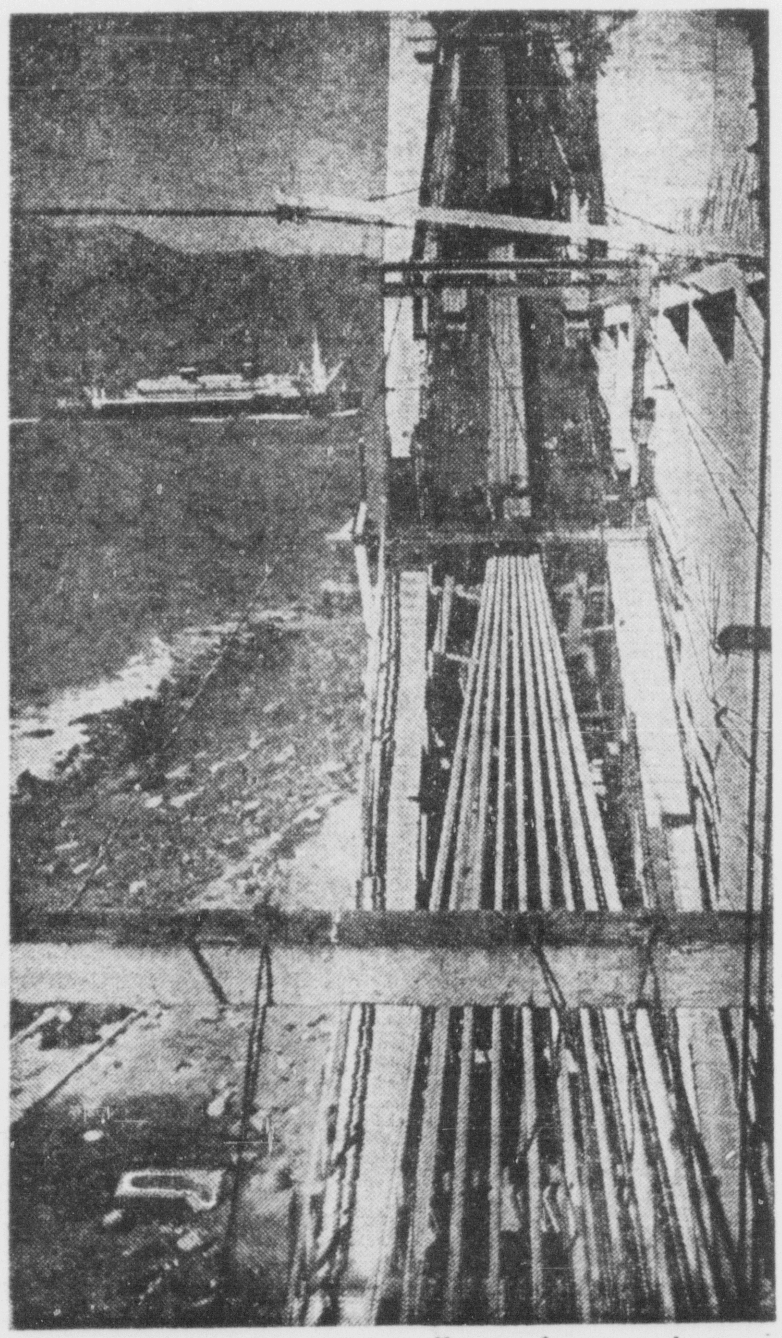

IT WAS SUNSET over the Golden Gate when Ted Huggins took this photo of the great bridge. The catwalk stretching from tower to tower is seen here. The ship that can be seen passing below is a tanker.

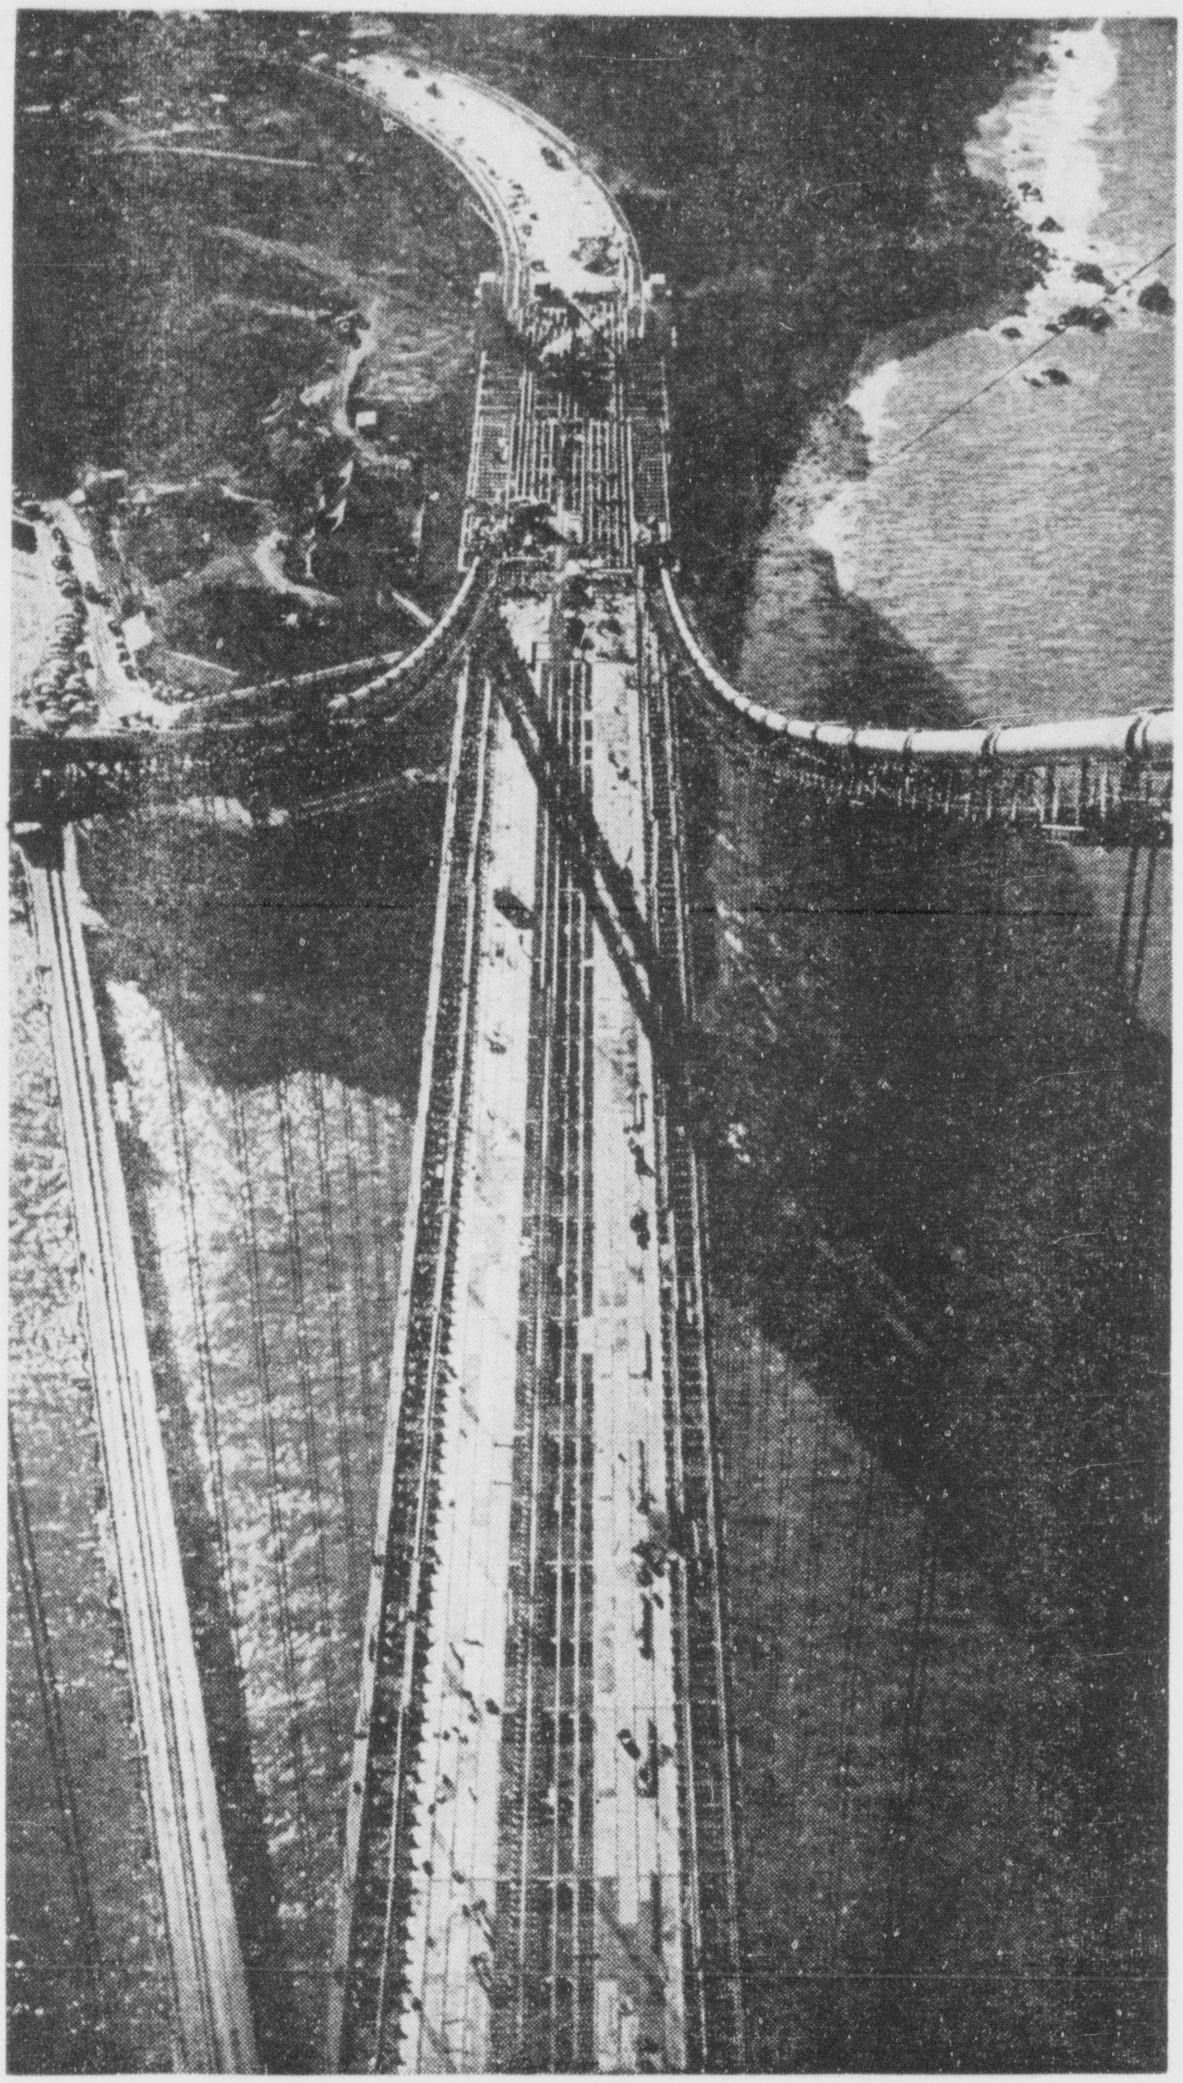

WORKING AT THE EDGE of the bridge, this man was wrapping the vertical supporting cables of the huge span. (Photo by Ted Huggins)

MEN WERE IN THE NET when this picture was taken. However, they were not victims of falls. They had apparently gone down into the safety net to recover dropped tools. Other men, however, did slip from the bridge works and have their lives saved by the nets.

BIRTHDAY PARTY SCHEDULE

The assembling of the largest collection of pre-1937 classic and vintage automobiles in Northern California history will be a feature of tomorrow's big "birthday party" for the Golden Gate Bridge.

The cars will be on display at a concours at Vista Point from 1 to 2 p.m.

Anniversary ceremonies will begin at 1:45 p.m. in the parking lot plaza on the San Francisco side of the bridge.

The vintage cars will parade across the bridge under California Highway Patrol escort and pass through the area where the anniversary rites are being held at the close of those ceremonies.

For the first time in some time pedestrian walkways on both the east and west sides of the bridge will be open tomorrow.

THE POWERFUL BRACING and underbeams that are required for a bridge project on the scale of the mighty Golden Gate Bridge are visible in this construction photo.

Highlights In The Life Of Golden Gate Bridge

Golden Gate Bridge highlights:

1918—City of San Francisco authorized a survey designed to determine the feasibility of bridging the Golden Gate, 5,357 feet wide at its narrowest part, to permit easier access to and from the Redwood Empire.

1920—Survey, in which the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey cooperated, submitted and project proposals requested from Joseph B. Strauss and two other consulting engineers.

1921—Strauss submitted a preliminary sketch of bridge to be built at an estimated cost of $27,000,000, not including interest during construction period.

1923—First public meeting called in San Francisco to discuss ways and means of building bridge. Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District Act becomes law.

1928—Bridge district incorporated after years of litigation.

1929—First board of directors seated. Strauss named chief engineer.

1930—War Department grants permission to build bridge. Electors in various counties of district approve $35,000,000 bond issue.

1933—Construction begins on Jan. 5. Ship groping in fog crashes into trestle extending from San Francisco shore. Later, storm carries away 800 feet of trestle.

1937—Golden Gate Bridge Fiesta staged as span opened to pedestrian traffic on May 27. More than 200,000 persons visited the bridge this date.

1951—On Dec. 1 bridge was closed to traffic for three hours when it was buffeted by winds of gale force. Subsequently $3,000,000 was spent to increase lateral bracing to increase the torsional rigidity of the span by 35 per cent.

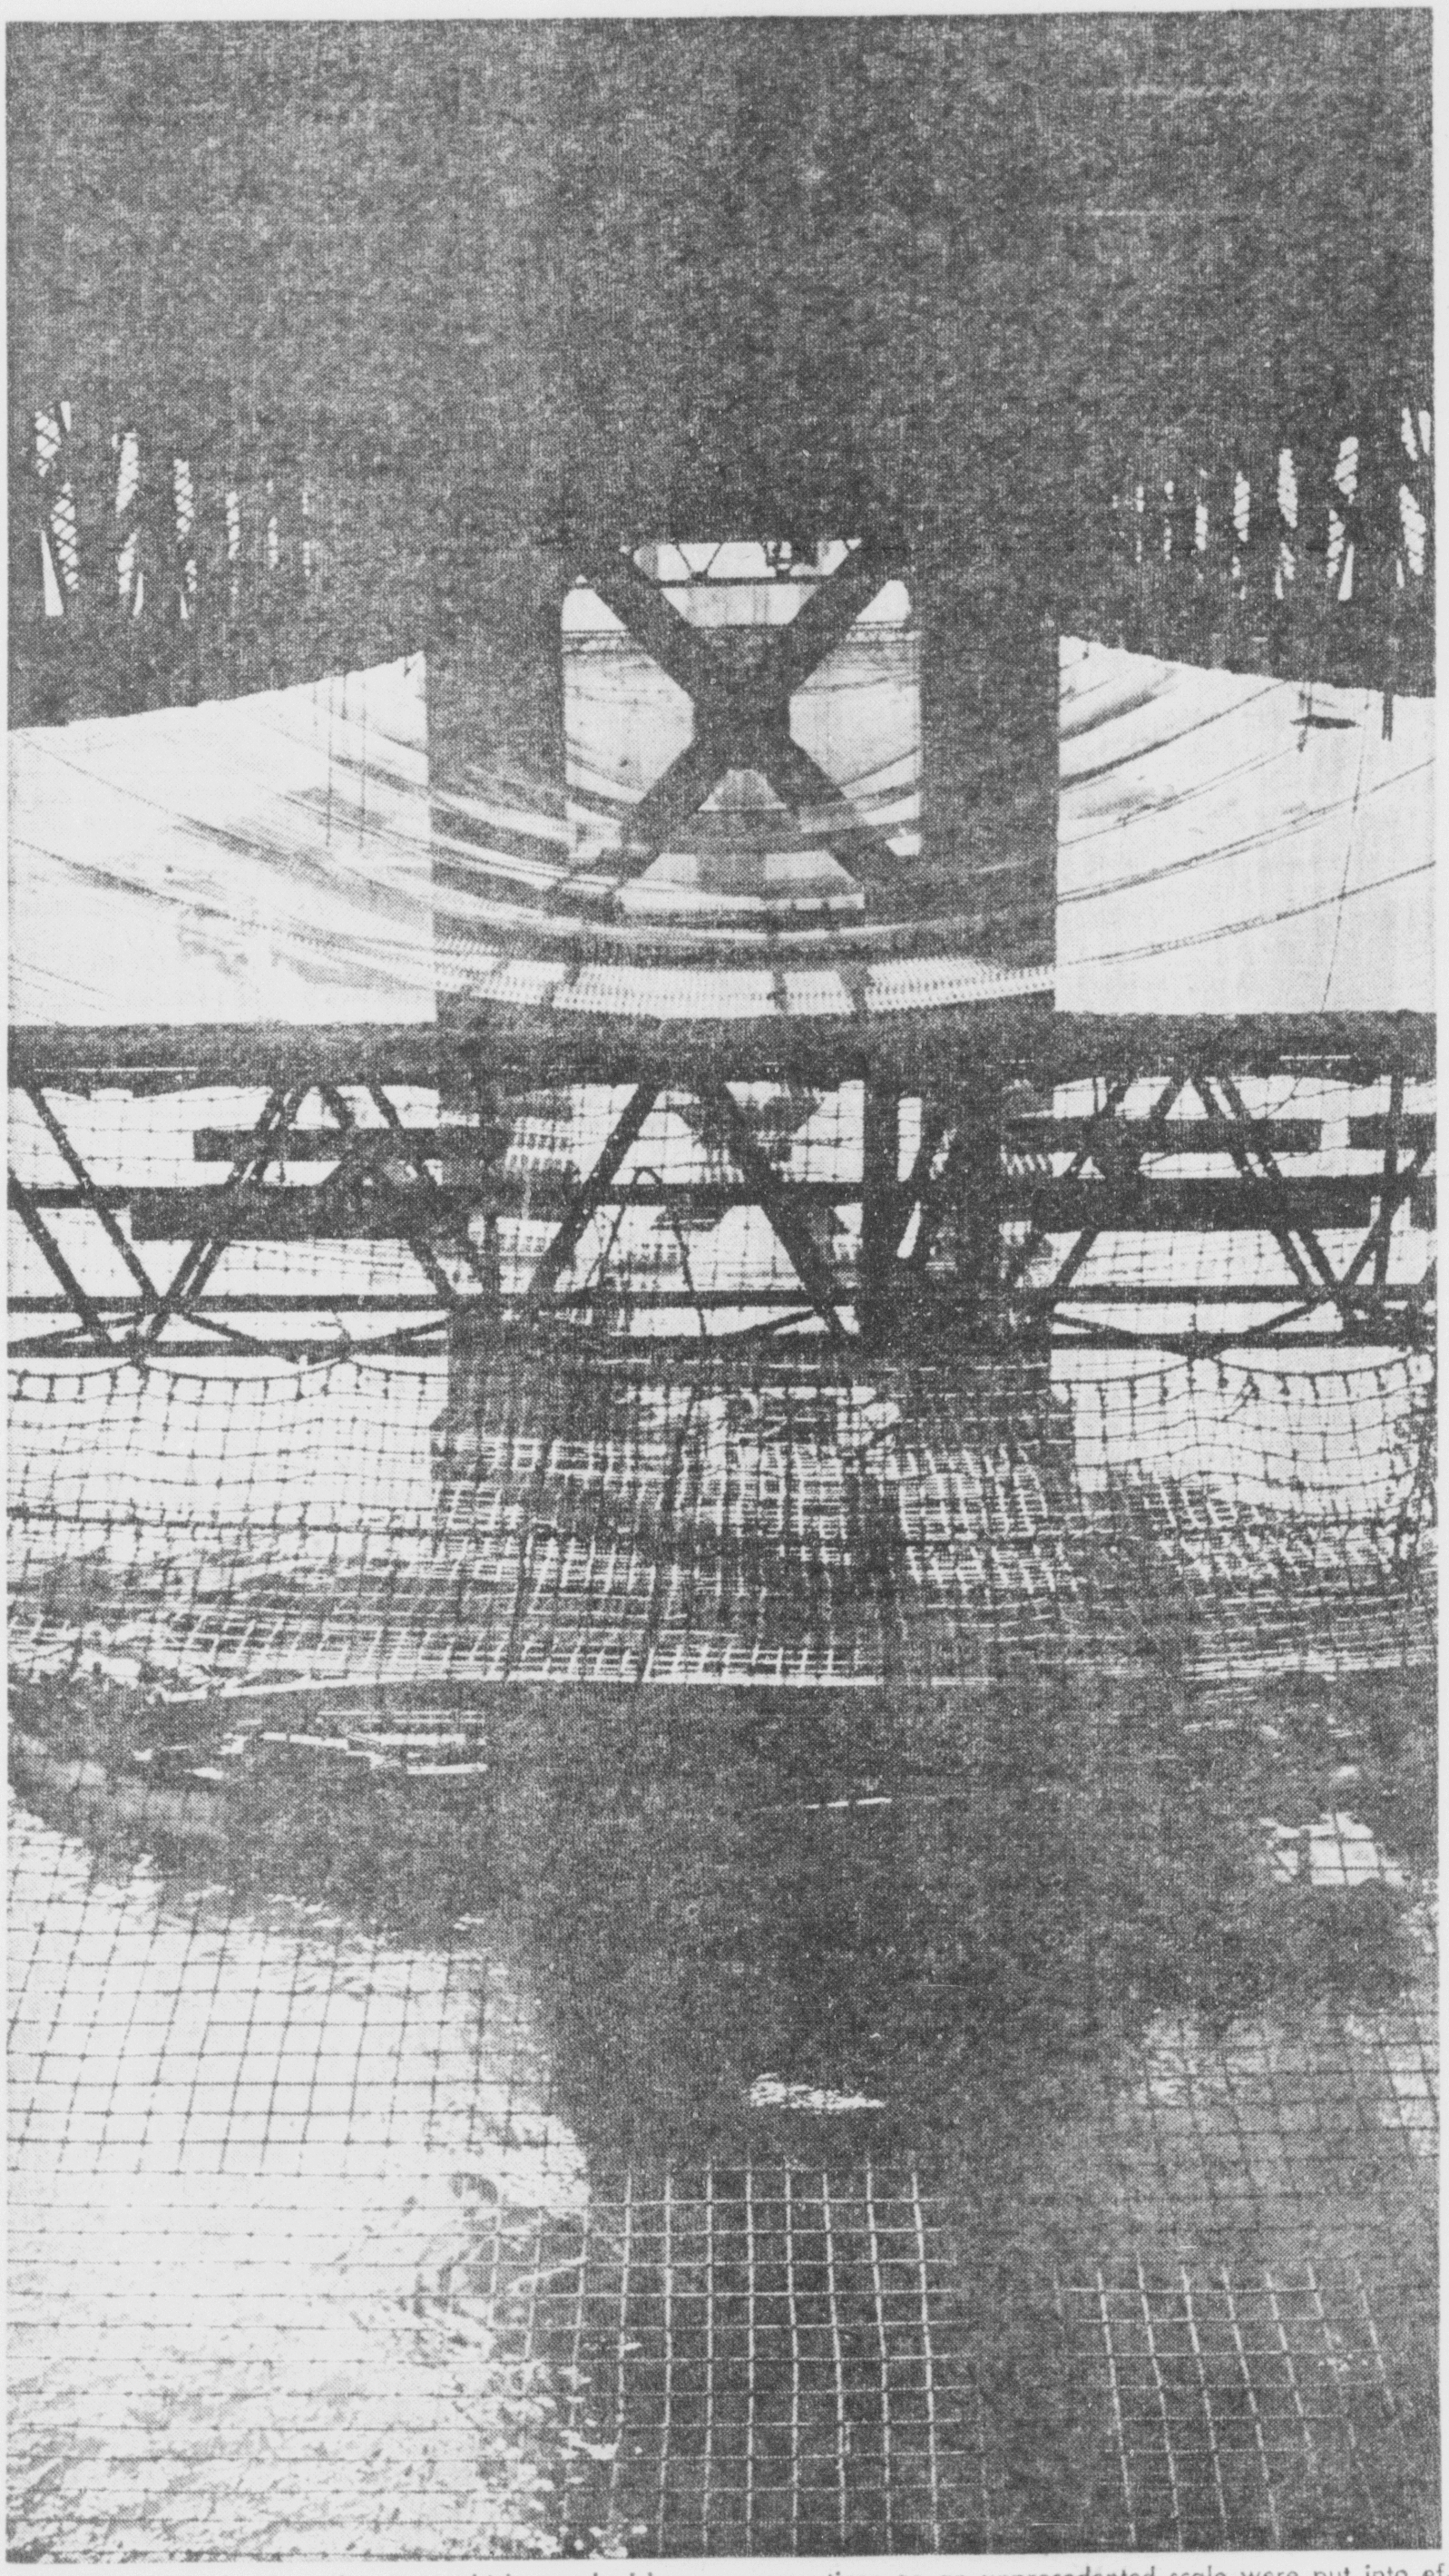

1958—On Aug. 3 a record for a single day was established when 67,411 vehicles crossed the bridge.

1959—On June 21 a new record was set when 70,588 motor vehicles crossed the bridge in a single day, a record since surpassed.

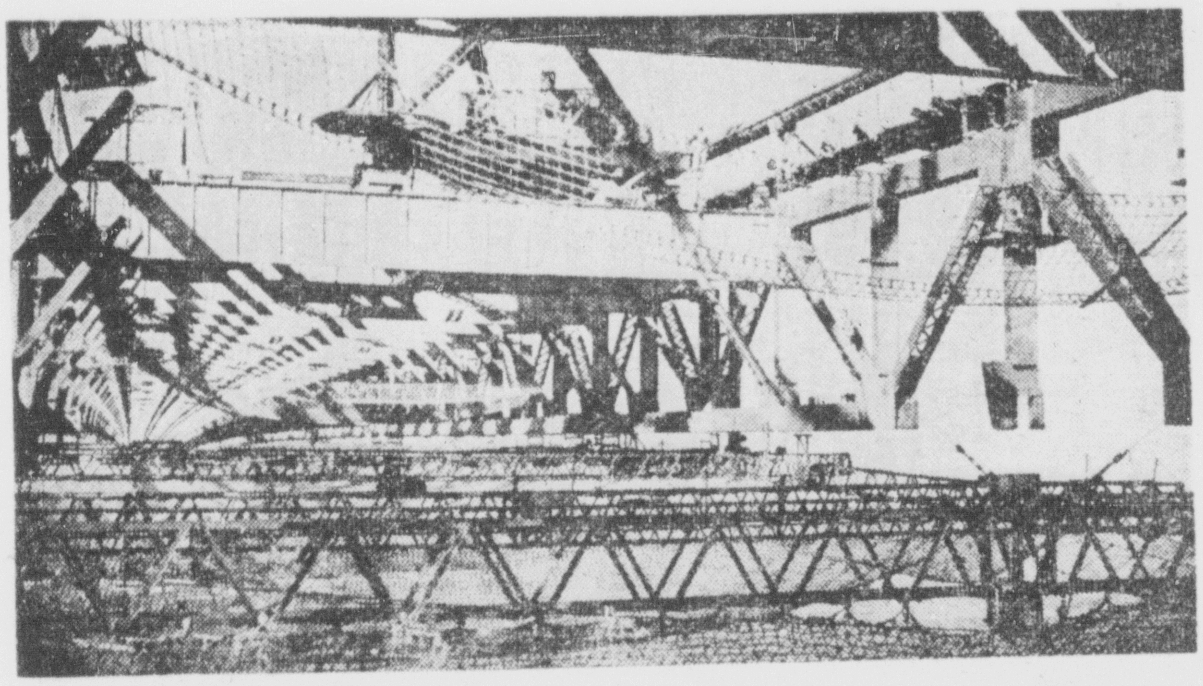

1962—Tomorrow, May 27, the Golden Gate Bridge observes its 25th birthday.

Men Risked Their Lives To Build The Greatest Bridge In The World

LIVES WERE SAVED by the safety nets which stretched below the workmen who built the Golden Gate Bridge. Safety precautions on an unprecedented scale were put into effect in the construction of the bridge. But even these could not prevent some tragic loss of life. (Photo by Ted Huggins)

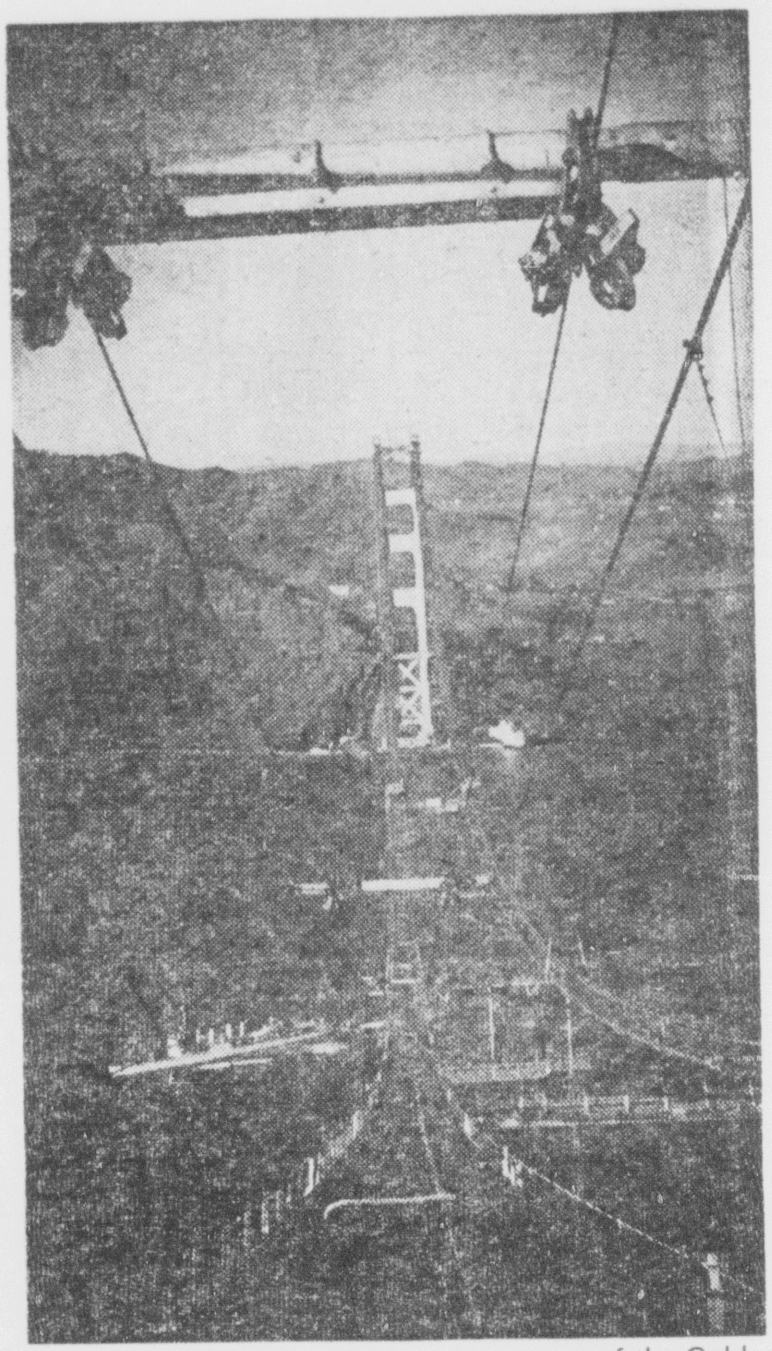

TOP PHOTO — This is an excellent view of the understructure of the Golden Gate Bridge while the span was under construction. Shown are some of the thousands of tons of steel which went into the huge span.

MIDDLE PHOTO—If you were bothered by height, then the Golden Gate Bridge's construction was no job for you. The workmen frequently, as part of a routine work day, were called upon to perform such feats as this. The San Francisco - Oakland Bay Bridge can be seen in the distant background.

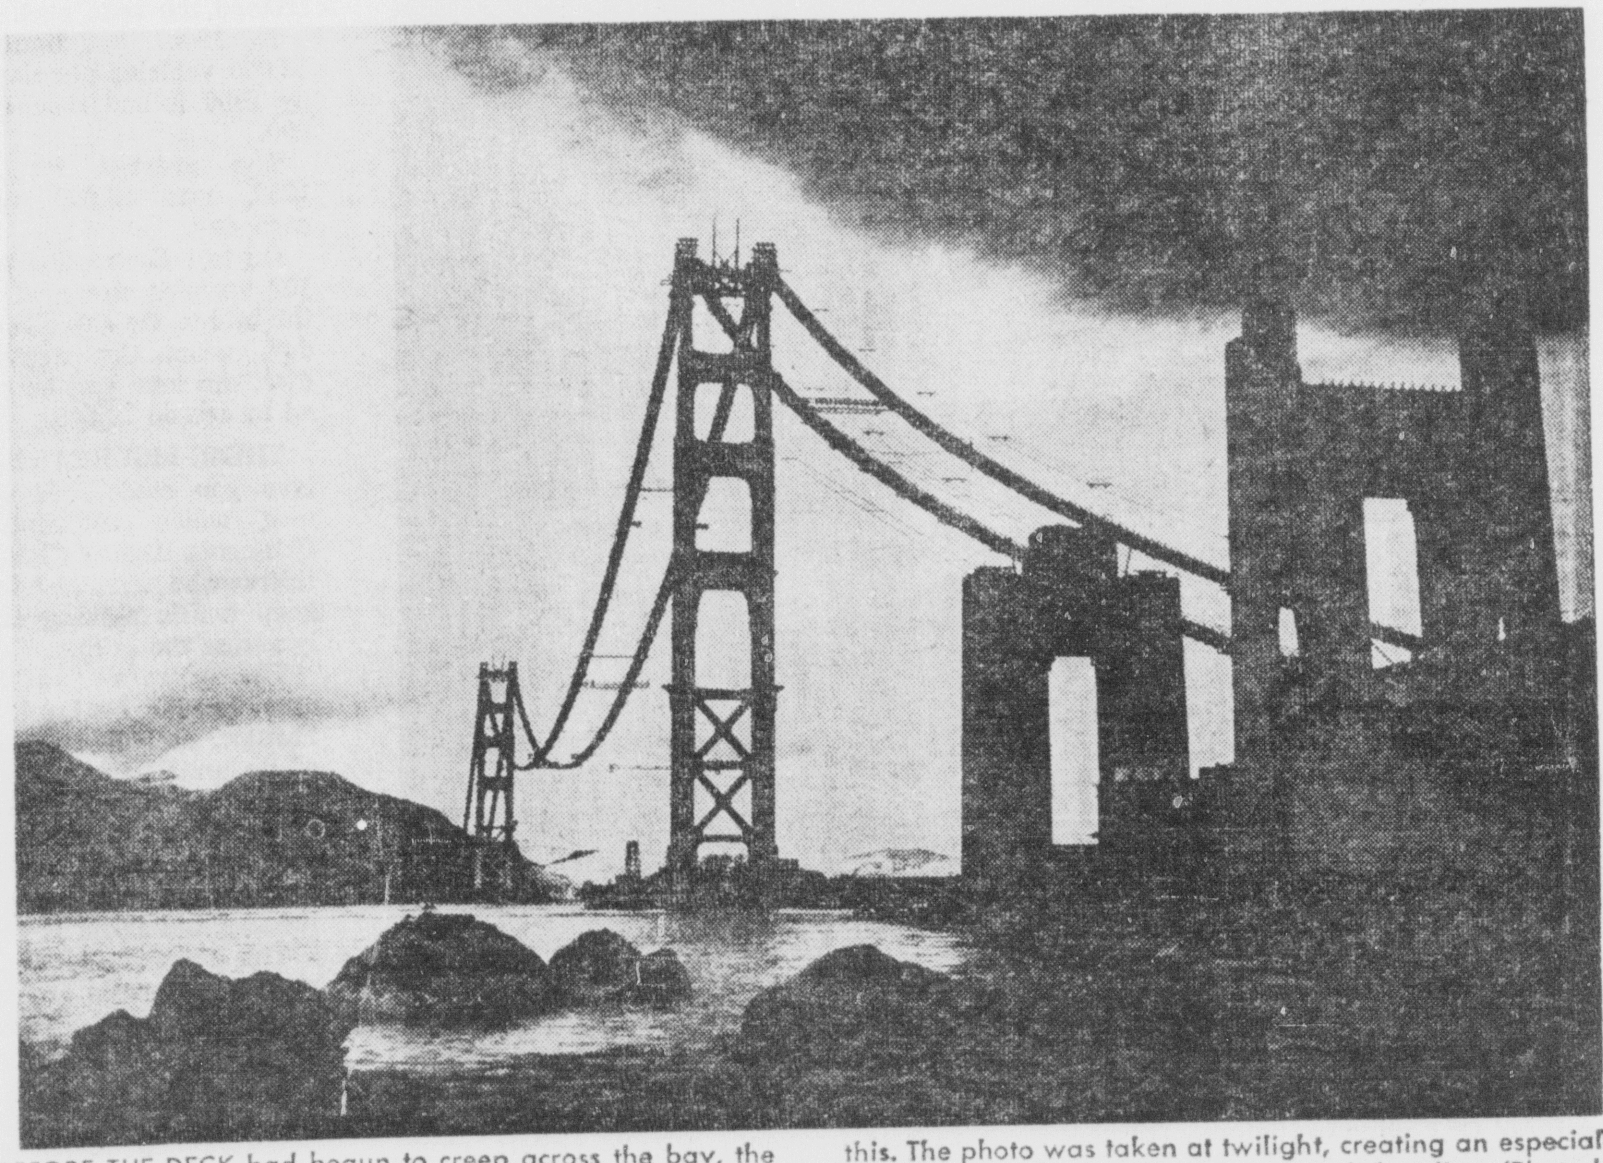

BOTTOM PHOTO — The final paint-up of the Golden Gate Bridge was under way when this photograph was taken. They were getting ready for the big day — the opening of the bridge which took place on May 27, 1937, when the span was opened to pedestrians. Vehicles first crossed the bridge the following day. All three photographs were taken by Ted Huggins for Standard Oil.

Engineering Feat Won Admiration From Many Who Had Scoffed

A CALIFORNIA HIGHWAY PATROL car makes one of its regular patrols of the Golden Gate Bridge during the morning hours. The driver is alert not only for stalled vehicles, accidents and traffic law violators, but also for potential suicides among the drivers and pedestrians. The patrol has thwarted many such plans for death leaps. (Independent-Journal photos by Bob Hax)

A TEAM OF California Highway Patrol officers, working the night shift, pauses at Vista Point to observe passing traffic. Vista Point is also the place where the patrol officers frequently provide visitors, many of them from out of state, with information and advice on traveling matters and sightseeing.

Their Job: To Keep The Traffic Flowing Across The Bridge

By DON KEOWN

When the Golden Gate Bridge opened 25 years ago, an average of 9,700 vehicles crossed the span each day.

By 1940, that figure was 13,000 vehicles per day. And by 1950 it had reached 27,000.

The average for April, 1962, was 57,000 vehicles each day.

On last Easter Sunday 74,107 vehicles streamed across the bridge. On any given Sunday, when the weather is nice, the total can be expected to exceed 70,000.

THESE FIGURES should give you some idea of the task which confronts the California Highway Patrol officers who are assigned to keep traffic moving smoothly across the bridge.

The patrol's San Rafael area, headed by Capt. T. F. Parnow, assigns one or two of its units to patrolling the bridge and its approaches 24 hours of every day of the year. During night hours, two men occupy each car. During the day, the driver is alone.

The schedule is arranged so that two units are always on duty during the peak traffic hours—7 to 9 a.m. and 4 to 6:30 p.m.

And while the officer or officers from one patrol car are eating their meals, the second unit is always on the job.

Patrol officers assigned to the bridge work out of a special suboffice located at the east side of the plaza at the bridge's toll lanes.

During a single shift, they will travel from 100 to 150 miles, crossing the big span as many as 25 or 30 times and running up the remainder of that mileage on the approaches.

The patrol likes to rotate the bridge assignment among its officers so that all can become familiar with the special problems posed by such duty.

Those duties are many and varied. But the principal goals are accident prevention and the maintenance of a smooth flow of traffic. And the most effective means of achieving these objectives, the patrol has learned, is to "weed out" problem drivers before they can create problems.

Patrol officers work closely with the bridge's tolltakers in eliminating drunken drivers from the traffic. Toll men notify the patrol of drivers from San Francisco whom they suspect to be intoxicated. And with fast work, the tipsy ones are picked up at the lanes before they get out onto the bridge proper.

An especially careful watch is maintained on holidays.

A problem peculiar to the bridge is the well-meaning

Bay Area resident who brings friends out to admire the span and the magnificent view from it. He drives slowly across the bridge, taking in the scenery and heedless of the speeding traffic bearing down upon them from all sides.

"This is especially serious when he fails to drive in the right hand lane," Captain Parnow says, adding that Vista Point is the recommended place from which to take in the scenery.

In view of the traffic congestion, the experts regard the bridge's low accident rate as nothing less than astonishing.

One big reason for the excellent traffic accident record is, Captain Parnow will tell you, the strict compliance the patrol demands and receives in its enforcement of the 45-mile-per-hour speed limit.

"It is an absolute speed limit," he says. "If a driver exceeds 45 miles an hour, then he's in violation of the statute and subject to a citation."

The patrol issues approximately 4,000 citations a year to drivers on the bridge. Most frequent offense: Following too closely, a particularly dangerous offense in the heavily congested bridge traffic.

THE TOLLTAKERS of the Golden Gate Bridge are the California Highway Patrol officers' best friends. They alert officers to drunken drivers and possible suicides, also keep a watch out for escaped prisoners, stolen vehicles, etc. Patrol officer Don Dowling here takes some information from a tolltaker.

Keeping The Bridge Safe For Traffic

From 14 to 18 major and minor accidents, including the "fender-benders," occur each month on the bridge and its approaches. Fatal collisions are extremely rare.

While traffic has increased tremendously, the Golden Gate Bridge District and the California Highway Patrol have taken safety precautions that have kept step with the problem. Thus the accident total now is approximately the same as it was 15 years ago.

For instance, the patrol began its bridge assignment with one-way radio only in its cars. Now two-way radio is an essential. The Golden Gate Bridge District monitors the patrol's frequency and has a direct line to the San Francisco communications office. Accident calls are received there almost immediately.

The district has made engineering improvements such as the extra lanes south of the plaza. And stop signs have been eliminated where they were found unnecessary.

Suicides pose a grim problem for the patrol officers. Since the opening of the bridge, there have been 224 confirmed suicides from the bridge and another possible 88 suicides. On 154 other occasions alert patrol officers or other citizens have thwarted suicide attempts. Captain Parnow says approximately half those "saves" were performed by officers.

Each patrol car carries a special float developed by the Coast Guard. These floats are dropped over the side of the bridge at points where a suicide jump is believed to have occurred. Scotch-like tape then guides the Coast Guard boat to the spot. Usually bodies are recovered from 10 to 15 minutes after the search begins.

Officers find suicides the grimmest aspect of what they otherwise regard as a pleasant assignment.

Behind each such fatality lies a story of human sufferfering or frustration.

They can recall when a father and son jumped to their deaths only four or five days apart, driving onto the bridge in the same automobile.

They remember another jumper who did not intend to NOTE THE SPECIAL PUSH BAR on the front of this new 1962 Chrysler patrol car. California Highway Patrol so equips its cars when they are assigned to congested traffic areas such as the Golden Gate Bridge to expedite the clearing of stalled vehicles from the busy lanes. Each time a patrol car passes through the toll lanes at the bridge, the officer or officers sign a slip that shows the time their vehicle was checked through.

CENTRAL RADIO dispatch of the California Highway Patrol in San Francisco serves the Golden Gate Bridge patrol as well as patrol operations in Marin, San Francisco, Alameda and San Mateo counties. One of its direct lines connects the center with the tolltakers' office at the Gate Bridge. die. He made his leap with a parachute, but the harness broke and he drowned.

A happier side of the bridge patrol work is the opportunity to pass out information to visitors about the big span and about other attractions of the Bay Area. The patrol officers make frequent stops at Vista Point and are accustomed to serving as something of an information service for the tourists who congregate there to drink in the view.

Senior officer in years of service on the bridge among the men still receiving that assignment is T. A. Bragg. He has been patrolling the bridge since 1944. And he has crossed the span more thousands of times than he is able to estimate.

Like his fellow officers, however, he never grows tired of the assignment.

There is the challenge of keeping the cars rolling in the face of obstacles such as accidents, pleasure drivers and heavy fog. There is the satisfaction of meeting people from all over the globe who have come to admire the example of man's constructive genius, and nature's equally awesome scenery that surrounds it.

And there's a feeling of pride just in knowing that you are a part of the team that makes the world-famed Golden Gate Bridge the transportation marvel that it is.

IT JUST isn't possible to take a bad photograph of the Golden Gate Bridge. Photographed from any angle, the results are striking. And even if you are out of focus with your camera, you can pass that off as the fog. The unusual color cover photo is by Dick Steinheimer, Independent-Journal staff photographer, taken from south tower looking down the cable. Photos upper left, lower left and upper center are Redwood Empire Assn. photos; other pictures are I-J staff photos. The ship passing underneath the bridge in the photo below is the Roosevelt.

AT THE OTHER END of the chute in the bridge district's money room John Townsend collects the bags of cash for processing. (Independent-Journal photos)

Where Quarters Wind Up

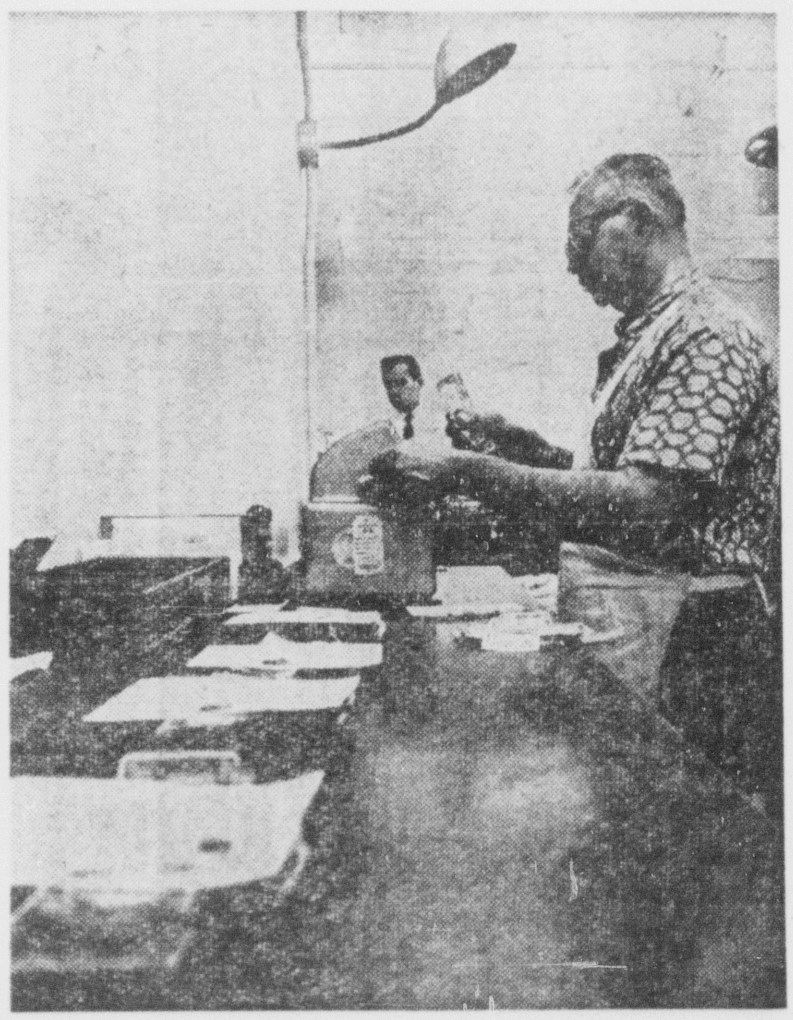

Revenue from the Golden Gate Bridge has passed the 93-million dollar mark.

And that's a lot of quarters.

An average day's collection runs around $11,000 in vehicular tolls. On weekends or holidays, that amount zooms to $17,000.

Heading the bridge's money crew is cashier Eyrick Eynon who has been with the district 23 years. The auditor, by law a bridge officer, is Lee F. Lynch.

Pictures on this and the facing page, by I-J photographer Bob Hax, show you just how your quarters are processed.

A SCALE helps speed Louis Ivancovich's preliminary check of the paper money which has been included in the collections by the bridge tolltakers.

"Will Cuticle Remover Take Ink Stains From Leather?"

Dear Mrs. T.U.R.:

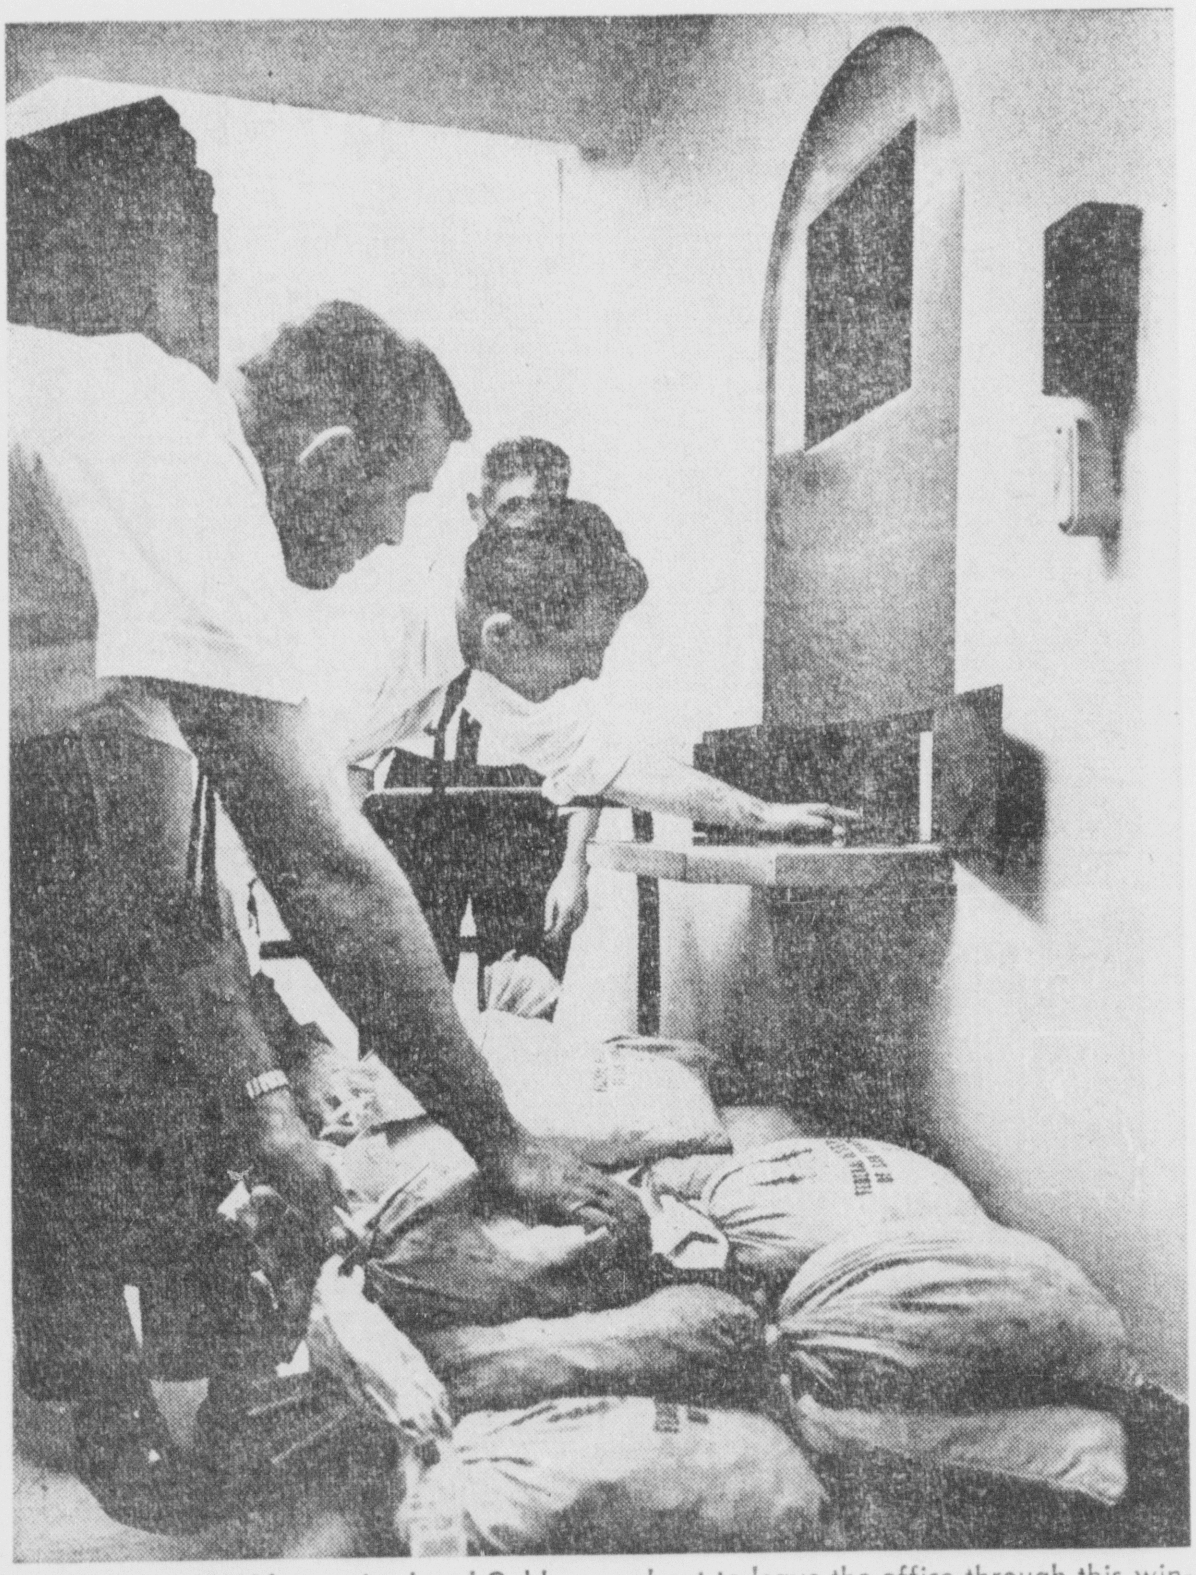

Possibly. However, before you try it there are some things you should know. Basically, cuticle, leather, hair, fur, wool and silk are all related chemically, as are the dyes normally used to color them. Therefore, any compound which will dissolve cuticle is capable, also, of affecting fibers which are normally acid dyed. Cuticle remover is nothing more than a fairly strong alkali in a lubricant base.

We know that some have said that cuticle remover was good to use in taking hair dye from clothing. When used at home to remove stains from leather or any of the related fabrics, the entire garment can be ruined. The color removal might not show at once. However, when the garment is drycleaned after the home remedy has been used, it's "good-bye" to the color.

Though common household items sometimes appear beneficial for spot removing, it is well to remember that is not what they were designed for and that your professional drycleaner has exactly the proper spotting agent, tested and proved for the purpose. Place your garment in his care for best results. By Robert & Ronald Casassa.

A CHECK of receipts against register records is made by Eyrick Eynon, Golden Gate Bridge District cashier, a veteran of 23 years with the bridge.

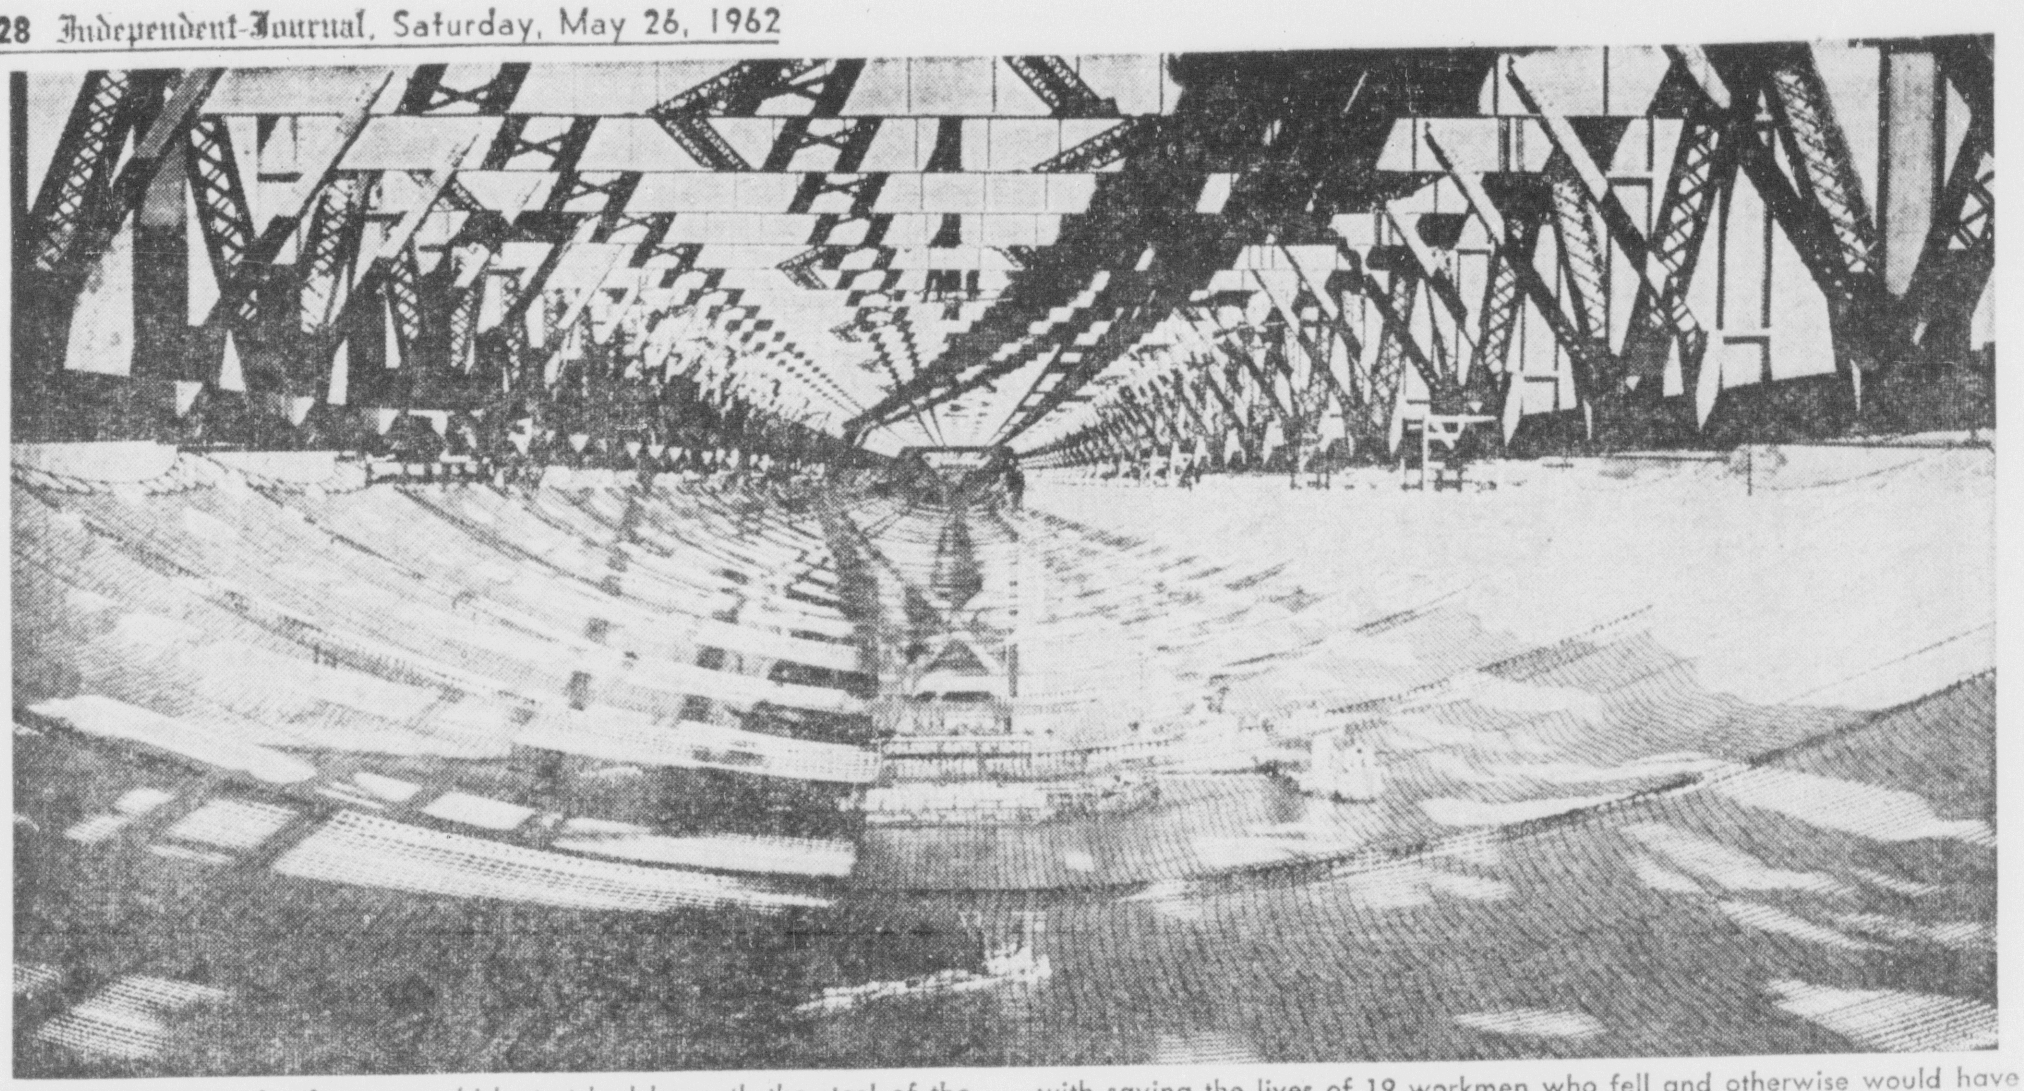

THE ARMORED VAN has arrived and Golden Gate Bridge District money office employees have taken the sacks of money from the vault for loading. THE MONEY COUNTED and re-counted, it is now placed in a vault awaiting the armored van which will carry it to the bank. Cashier Eyrick Eynon, left, and John Townsend are placing sacks of money in the vault.

THE HUGE SYSTEM of safety nets which stretched beneath the steel of the Golden Gate Bridge where workmen were laboring is shown dramatically in this photograph from the Ted Huggins collection. The nets were credited with saving the lives of 19 workmen who fell and otherwise would have plunged to their deaths. Some, however, it could not save. Ships moving in the water below can be seen through the net.

The Day They Voted On The Bridge Bonds

In 1930 the fate of the Golden Gate Bridge was in the balance as voters of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District went to the polls to cast ballots on a 35 million dollar bond issue for the span across the Golden Gate.

Spokesmen for the Citizens' Committee against the Golden Gate Bridge were of the opinion that the bridge was physically and financially impossible. The committee was active and vocal.

The committee argued that such a bridge would be a prime target for an enemy. It claimed it could be tumbled by long-range fire and that it would bottle up shipping in San Francisco Bay. The committee also held that the Redwood Empire country to the north was so sparsely settled that the bridge would never emerge from the red.

Women's organizations and others were asked to oppose the building of the bridge on the grounds that it would mar the beauty of the Golden Gate. The foundation for the bridge's south pier was also suspect. There were those who said an earthquake would play havoc with this pier.

TO COMBAT this propaganda, the district was authorized to establish a Bureau of Information. This bureau, along with the Redwood Empire Assn., the San Francisco Junior Chamber of Commerce, and some 100 civic organizations, battled the opponent committee right down the line and disposed of the committee's contentions one by one.

Bridge proponents pointed out the Redwood Empire was potentially one of the great vacationlands of the nation—an area served from the southern gateway, San Francisco, by inadequate ferry boats. They envisioned the Empire as a major attraction for tourists and an area which could be developed along many lines of tremendous economic importance. Competent engineers stressed there was no danger inherent in the south pier.

THE OUTCOME of the battle was decided on Nov. 4, 1930, when voters of the district by a vote well over the required two-thirds majority decided a bridge must be built.

The structure, once castigated as an economic crime, is now used by an average of nearly 60,000 motor vehicles daily, and the average is increasing.

The importance of the bridge is reflected in the amazing development of the entire Redwood Empire in the past two decades. The span, which also gave impetus to the highway program in the Empire, now connects up with a multi-million-dollar system of all-year highways.

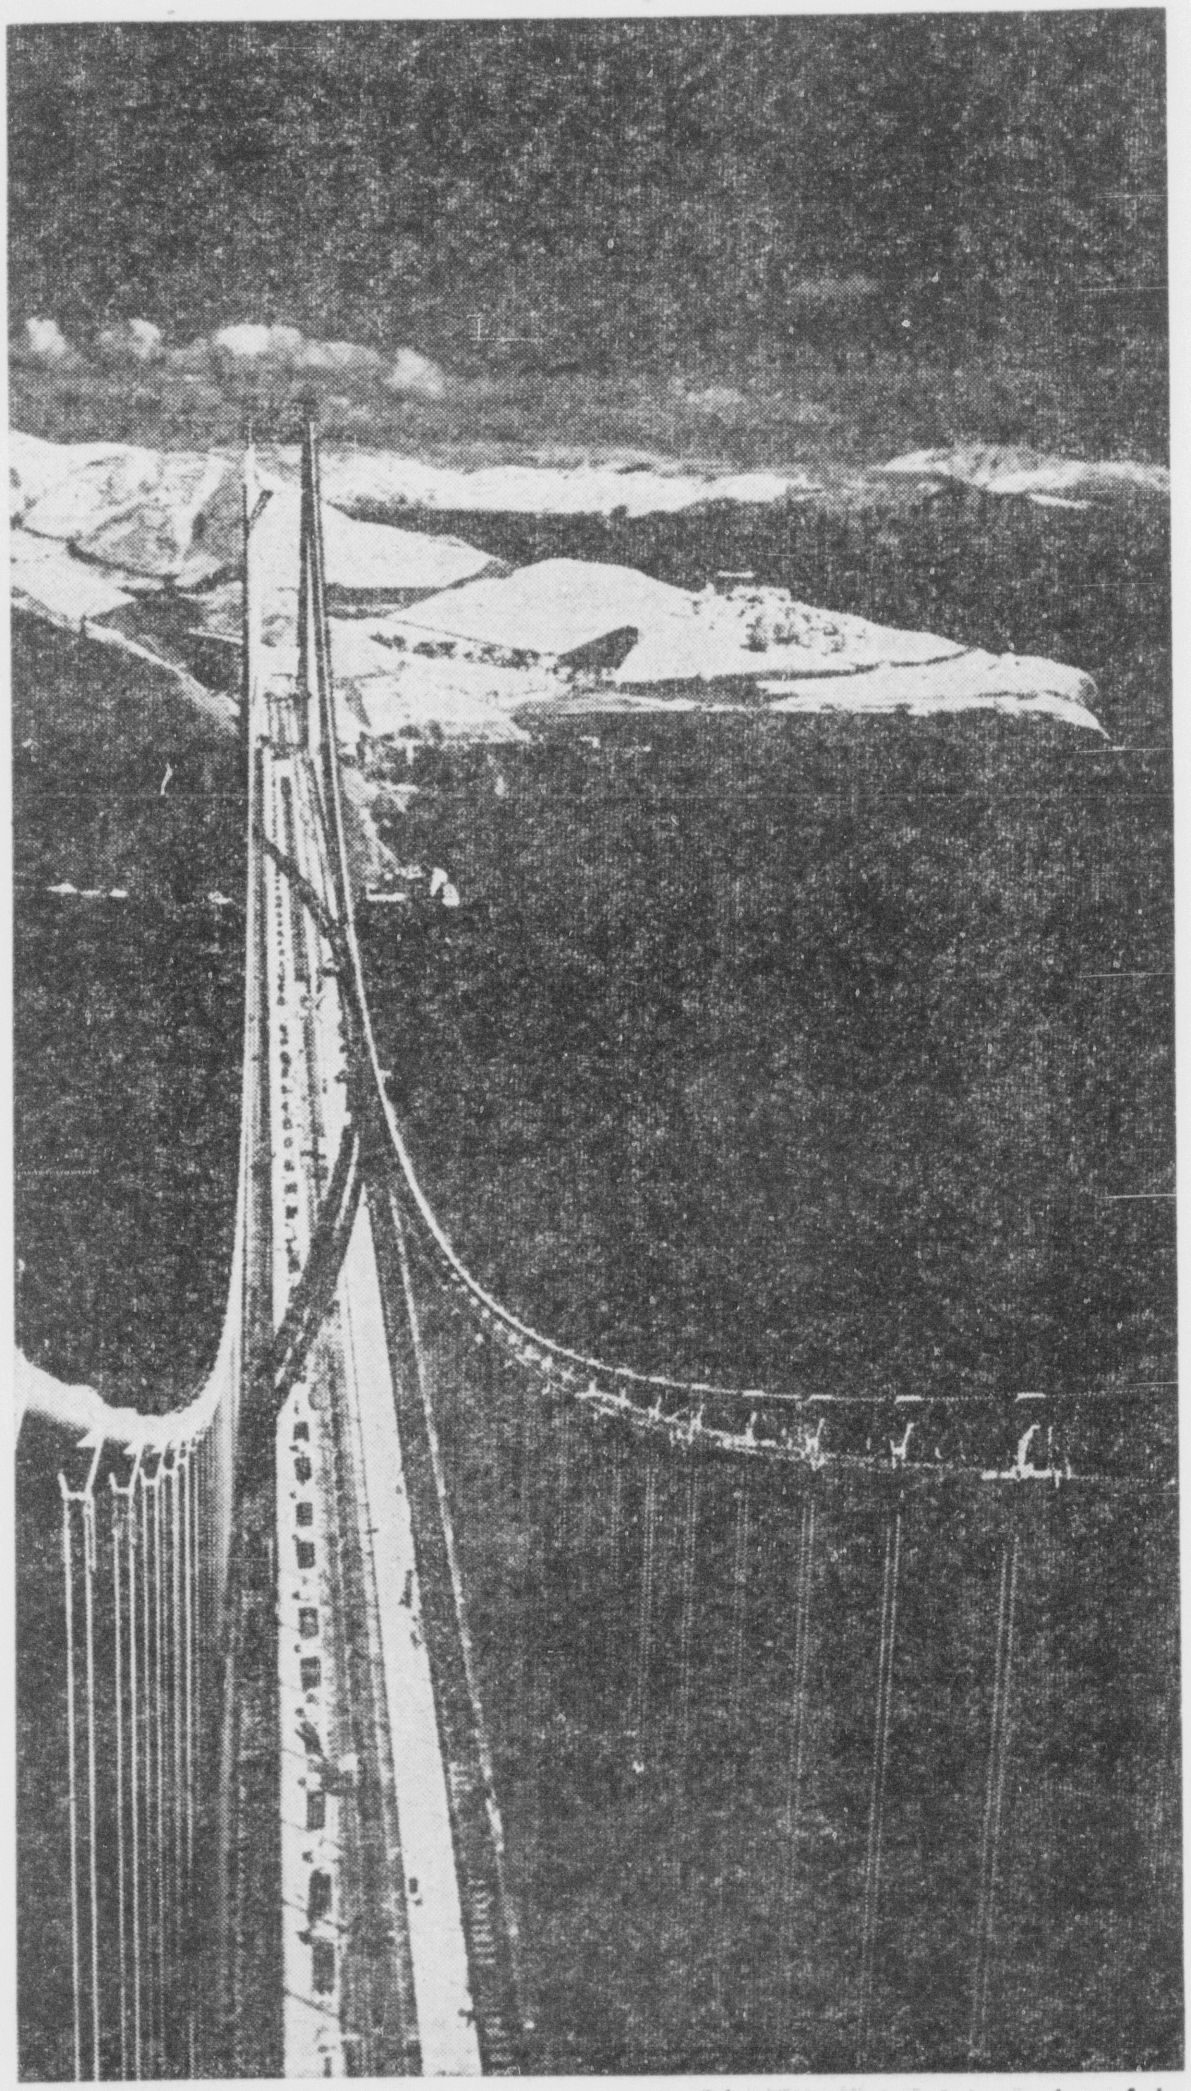

Patrons of the bridge have not been lacking, as was predicted in 1930. To care for them more adequately, a $7,500,000 Golden Gate Bridge North Freeway was completed in 1956. The Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District financed the project to the extent of three million dollars.

THIS IS THE WAY the bridge looked from San Francisco tower at one point while still under construction. It is another of the many striking photographs which Ted Huggins took while the bridge was being built.

THE MARIN SHORE with its hills makes up the background for this photograph by Ted Huggins of the Golden Gate Bridge while under construction. Shown are the bridge from crow-walk to mid-span. The photo also provides a striking dramatization of the size of the bridge towers.

IT TOOK TEAMWORK in the construction of the towers of the Golden Gate Bridge, and the riveting was one good example. The rivets were tossed from the foot of the tower to the men in the middle who then relayed the rivets on up to the working level.

and rigid box to support the roadway.

They weren't imagining either that a major battle would rage as to whether the bridge was capable of carrying rails for rapid transit; that the span would be so congested that traffic control arches would be proposed to regulate direction of lines of cars jamming the bridge to capacity.

AT THAT TIME they couldn't foresee the "poor" days of the bridge when critics were crowing about the financial "white elephant" and talked of refinancing the span because it wasn't paying its way. Nor could they guess that by early 1962, the bridge would have enough reserves on hand, more than 21 million dollars worth, to pay off all the bonds outstanding and not due until 1971. And continue with record traffic each month to make net profits of two million dollars a year.

But on that sunny Wednesday they just stood and waited for the scaffolding to move ahead. Don Murphy, Lambert's roommate, was working on the other scaffold. He heard "a cracking sound" and turned just in time to see his roommate's scaffold collapse. Fox, on the beam above, watched in horror as "the front end dropped down and the scaffold slid away toward the water like a big sled."

Thomas Casey, a laborer, was standing near the back end and as he felt the scaffold tip, he jumped and grabbed a steel beam. His pipe flew out of his mouth and he let loose with one hand, reached out into the air, grabbed the pipe and hugged the beam again. Later, after he had been hoisted to safety on a rope, he lit his pipe and strode away saying, "Boy, that was a close call!"

Below him, however, was tragedy. With shouts of men and the crashing of timbers, the scaffolding plunged into the safety net, tore through it and carried 12 men into the water 220 feet below.

Lambert was the luckiest. As he went by he grabbed a piece of the safety net and as it fell in a great arch, he too was slowed from a straight fall. Sixty feet above the water he lost his grip and dropped into the waves. But a fishing boat was nearby and soon had him aboard. His chief injuries were caused by immersion.

Osburg, too, survived. He didn't known quite how it happened. But before he realized it, he was being pulled into the boat with a fractured femur and internal injuries.

NONE OF THE other 10 men lived. Many of the bodies were not recovered. An hour after the accident the wooden scaffolding rose to the surface and started to float out to sea. A wheel which carried one corner of it had broken away.

The next day, work went on again on the bridge, but not over the 2,100 feet from which the safety net had been stripped away.

On the bridge today is a bronze memorial plaque which carries the name of the man who was killed by the toppling crane and the 10 who fell to their deaths on that beautiful February morning.

Bridge officials have no record of what became of Lambert and Osburg. They wish they knew for they would like them to be present tomorrow for the public observance of the bridge's 25th birthday, a Silver Jubilee for the Golden Gate Bridge.

Some Facts About Our Gate Bridge

The Golden Gate Bridge is the world's greatest suspension bridge and has been acclaimed the world's most beautiful bridge.

The Golden Gate Bridge is the only bridge in the world built across the entrance to a major harbor.

The Golden Gate Bridge is the only bridge in the world to connect two military reservations—the Presidio of San Francisco, and Fort Baker in Marin County.

The Golden Gate Bridge cost $35,000,000 to build. The people of San Francisco and five other counties to the north of San Francisco voted in favor of bonds in the amount of $35,000,000 for construction of the bridge. These bonds, plus interest, are being paid from tolls on the bridge.

It took nearly four and one-half years to build the Golden Gate Bridge. Construction was started on Jan. 5, 1933. The bridge was opened to pedestrian traffic on May 27, 1937, and to vehicular traffic the following day, May 28, 1937.

The main center span of the Golden Gate Bridge is 4,200 feet long—the longest single span in the world. Each of the two side spans is 1,125 feet long.

The total length of the Golden Gate Bridge, including the approaches, is 8,981 feet.

The Golden Gate Bridge is three times as long as the Brooklyn Bridge in New York.

It contains nearly 100,000 tons of steel. A total of 80,000 miles of wire was used in spinning the two giant cables on either side of the bridge.

Each cable is 36⅜ inches in diameter. There are 27,572 wires in each cable. Each cable weighs 11,000 tons.

The two towers of the Golden Gate Bridge rise 746 feet above water. These towers are 191 feet taller than the Washington Monument.

The pier of the tower on the the San Francisco side of the bridge goes down 118 feet below water. The pier rests on a concrete foundation as large as a football playing field.

The bridge has one deck. It has six lanes for motor vehicles—three in each direction. Each lane is 10 feet wide, making the roadway 60 feet in width.

The bridge has two sidewalks 15 feet wide on either side. The roadway, or deck, of the Golden Gate Bridge is 220 feet above low water, which allows the largest ships now afloat to pass under the bridge. The roadway of the bridge, depending upon temperature and tide, is as high above water as a 25-story building. The width of the bridge with the roadway and sidewalks is 90 feet.

The Golden Gate Bridge aids navigation into San Francisco Harbor with navigation lights and fog signals on the structure.

The bridge also has aerial beacons (or lights) on top of its towers and on the cables as a warning to airplanes.

From the tower tops of the Golden Gate Bridge, a view of 27½ miles can be observed on a clear day.

It took approximately 60,000 gallons of paint to paint the Golden Gate Bridge when it was first built. A crew of 30 experienced bridge painters is kept busy day in and day out, throughout the year, painting the bridge — either outside or inside the towers—in order to protect the bridge from rust and the salt-laden fog and the effects of the sun and stormy weather.

The Golden Gate Bridge is painted a dark red color, which is known as "International Orange," and is the only bridge in the United States painted in this outstanding and attractive color.

It is estimated that more than two million pedestrians have used the walkways of the Golden Gate Bridge.

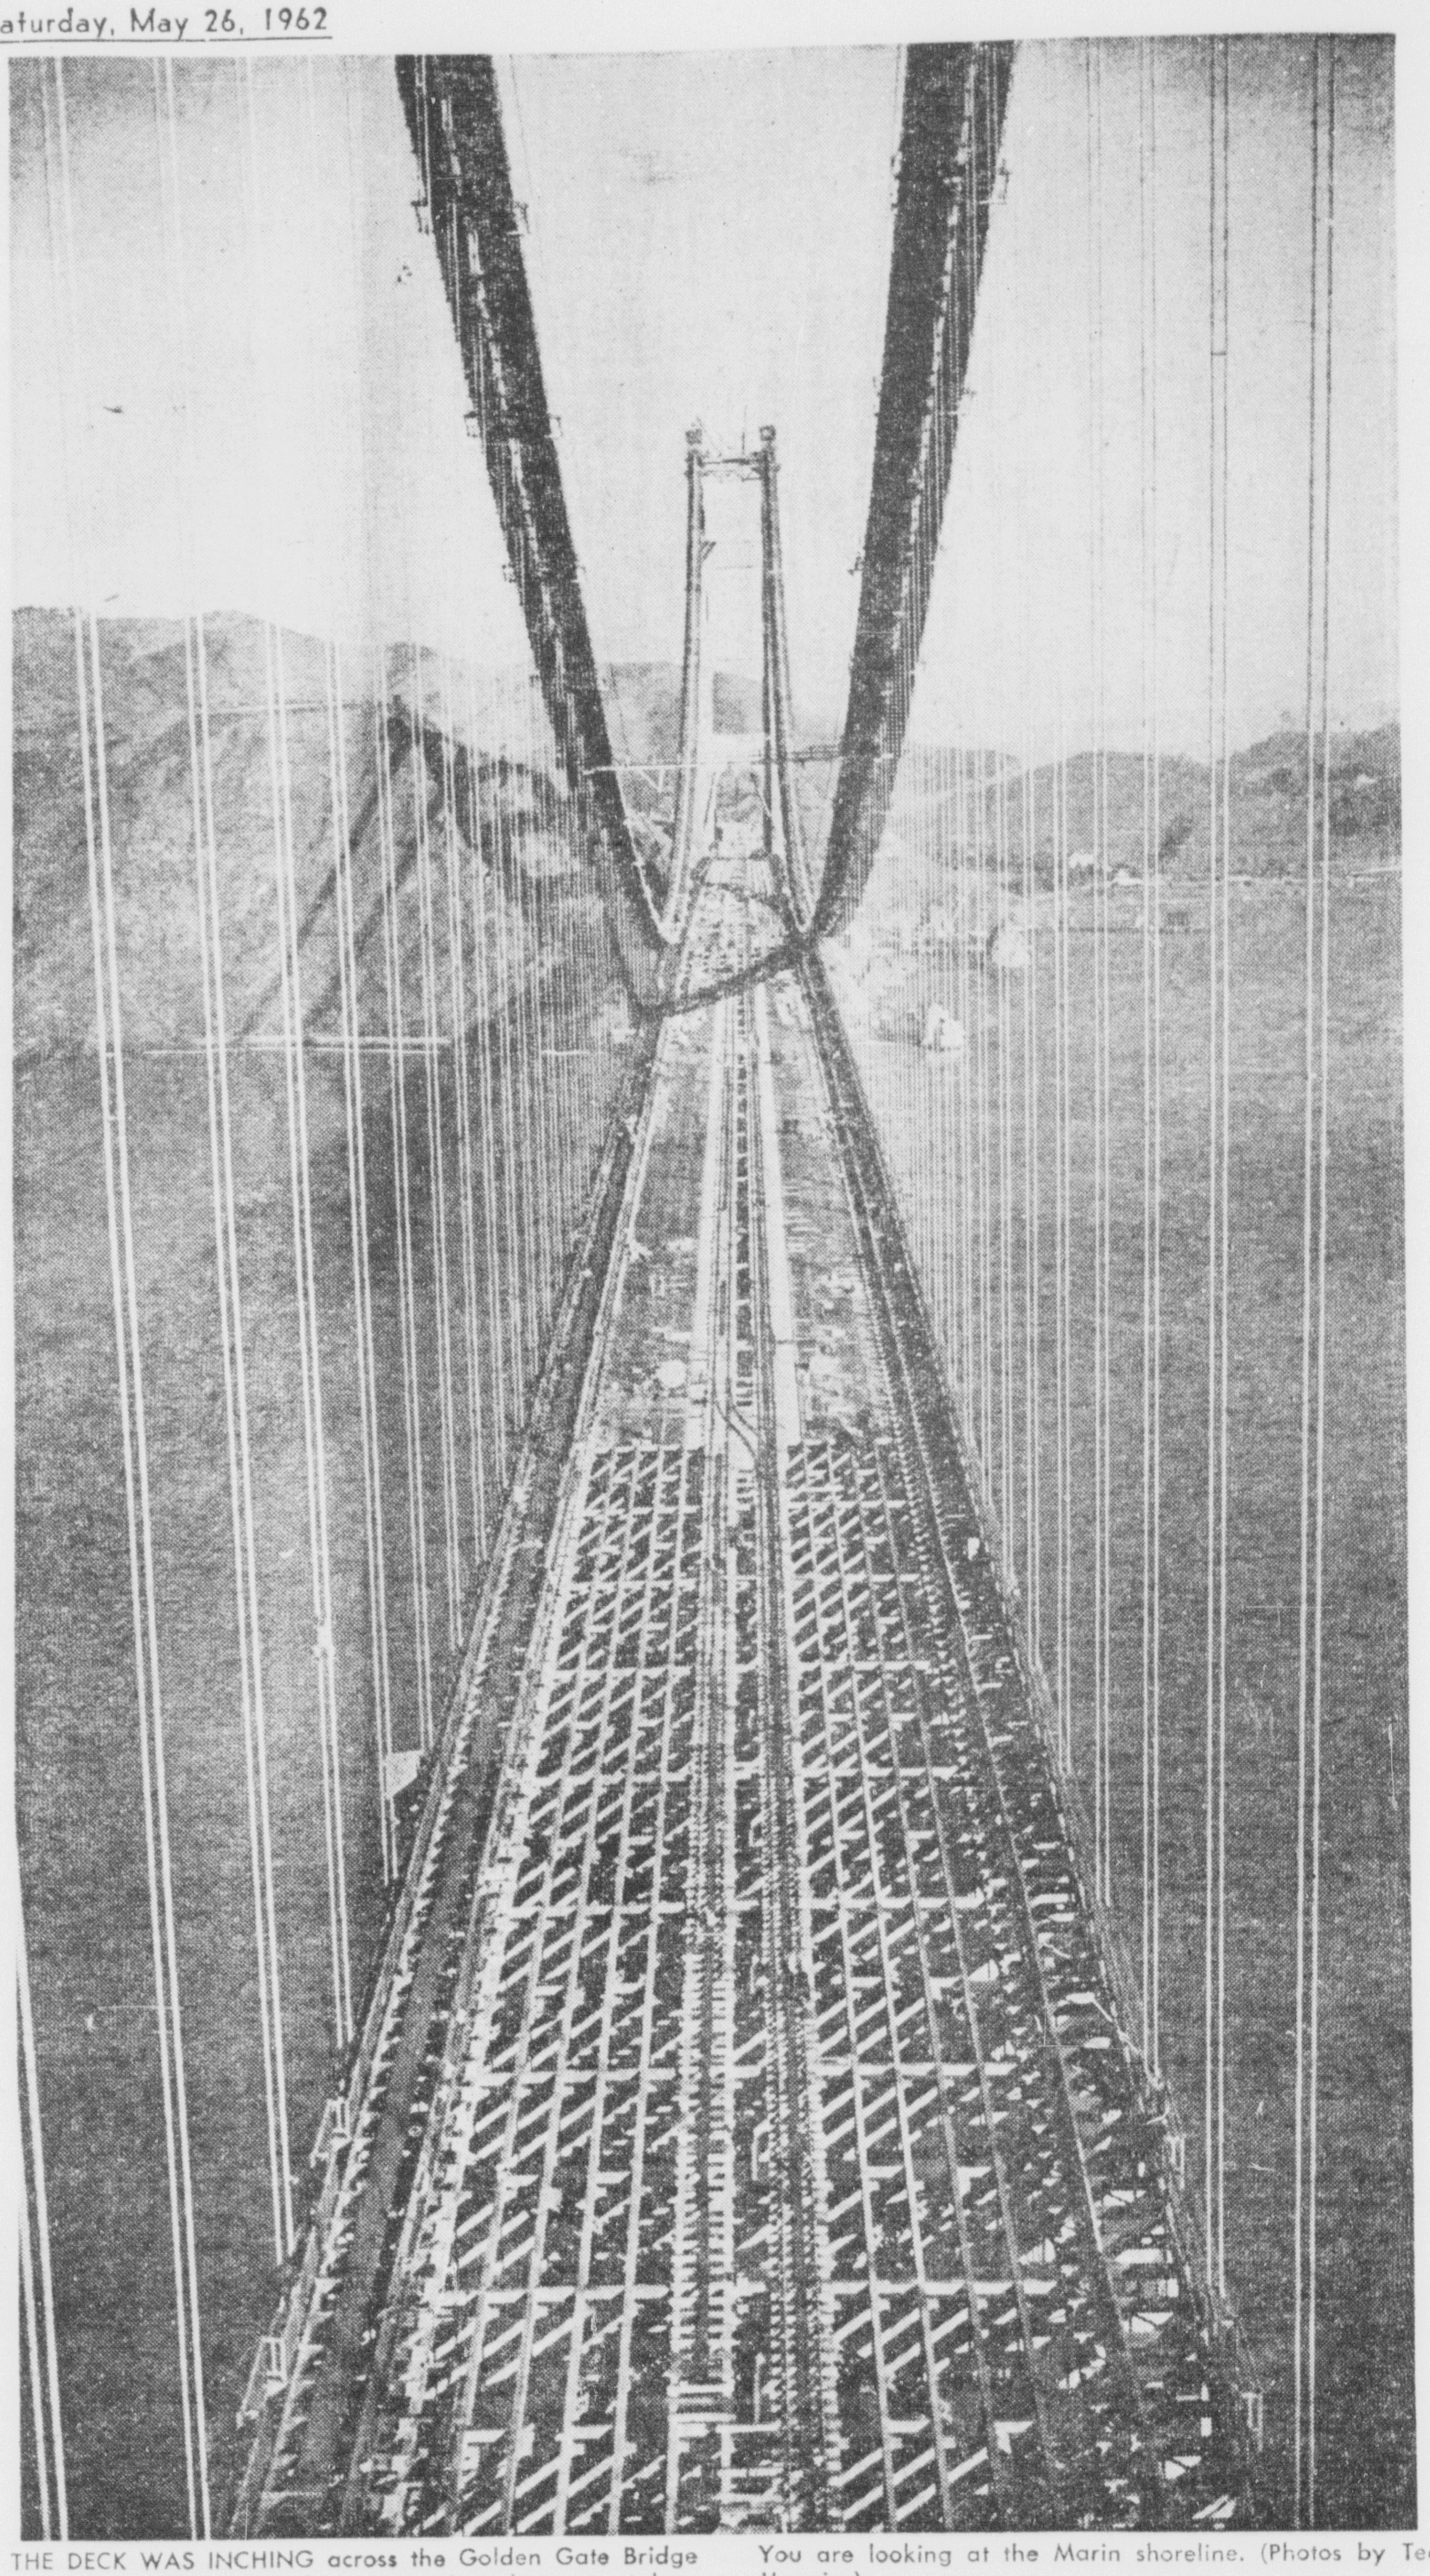

The Golden Gate Bridge attracts visitors from all over the world.

It costs 25 cents for an automobile with all passengers to cross the Golden Gate Bridge. You can walk across the bridge for 10 cents.

Since the Golden Gate Bridge was opened in 1937, nearly 240,000,000 motor vehicles have crossed it, and the total income from tolls has reached over $86,000,000.

A total of 25,000 cubic yards of concrete went into the paving on the bridge.

The first meeting of the board of directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District was held Jan. 23, 1929.

The Legend Of The Golden Gate

An ancient Indian legend has it that San Francisco Bay was once a fertile valley—the happy hunting grounds of the redmen, while California's great interior valleys were at that time an immense lake.

The valley was separated from lake and ocean by ranges of tall mountains. Long before the white man came to these shores, the legend holds that the Sun God was a personage among the Indian inhabitants, and frequently, in his flight from east to west, paused to enjoy a visit with his aboriginal friends.

On one such occasion, the diety, falling madly in love with the beautiful princess of the tribe, attempted her abduction, and, taking a hurried departure, is purported to have stubbed his toe on Mt. Diablo. Plunging headlong, his captive was killed. Deeply remorseful, he tenderly laid the body atop Mt. Tamalpais, and, strangely enough, to this day the contour of the mountain top vaguely outlines the reclining form of a woman.

In his headlong plunge, the Sun God's toe clove an opening betwkeen lake and valley, while his arm tore a deep gash in the mountain range separating valley from ocean.

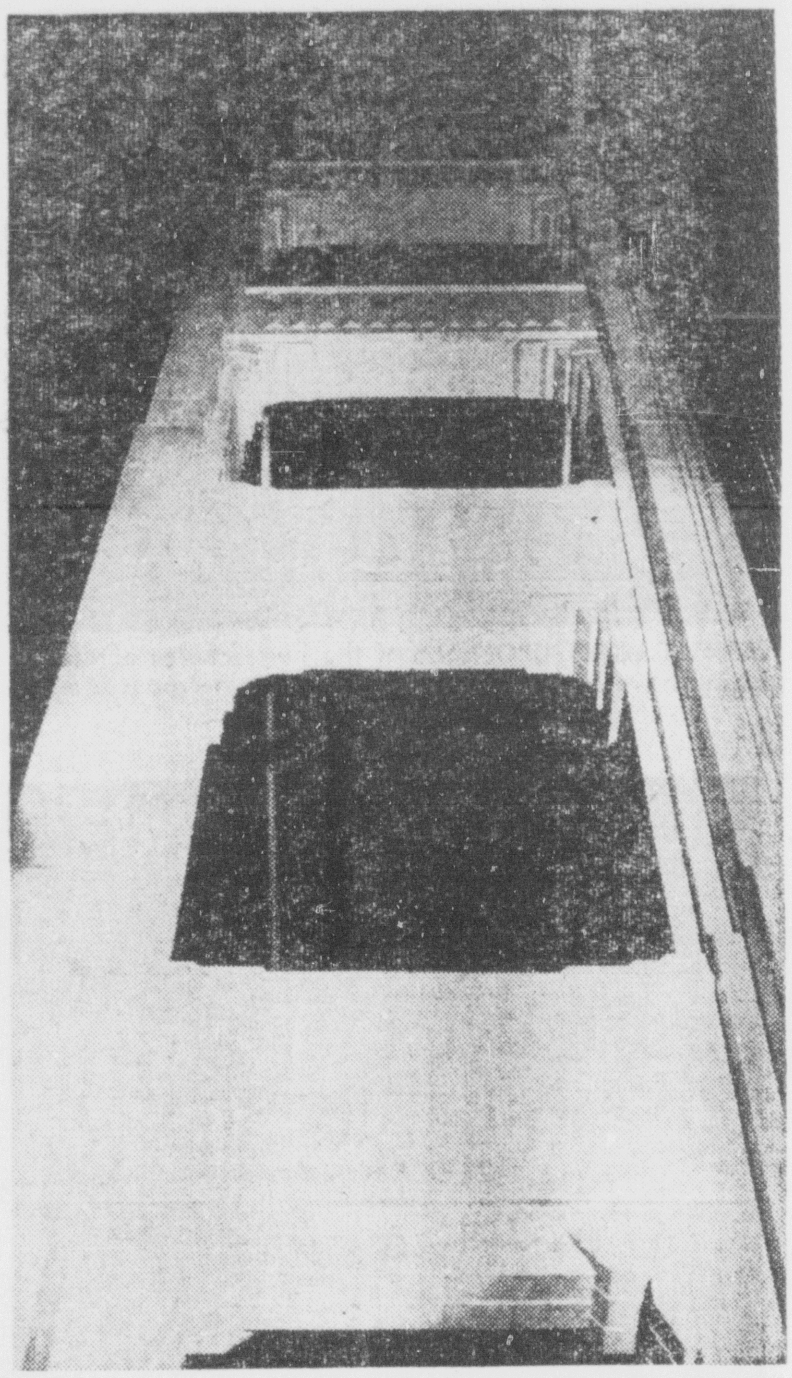

A way was now made for inundation, and the waters pouring in from lake and ocean, formed what is now the Golden Gate strait and the magnificent harbor of San Francisco Bay.

Ignoring the Indian legend, the geologists hold that the Golden Gate was at one time a river gorge, through which flowed the greater part of California's drainage as a fresh water stream.

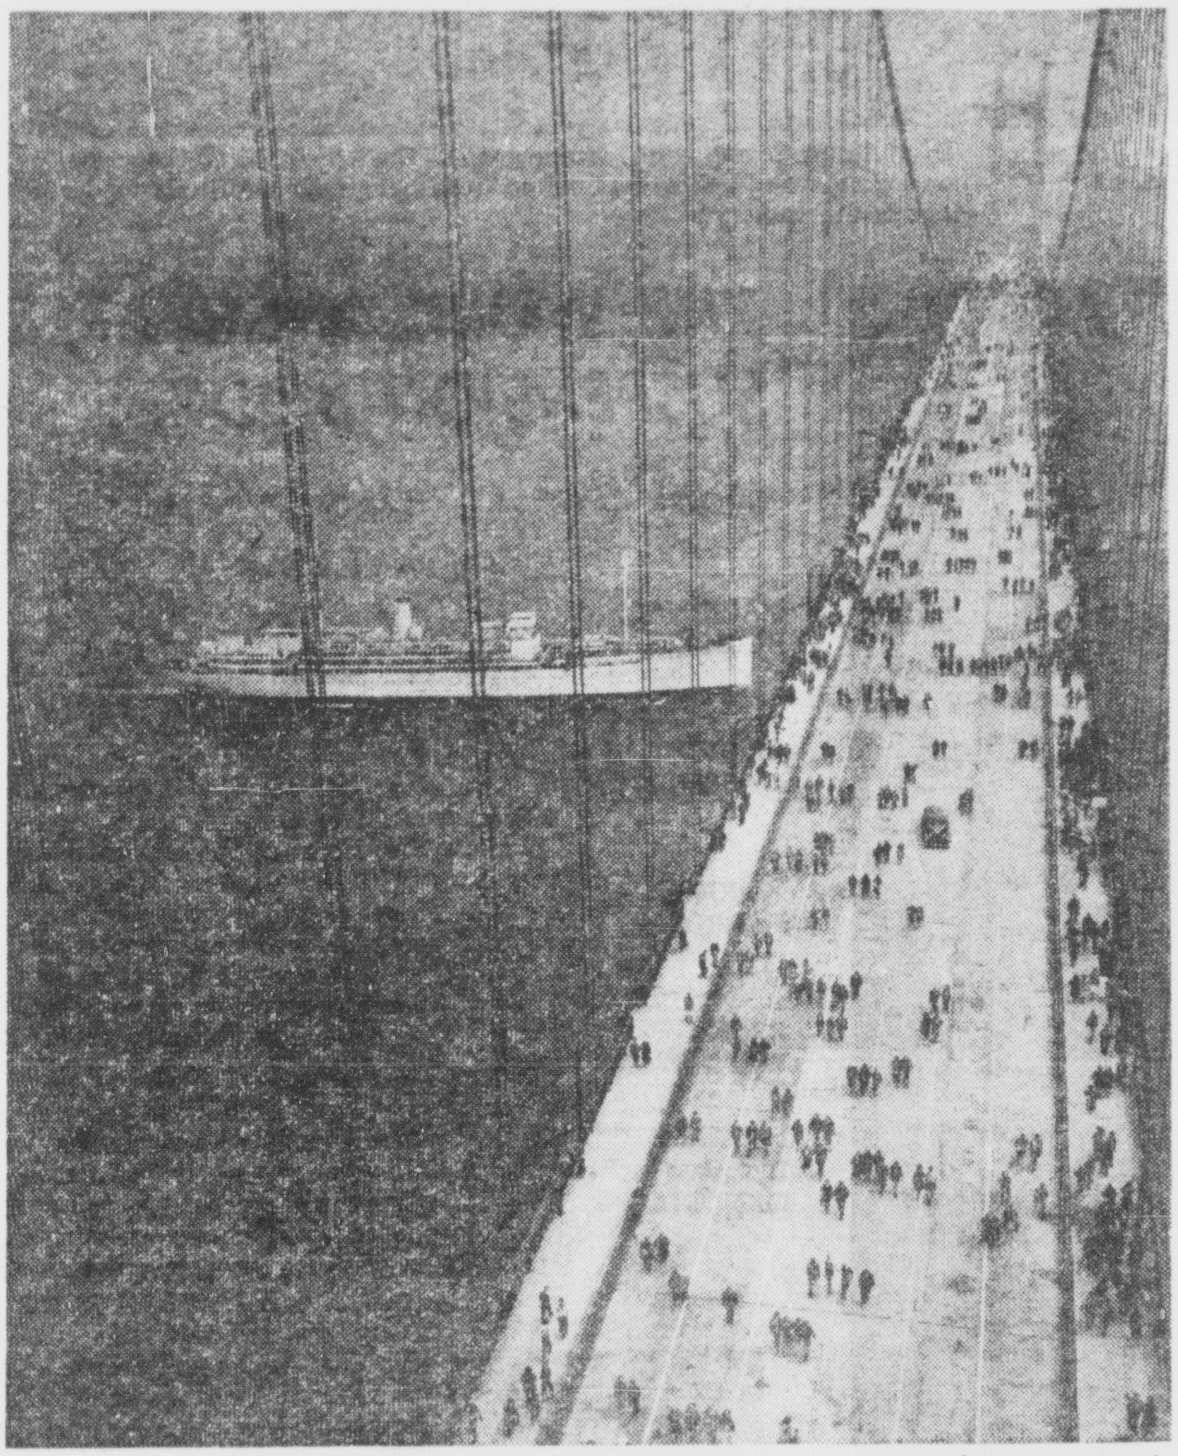

They also affirm that the mouth of the river discharged over a delta outside the gorge which extended as far out as the Farallon Islands, and that this delta molded by the action of wind and waves into a vast embankment extending many miles along the coast.

A gradual subsidence of the coast line in the region of the outlet of the river permitted a slow invasion of ocean water into the river gorge, which eventually flooded the valley and formed the bay.

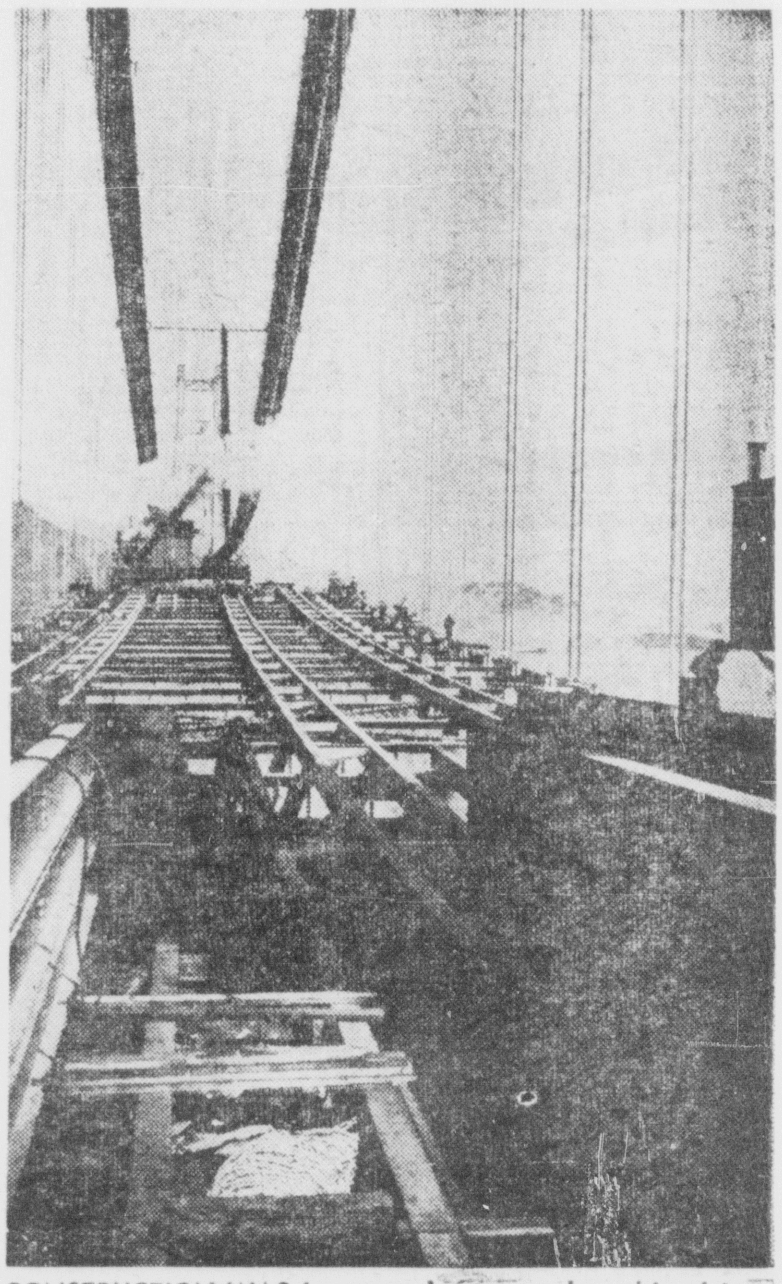

The geologists conclude the degree of subsidence to be about 350 feet, drawing this deduction from the fact that the greatest depth of the Golden Gate is 378 feet, and that, when the gorge functioned as a river channel, its bottom was probably not more than 30 feet below sea level.

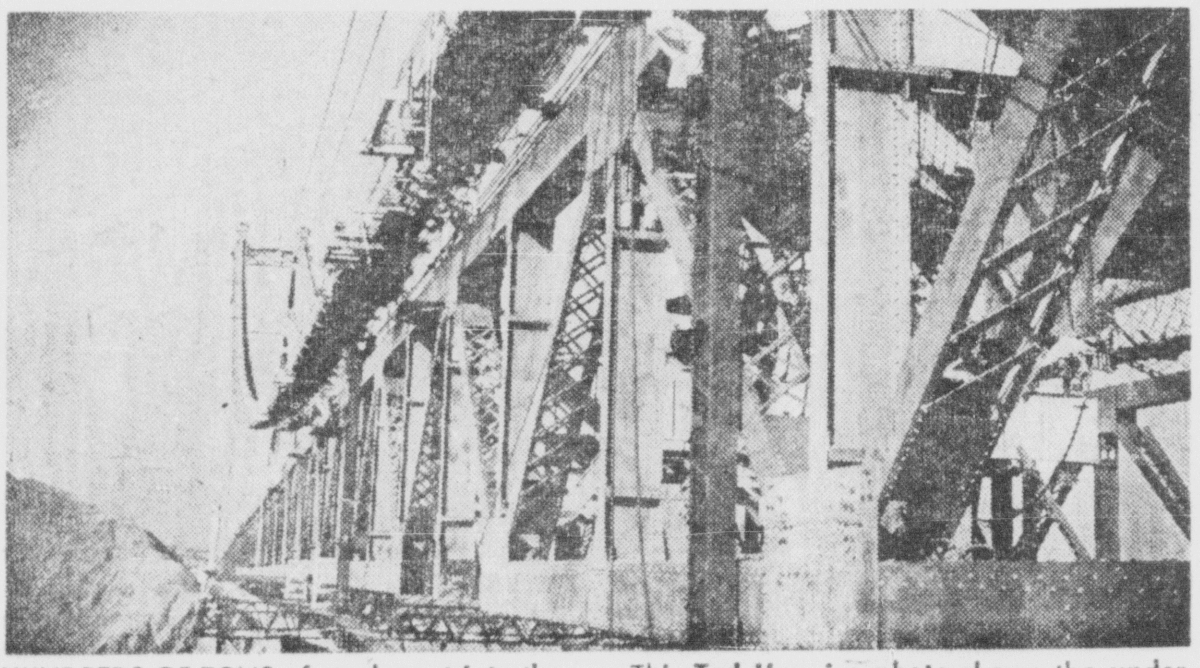

THIS TOWER, some 700 feet straight up, was nearly complete when this photograph was taken. (Photo by Ted Huggins)

IT WAS PEDESTRIAN DAY on the Golden Gate Bridge when, on May 27, 1937, the newly-completed span was first thrown open to the public. More than 200,000 people took advantage of the opportunity to be among the first to walk upon one of the world's great engineering and construction feats. HUNDREDS OF TONS of steel went into the construction of the Golden Gate Bridge. This Ted Huggins photo shows the understructure of the span at the Marin end.

MEN AT WORK UPON one of the huge cables of the Golden Gate Bridge didn't have time to enjoy the view. But it was a breathtaking one, as this Ted Huggins photograph demonstrates. Spinning The Cables—

Big Job Fell To Roebling

AN IMPORTANT STEP in the "stringing" of the cable for the Golden Gate Bridge was the compacting of the strands which had been spun from tower to tower into cylindrical sections. There were four strands in each such "set-up." And the compacted set-ups were then placed in their final position in the main cable. (Photo by John A. Roebling's Sons Co.)

It was the John A. Roebling's Sons Co. which largely originated the process of "spinning" a cable.

And it was the Roebling Company, now a division of Colorado Fuel and Iron Corp. of Trenton, N.J., that was handed the assignment—unprecedented in scope — of spinning the cables for the Golden Gate Bridge.

THE SPINNING process had been developed by Roebling back in the 19th century with the evolution of alloyed metals that made possible, for the first time, wires strong enough to support an "economical" pay weight.

As steel know-how improved, the amount of span and weight of supportable bridge decking became larger and larger. This growth culminated in the 1930s in the super strength steel for the Golden Gate Bridge cables, and the longest single span in the world at 4,200 feet between main towers, a space that would extend from the Ferry Building to the spot where Gough Street crosses Market, far beyond the Civic Center of San Francisco.

AT THE TIME of bidding on the Golden Gate job, Roebling's had recently completed fabrication and erection of the largest tonnage of cable wire for one bridge in the world, the George Washington (four cable) Bridge at New York.

The engineering experience from this bridge, led by one of the great contractor's engineers of this century, the late C. C. Sutherland, gave the company the inside track at the opening of the bids. But it was probably one of the closest bid competitions on record, with only $21,000 separating Roebling and the next bidder for a job of nearly six million dollars.

The record span of the Golden Gate Bridge will soon be eclipsed by the new bridge now being erected across the Narrows of New York Bay from Brooklyn to Staten Island. However, the cables of the Golden Gate will still remain the largest in the world in diameter and in number of wires per cable—possibly for all time.

The term, "spinning" cables has been used so long its exact origin is not certain.

In the cables, the wires are laid straight and parallel—not twisted. Logically, the word "spin" seems a misnomer until it is realized that the carriage wheel, or shuttle, which carries the wire across the span, turns or spins its way from end to end.

MORE LIKELY the resemblance to the spinning of a web by a spider to the aerial acrobatics of cable erection led some unknown writer of the past to first use the term.

Cable spinning, in its simplest form, can be explained as starting with the erection of two endless hauling ropes, one on each footwalk. They are reeved from one anchorage to the other around a turnback sheave. Attached to each rope are two carriages from which the spinning wheels are suspended. These carriages are so set that one is at the near anchorage while the other is at the far anchorage.

From huge reels at each anchorage, wire is strung on the wheels. They proceed simultaneously across the span in opposite directions. On arrival at the opposite anchorages, the wire loops are removed from the wheel and placed around the open strand shoe. The wires are then adjusted to the proper sag.

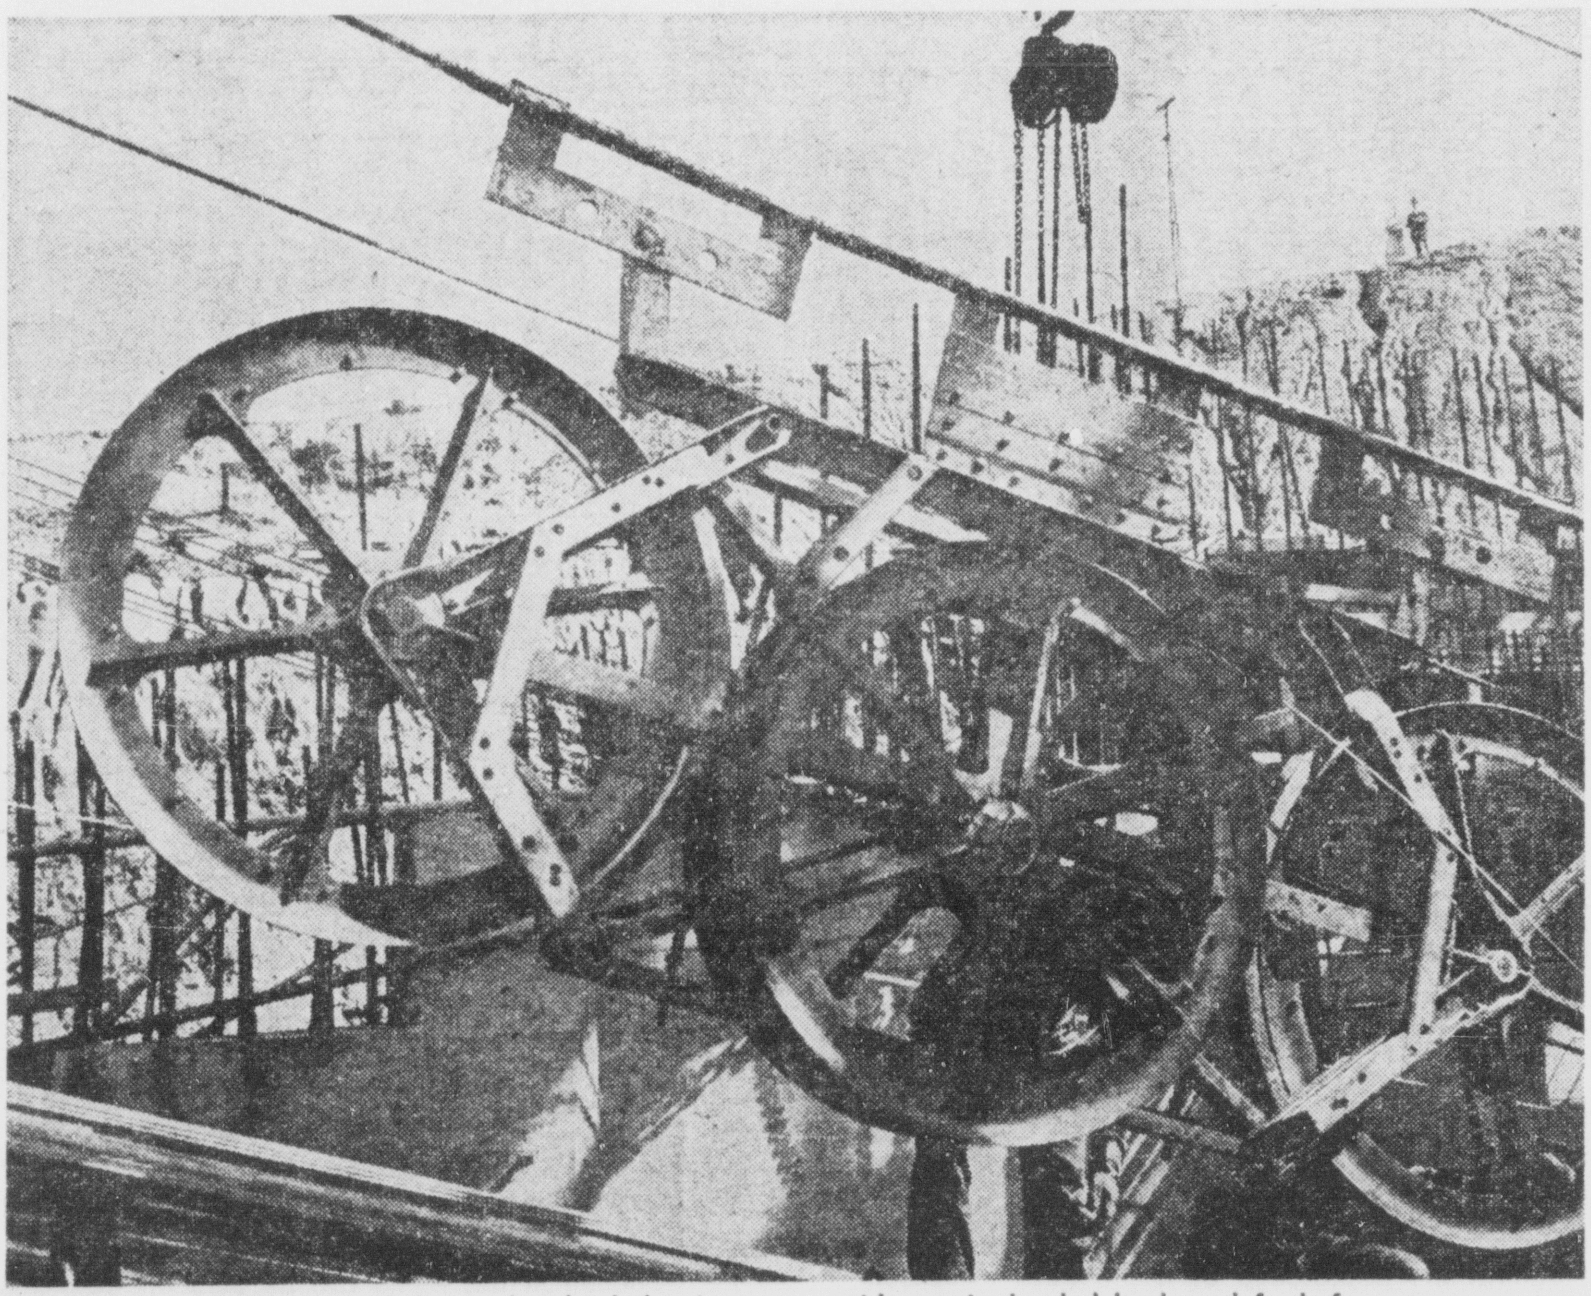

Meanwhile, the wheels have been restrung and sent on their return trips, simultaneously, across the span.

Four strands are strung at one time. In traveling left to right, one wheel assembly always carries wire for No. 1 strand and on its return feeds strand No. 2. The other wheel assembly in traveling from right to left feeds strand No. 4 and from left to right No. 3.

Thus all wire for any given strand originates from the same reel.

When the required number of wires for a strand has been strung and adjusted, the last end of wire is spliced to the first end, which had been temporarily anchored, and the result is an endless skein of wire which constitutes the strand.

When four strands, comprising one set-up, are finished, they are compacted into a circular section, adjusted, and placed in their final position in the main cable.

The Golden Gate Bridge may be surpassed in span, but never in engineering concept or advance beyond earlier structures. Built within a mile of the San Andreas fault line, it is probably the safest and most stable of all tall construction in the Bay district

In addition to the tremendous increase over previous span length at the time of erection, the towers are nearly half again as high as those of the next largest bridge, the South Tower in addition resting on bed rock 100 feet below the surface of the Bay.

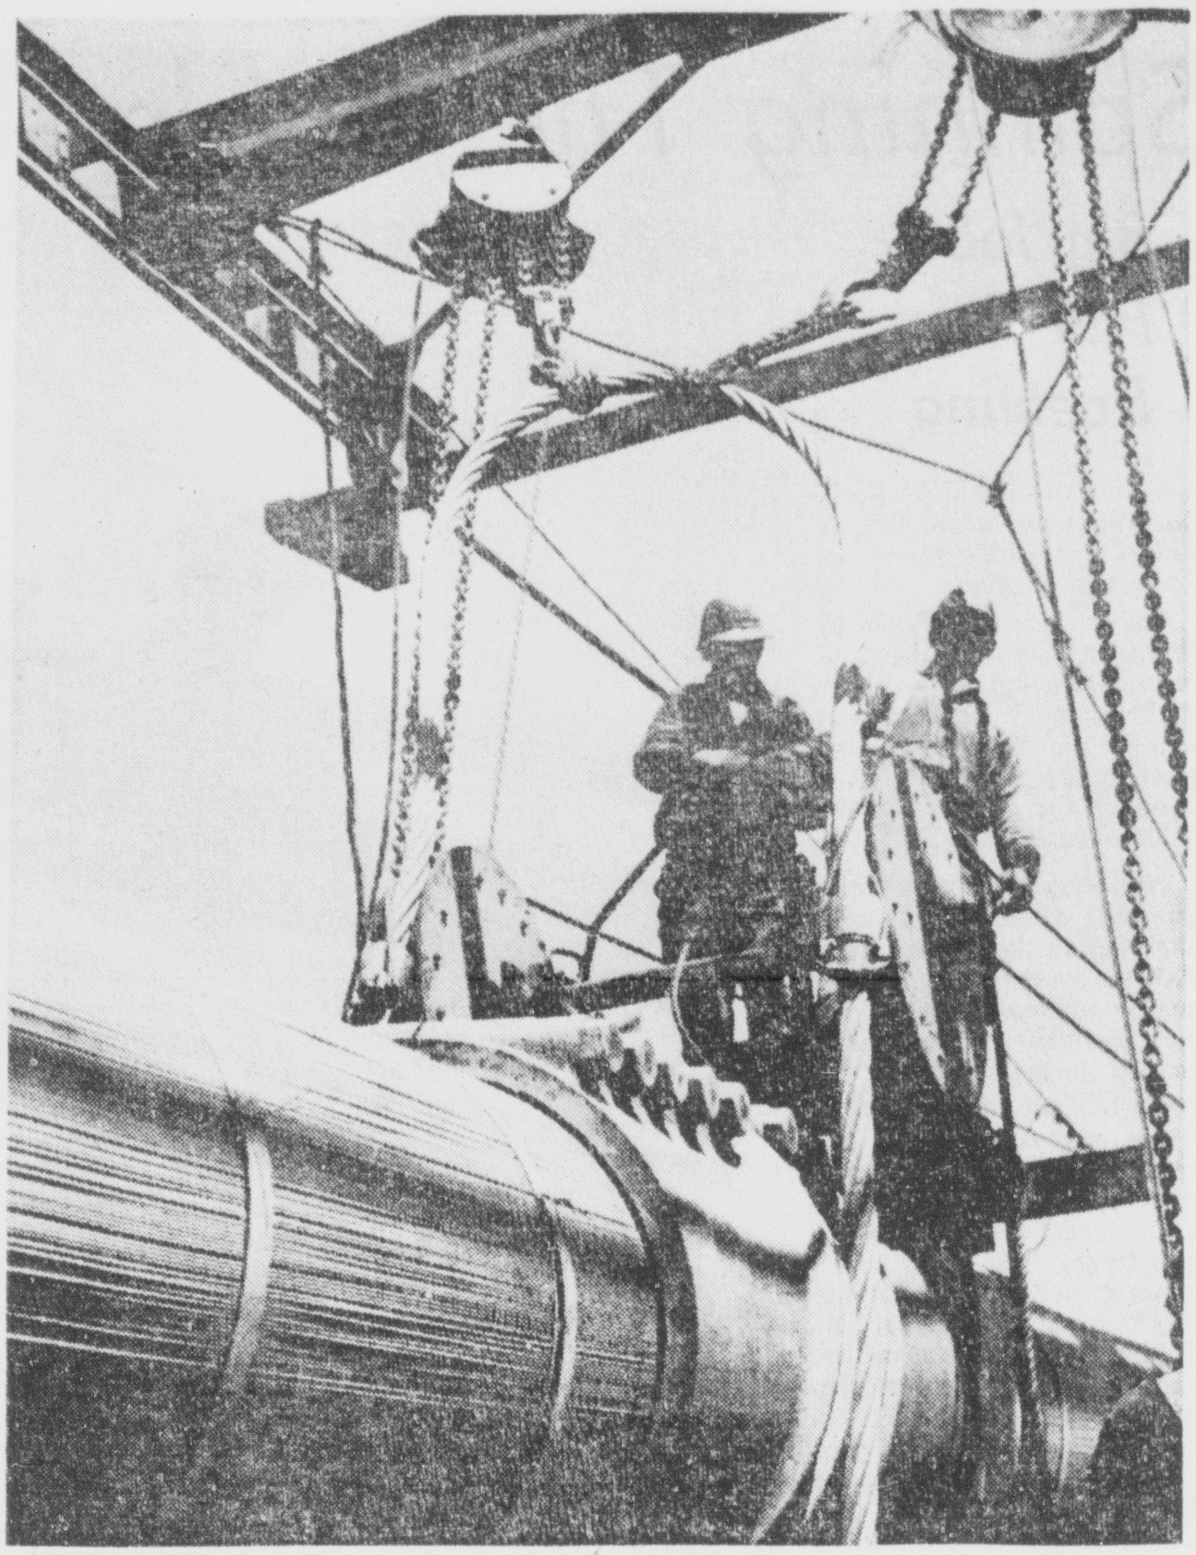

THE CABLES each have 27,572 pencil-sized high strength wires stretching from anchor to anchor, a little less than a mile and a half along the cables. Their strength is enormous, each wire having a lifting strength of three and a half tons.

They are compressed into a tight circle just over three feet in diameter. A stop at the south entrance plaza to see the model section of one of these cables is well worth while.

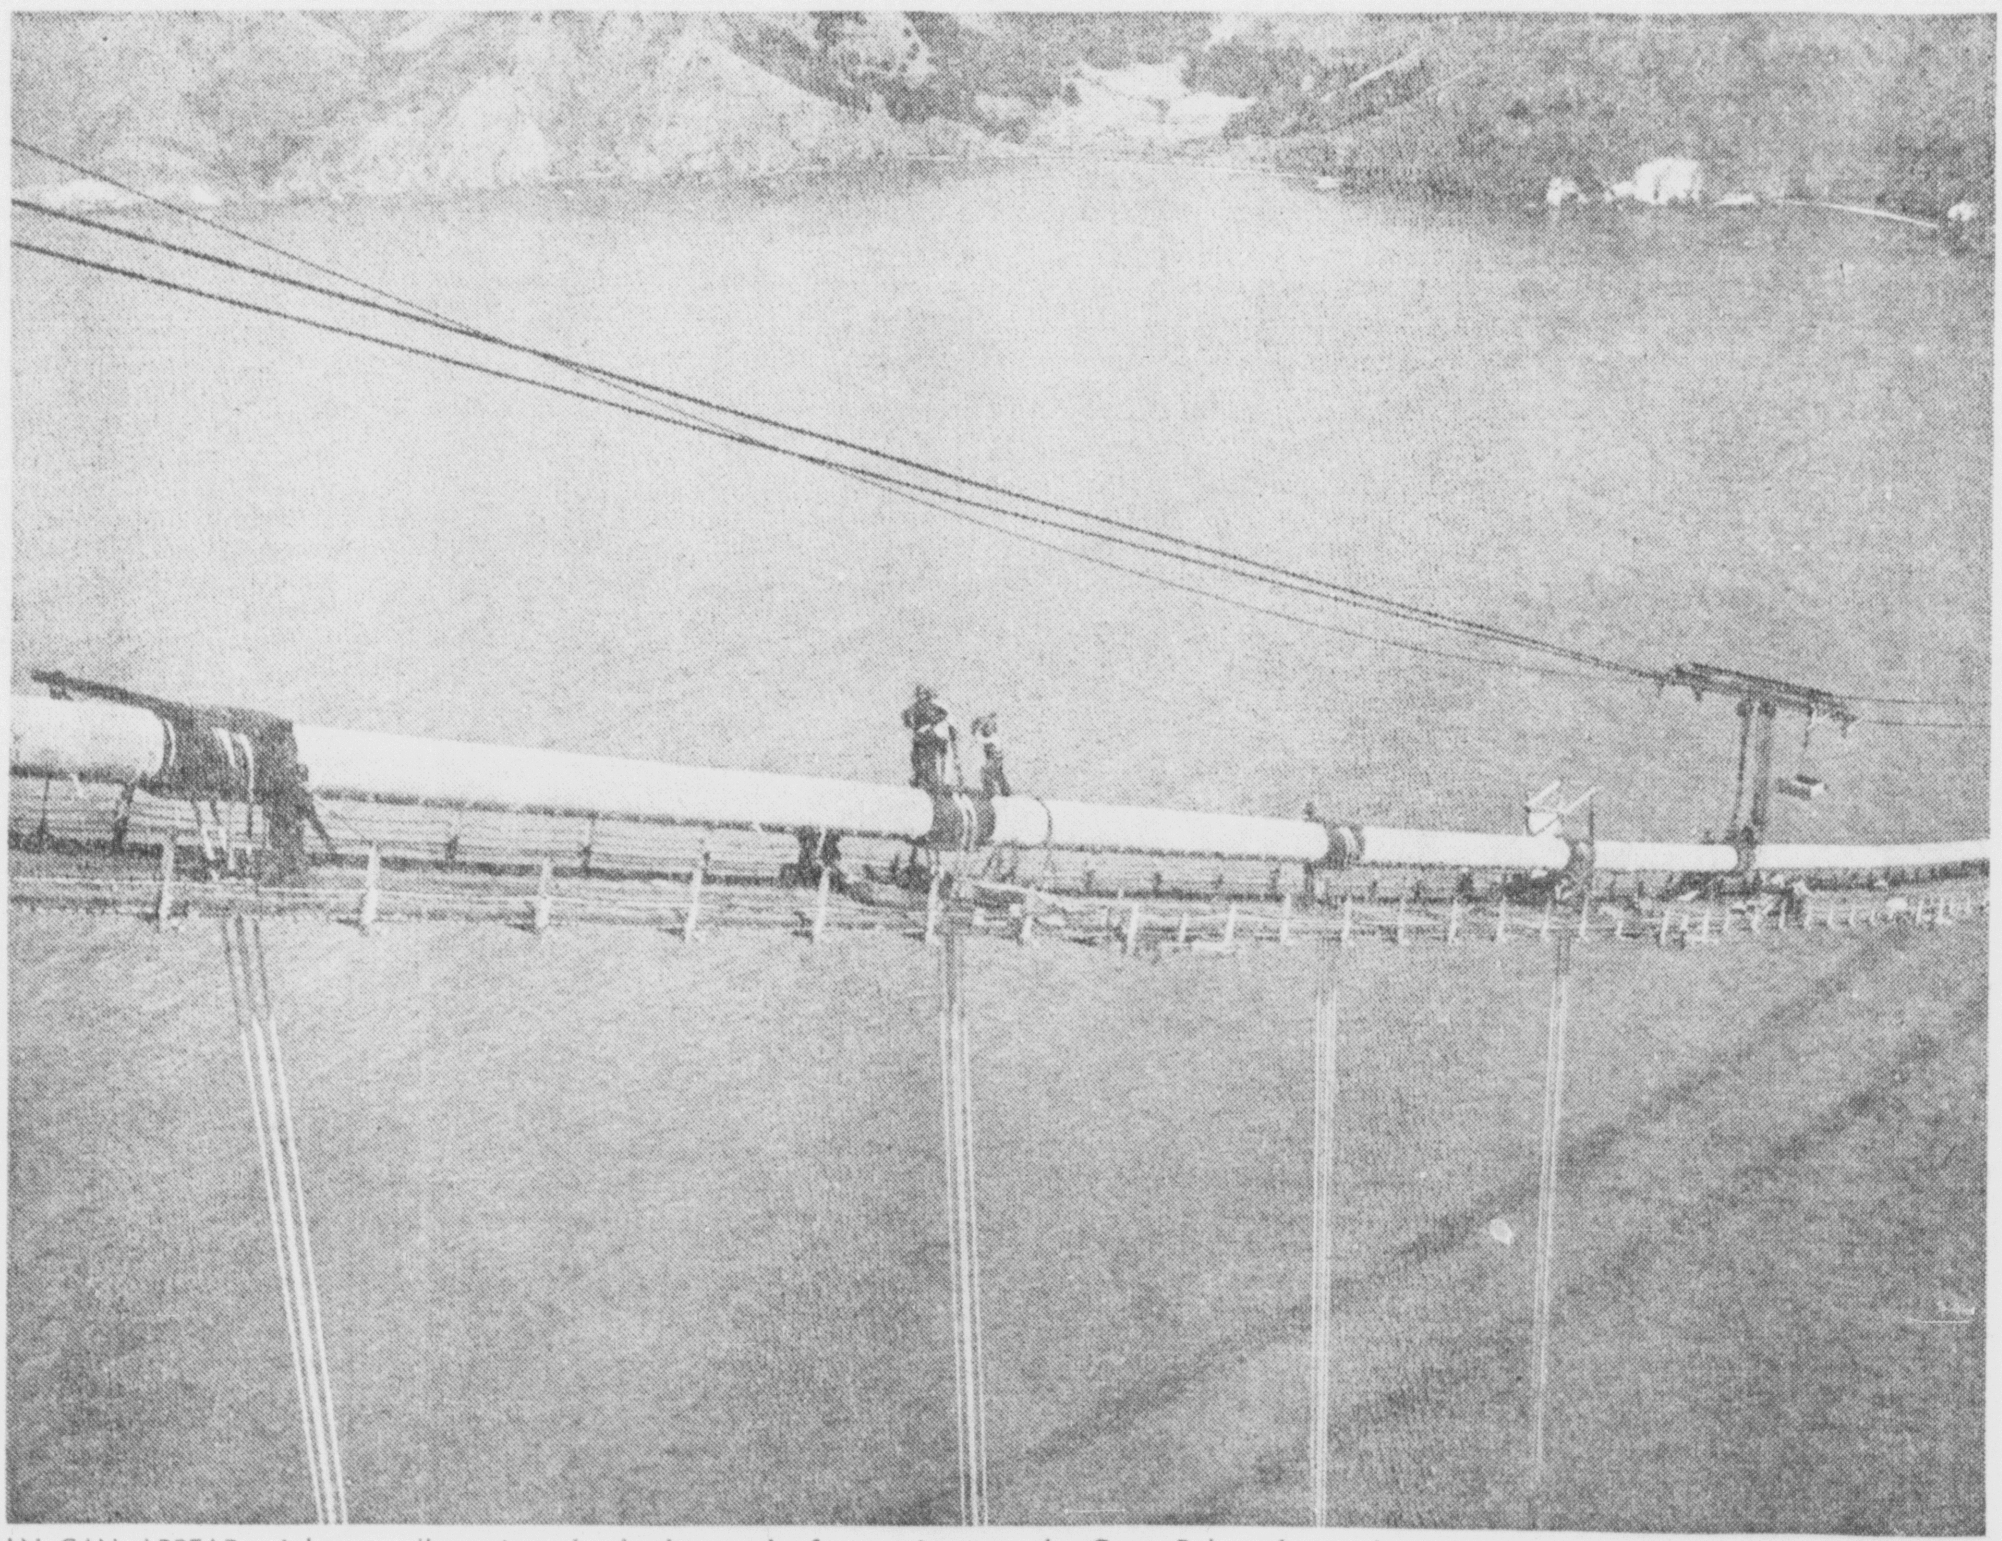

The cables were spun in 138 days by a field force of some 340 workmen at the site, plus another 140 on the Tiburon Peninsula where the wire was placed on reels.

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE to describe here the detailed and complex assembly line process, extending from shore to shore along the footwalks under the cable. Extreme cooperation and skill was required and the schedule used was, by far, still the most complicated and productive yet to be tried. At any given instant 24 wires were being placed along the walk under one cable.

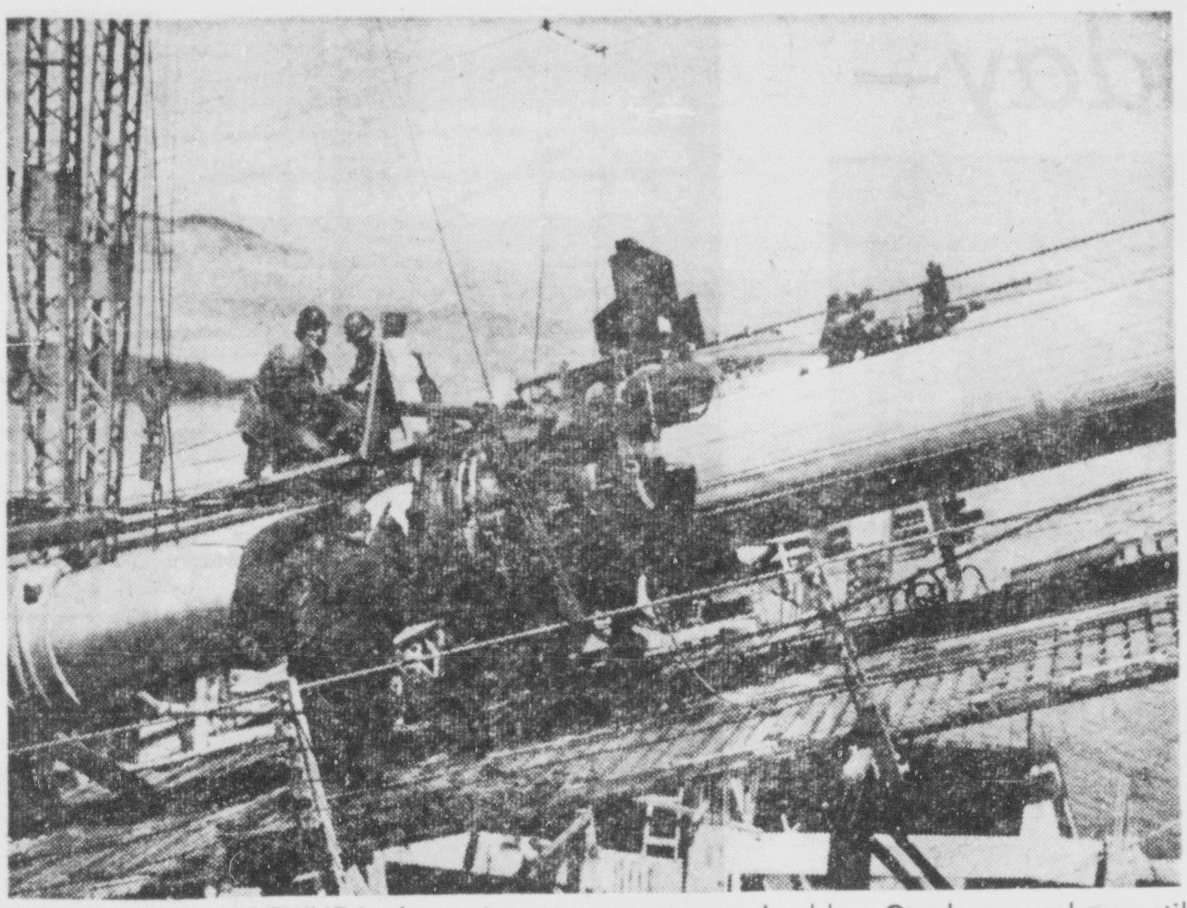

The success of the cable-spinning operations can largely be credited to the genius of C. C. Sunderland, chief engineer of the Roebling bridge department. However, Roebling engineers agree, the everlasting accolade for the bridge as a whole must unquestionably go to the memory of Joseph B. Strauss, whose superb organizing genius got the bridge off the drawing board and across our Golden Gate.

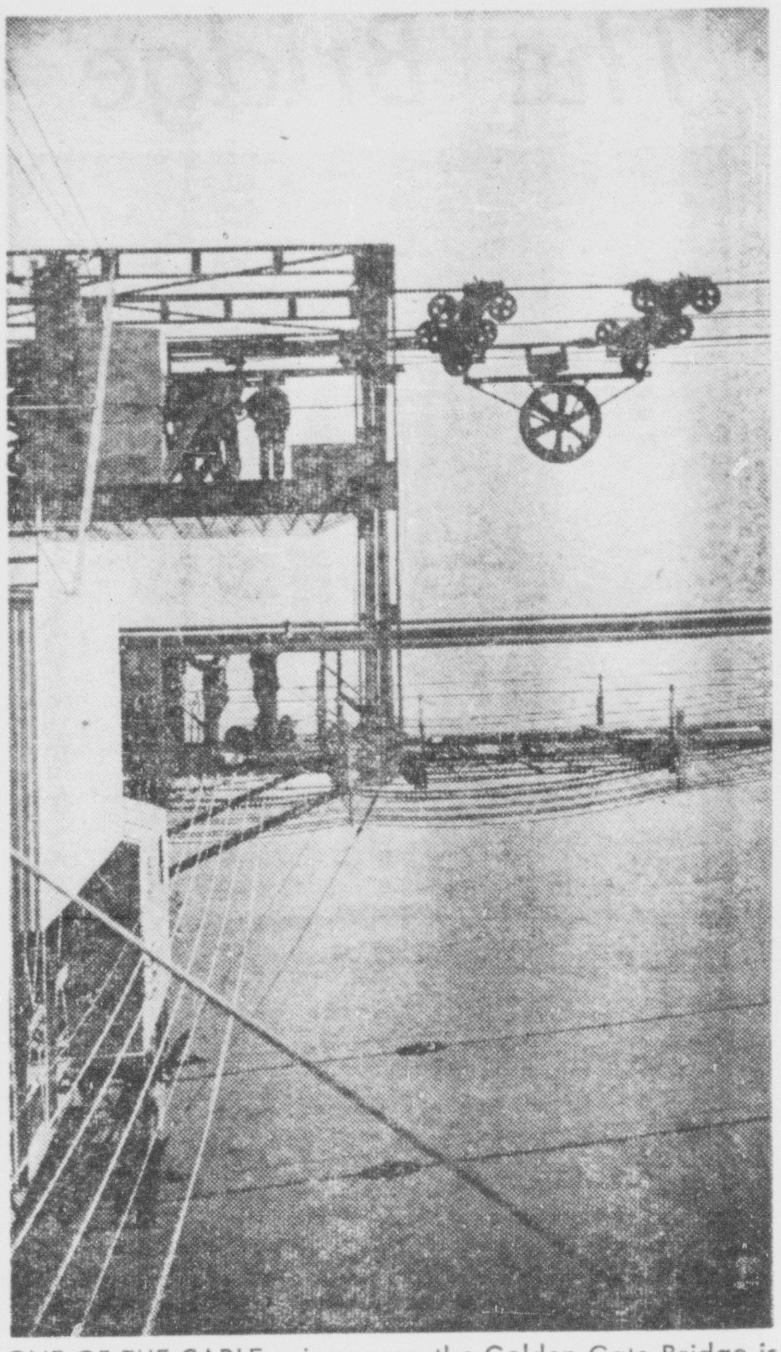

ROEBLING COMPANY workmen were photographed here at the job of erecting suspender cables on castings. Roebling employed a field force of 340 such workmen at the bridge site—another 140 in Marin County loading the reels with wire preparatory to the spinning.

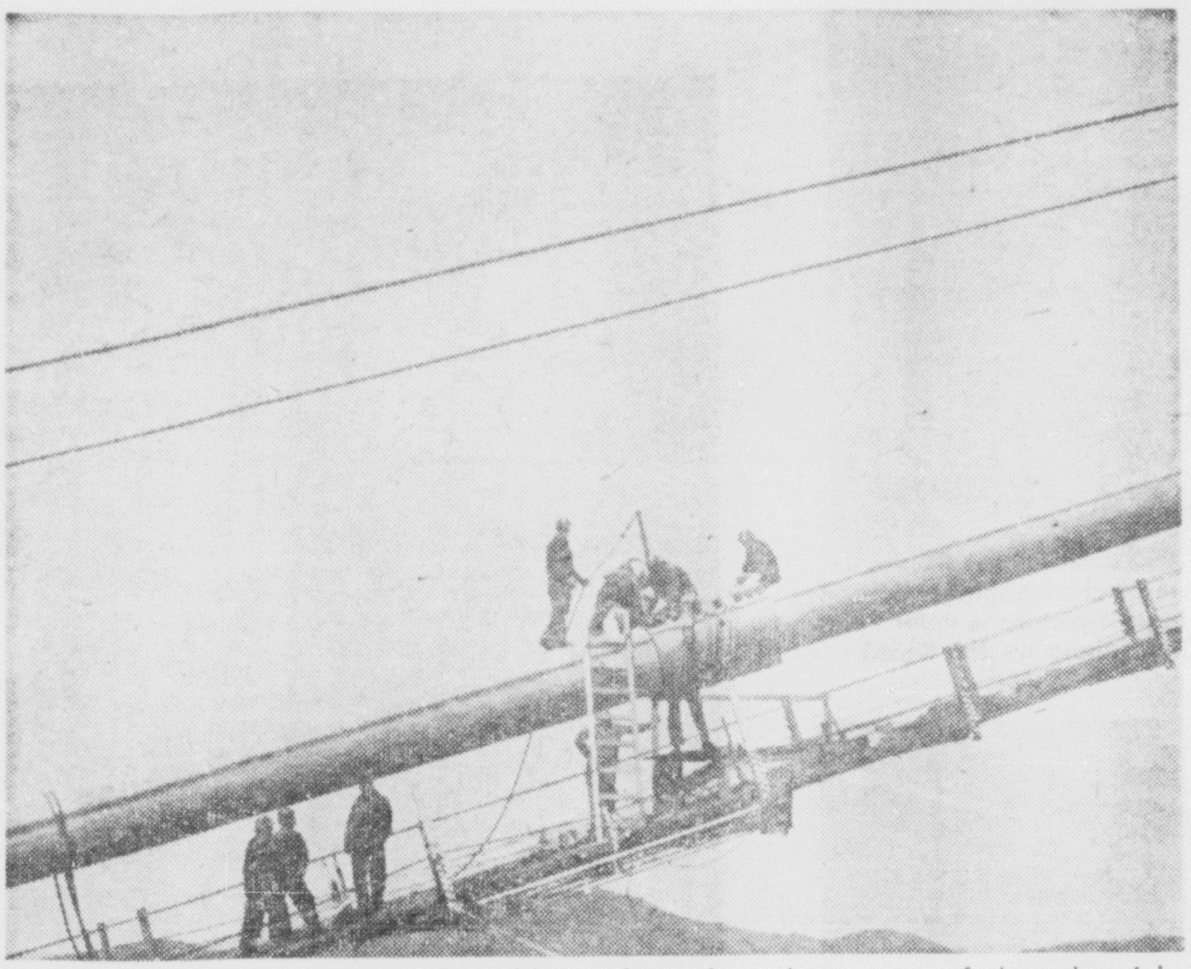

MAN CAN APPEAR mighty small against the background of a project of the dimensions of the Golden Gate Bridge, or against the grandeur of such a background as that provided by the waters and shoreline of the Gate. Below the workmen in this photo can be seen the suspender cables reaching down toward the waters of the bay. (Photo by John A. Roebling's Sons Co.)

SUPPORT CASTING for the suspender cable was being put into place by this work crew. While it took the men high into the air on precarious footing, it was no more hazardous than many of the other jobs that had to be performed in the building of the bridge. (Photo by John A. Roebling's Sons Co.)

THERE WAS AMPLE CLEARANCE between this big cargo ship and the Golden Gate Bridge. But the angle of this photograph taken by Independent-Journal staff photographer Dick Steinheimer made it look like a close call.

IT WAS SHORTLY AFTER the opening of the Golden Gate Bridge that these highway patrol officers assigned to the bridge detail lined up at its San Francisco side for a formal photograph. Capt. Al Castle is out front. Behind him, left to right, are Bob Prince, Paul Yeager, Clem Collins (assigned to the bridge for more than 20 years but now stationed in San Francisco), Claude Swan, Nyron Smith, the late Robert Edison, Dave Zebo and the late Tom Wentworth.

The Inside Story Of Spy Flight And Francis Gary Powers Trial

THE U-2 AFFAIR by David Wise and Thomas B. Ross, Random House, 269 pages, $2.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

This is a thoroughly competent job of reporting by two young Washington newspapermen.

It's all there—from the original concept of the spy flights through Francis Gary Powers' ill-fated mission, the blow-up of the Big Four meeting in Paris, the Powers trial and imprisonment, and on to that pilot's recent release by the Russians.

Wise and Ross have uncovered a great deal of previously unpublicized information. And they have cast new light on much that was previously known.

Nor do they shirk in expressing some very pointed personal conclusions reached as a result of their probing.

Some of those conclusions:

Powers was neither the disloyal American some tried to paint him during his trial and imprisonment nor the hero others have tried to label him since his release, but instead ". . . an ordinary man sent out on an extraordinary mission."

The timing of the flight so close to the start of the summit talks was not coincidental. Those who managed the program felt that an international rapprochement might be reached at Paris that would make further flights politically impossible. So there was a strong desire "to get one last mission in under the wire."

The incident revealed the extraordinary degree to which activities shaping this country's destiny are kept secret from the American people.

The incredibly confused official U.S. reaction following the shooting down of the U-2 made it "all but impossible for the summit meeting to take place."

One lesson from the affair is that "the President must preside."

But the most important lesson is that "the American government can thrive only on the confidence of the people."

TV Spanked

THE GREAT TIME-KILLER by Harold Mehling, World Publishing Co., 351 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Television, and especially the networks, takes a sound drubbing from a critic who has done his research well and who is, therefore, in a position to back up his charges with facts.

TV, Mehling declares, has gone senile in its adolescence.

Noxious commercials, interference by sponsors in the programming, excessive sex and violence, reliance on the set formula with mass appeal and the shying away from the controversial and experimental, the quiz show scandal, the smugness and greed of the TV moguls—all these are discussed and documented.

The Federal Communication Commission also comes in for its lumps for failing in its obligations to the public. So do certain members of Congress who hold financial interests in broadcasting and who resist legislation designed to correct TV's evils and weaknesses.

The broadcasting industry's major sin, Mehling feels, is its tendency to forget that it holds only a license to use the public's airwaves—not a deed to those airways. And the guardians of the public interest have been lax in reminding the industry of that fact.

A few aspects of TV do meet with Mehling's approval—the often brilliant documentaries, the job which TV can do in covering a major news event when it goes all out, such creative persons as David Susskind, Pat Weaver and Fred Friendly, the efforts of new FCC chairman Newton Minow to stir that body into action, etc.

But, says Mehling, TV, overall, is going downhill and is in desperate straits. Drastic remedies are needed, and he suggests some.

He also discusses developments in such fields as color and pay television and has some words of caution as to what could occur in those areas if the public is not on the alert.

Mehling has written a book that is both interesting and valuable. Furthermore, it is sound. And it is going to shake up some members of the television hierarchy and their political allies considerably.

Murder In Glendale

Miss Egan again demonstrates her fine touch at characterization and dialogue.

And her setting—Glendale—is a welcome change from the bigger cities where such police stories usually occur.

However, if you like deduction in your detective yarns, you are due for disappointment. Vic Varallo and a fellow Glendale officer set out to clear a man of a murder charge. But while they do a lot of scurrying around and suspecting, they contribute precious little toward bringing the killer to justice. Instead the solution to the mystery comes suddenly from somewhere out in left field after the laying of only the skimpiest of foundations for it.

"The cream of Italian cuisine."

That, says Barbara Stacy, formerly on the staff of Gourmet magazine, is what she has collected for this book. It contains more than 100 recipes.

And where this book differs from the several others in its field is that equal attention is focused upon the dishes of both northern and southern Italy.

When we think of Italian cooking, we most usually have in mind the delicious pastas and the olive oil frying of the south. Miss Stacy introduces us to the many fine dishes of central Italy and its north—steak Florentine, Venetian oysters with caviar, etc.

Many of the dishes are on the elaborate side. But a goodly number that are simple in preparation have also been included.

Colorado's mining country has given birth to many American legends. But the favorite of them all is the story of the tragic romance of Silver Dollar Tabor and his beautiful mistress Baby Doe.

It has been told before, often with much embellishment. But never has it been told so superbly as by Gordon Langley Hall in this factual and fascinating book. The triangle of the bonanza king, his plain wife Augusta and her lovely rival is related with great poignancy and pathos.

The reader will relive one of the most bewitching chapters in the history of the American West as he turns pages that take him back to a most colorful era.

Morse, Maverick Senator, Target Of Critical Biography

THE TIGER IN THE SENATE by A. Robert Smith, Doubleday and Co., 455 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Not more than a half dozen of the present members of the U. S. Senate are both important and interesting enough to justify this kind of biography in depth. Happily for author Smith, a veteran Washington, D. C. correspondent for Oregon newspapers, his subject, Sen. Wayne Morse, is one who qualifies.

This is certainly not the kind of publicity pap that is written during campaign years about too many of our politicos by friendly writers. In fact, this comes much closer to the other extreme of being a hatchet job. For the relationship between Morse and Smith has not always been smooth. The two men have differed bitterly.

And so Smith seldom seems to give Morse the benefit of a doubt. He takes proper notice of Morse's contributions in Congress—his insistence upon the application of the Morse formula in the disposal of federal property has alone saved the Treasury millions—but dwells at much greater length upon the quirks of character which have made the Oregon maverick such a "loner" and controversial figure.

He exposes Morse as ruthless, intolerant of others' opinions, egotistical and destructive. He credits Morse with integrity, strong convictions and courage, then cites examples of expediency on the part of the senator in an apparent attempt to throw doubt upon those traits.

One thing Smith does grant Morse without qualification—ability.

Morse's complex nature and stormy career are such that the reader cannot help but enjoy the book. And if proper allowance is made for Smith's personal viewpoint, much can also be learned about Morse and about politics. The writing is excellent, and the research tremendous.

STEREO NOTES

A Look At Music Of John Lewis

By JOHN SUNIER
Editor, Bay FM & Cultural Guide

Pianist-composer John Lewis, musical director of the Modern Jazz Quartet, performed with that group this month at San Francisco's Blackhawk.

We took advantage of this opportunity to hear this pace-setting "cool" or "jazz-chamber" combo up close and live, and that in turn provides me with the chance to discuss some of the many albums that John Lewis has been responsible for—LPs that are not strictly MJQ efforts.

One of the oldest is a restrained but swinging collaboration between John and the noted French guitarist (now singer) Sacha Distel.

Called "Afternoon in Paris" (Atlantic 1267), the disc actually includes three members of the MJQ, minus vibist Milt Jackson and adding Barney Wilen on tenor to John and guitarist Distel. The title tune of the album is the high point, with remarkable solos by Distel and Wilen.

"EUROPEAN WINDOWS" (RCA Victor LPM-1742) was an interesting venture into larger forms for John. It was the first time he composed for and conducted a symphony orchestra. The fine Lewis composition, "Two Degrees East and Three Degrees West," as well as two excerpts from his score to "No Sun in Venice" are highlights of this early almost-jazz effort, which if released today would be dubbed "third-stream" music.

A work composed for the San Francisco Ballet which was performed for the second year just this month is "Original Sin" (Atlantic SD-1370). It provides light and jazzy dance music for the story of the Creation and is Lewis' second jazz ballet, following the very successful "Fontessa," premiered at one of the Newport Jazz Festivals.

Communicating the jazz rhythmic ideas to the classically-trained musicians of the pit orchestra provided something of a problem. "Original Sin" was sort of a "Volume II" to the Lewis album, "The Modern Jazz Quartet and Orchestra" in attempting to combine techniques and ideas that came from both classics and jazz.

ISSUED ON Atlantic SD-1359, the MJQ and orchestra disc contains works in the third-stream idiom by three other composers in addition to Lewis. Gunther Schuller's fascinating "Concertino for Jazz Quartet and Orchestra" takes up an entire side and seems to me the most listenable piece of third-stream work thus far.

"The Golden Striker" (Music for Brass and Piano by John Lewis, conducted and played by the composer), (Atlantic SD-1334), sort of explains everything right there in the title. The album presents four brass fanfares and five Italian-inspired compositions plus the non-Italian film theme from "Odds Against Tomorrow."

John's handling of the brasses is especially fine; the effects in stereo truly striking. The title tune is also from the film score to "No Sun in Venice" and features, as does the original MJQ version, the finger-cymbals of drummer Connie Kay.

THESE WORKS may be neither fish nor fowl, classical nor jazz, but as Gary Kramer says in the notes to one album, "Who needs to analyze when you can enjoy? This is new music. It has structure and strength; it is dramatically expressive and yet unfailingly poetic."

MARIN POETS' CORNER

SUMMER AFTERNOON IN PORTOLA

There is a quiet place of many trees
And fields that lie all hushed and tawny
In the heat of the afternoon.
A little wind stirs dust
Twitchiing the rustling weeds
And makes soft drowsy sounds of crackled leaves.
Tall sunflowers turn
And bow their heads all day
In adoration of the sun.
There is the last of sunlight on the hills
Then winds that tell of shadows
Leaning slow across the western heights.
At twilight comes a glow
Like a silver trumpet note
Until the star-vestmented night
Lays on this quiet place
The priestly benediction of the dark.

Enamel Best In 2 Rooms

The walls and ceilings in most rooms in a house usually are painted with a flat paint. Whether it is a flat latex or a flat alkyd, or any other flat paint, the choice is made because there is none of the glare associated with a gloss finish.

There are two rooms, however, where a gloss or semi-gloss enamel still holds sway —the kitchen and the bathroom. These coatings have a greater resistance to steam and water than the flat paints, even though new formulas have made the flat finishes more resistant to water than at any time in the past. It is fairly well agreed that a gloss enamel will withstand more scrubbings than even the most scientifically advanced flat paints.

In selecting an enamel for the kitchen or bathroom, color is decidedly important. The housewife has to take into consideration more than her personal likes, due to the particular functions of these two rooms. In the kitchen, for instance, a cool color should be selected. Even a kitchen with air conditioning needs colors to counteract the warmth generated during the cooking chores. The selection should be made from the light and cheerful blues and greens, the pale yellows and the muted pinks.

The first place most of us look at ourselves in the morning is the bathroom mirror. And the way we look is affected by the kind of light reflected from the walls. The peaches, pinks, roses and soft corals give a warm glow to the complexion and make us think we feel good, even though we didn't think so when we arose. Be especially wary of the yellow-green colors, which can make us appear ghastly.

Before painting the kitchen and bathroom, extra care must be taken in preparing the surfaces, since the walls and ceilings in these rooms are apt to be soiled quite a bit. The surfaces must be absolutely free of oil, grease, dried soap and dirt before painting. Ordinary household cleaners are excellent for this purpose. They not only remove the foreign materials, but tend to reduce whatever gloss remains from the previous paint job.

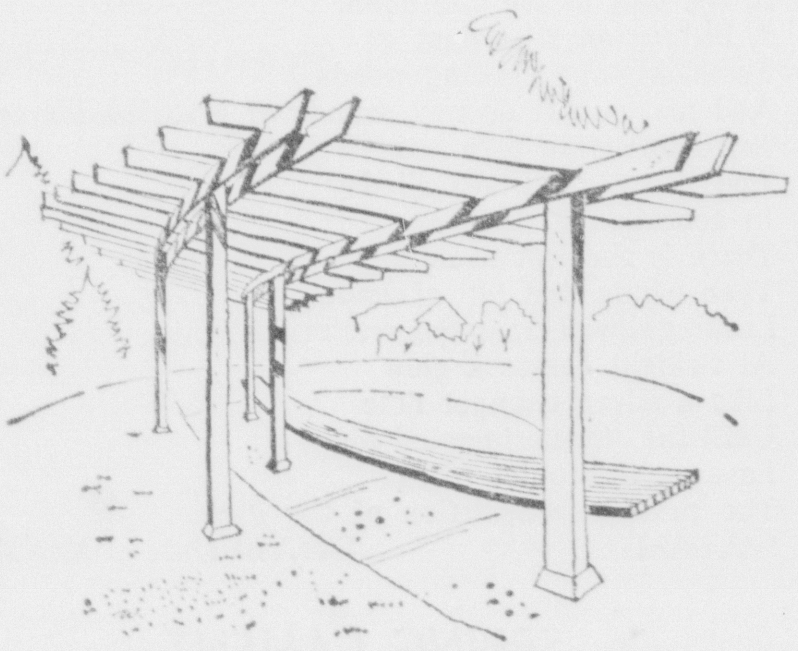

It is a fundamental of painting that new paint will not adhere properly to a shiny surface.

If you are using a light colored enamel over a much darker hue, you should apply enamel undercoater. This is especially true if you are using yellow or pink, which have a low hiding power.

Enamel can be applied with a brush or a roller.

REDWOOD AND NATIVE STONE are used to make this a warm and friendly home. Redwood is also used for the deck beyond the window wall at the rear. A booklet, "Redwood Interior Finishes," showing some of the many uses of redwood, is available from the California Redwood Assn., Department RH-1A, 576 Sacramento St., San Francisco 11, Calif. A companion booklet, "Redwood Exterior Finishes," contains information on redwood sidings and garden redwood. There is no charge for single copies.

THIS CURVED PERGOLA is a dramatic accent piece for the patio. It is easy to build. Posts are Douglas fir four-by-sixes bolted together. Crown is made of two-by-sixes which are notched to fit over beams and nailed to hold in place. Adding bench in front makes the pergola a cozy spot for a tete-a-tete.

Putty Can Protect Your Window Sash Against Rotting, Rusting

Putty is used on windows not to hold the glass in place but to form a seal between the glass and the sash to keep water, air and dust out.

It prevents wood sash from becoming waterlogged and ultimately rotting and prevents metal sash from rusting. Putty is also used to fill nail holes and small cracks in siding.

There are two kinds of putty: Wood-sash putty and metal-sash putty, the latter being formulated to adhere to the non-porous surfaces of steel and aluminum frames. Metal-sash putty comes in two formulations, exterior and interior. Before you make your purchase, check to see whether the window is glazed with the facing inside or outside. The interior type should never be used out of doors.

CLOSELY RELATED to putty are glazing compounds which differ in that they remain plastic and resilient for a long period of time and do not become so hard as putty.

It is vital that the sash be primed before the putty is applied. Unless wood sash is primed with housepaint primer, the oils in the putty will be absorbed by the wood, leaving the putty dry and brittle. Steel sash should be primed with an anti-corrosive metal primer to prevent the sash from rusting. Non-rusting metals should be similarly primed to proved "tooth" or a rough surface to promote better adhesion of the glazing material.

If most of the putty around a window is intact, only the loose or crumbly putty need be replaced. Brush away any dirt and dust and be sure the sash is dry before brushing on the primer. After the primer has dried, apply the putty in this manner. Make a thin roll of putty and press it into place. Smooth it firmly against the glass with a putty knife to get the traditional triangular strip.

When replacing a pane, remove all the old putty and the triangular glazing points which actually hold the glass in place. Prime the sash and let dry.

NEXT, APPLY an even coat of putty or glazing compound on the inside of the sash and to the molding against which the glass will rest. Insert the glass and press lightly against the bed of putty. A thin, continuous putty ribbon will ooze up around the glass when pressure is applied. Now insert the glazier's points to hold the glass in place and apply the putty in long rolls as described above.

When the putty or glazing compound has dried, it should be sealed and protected with paint. To insure a good water-tight seal, apply the same number of coats of paint to the putty as to the sash. The paint should lap over the glass slightly to insure a seal at the critical edge under which water could seep.

The Dwarf Citrus Can Be A Joy In Your Garden

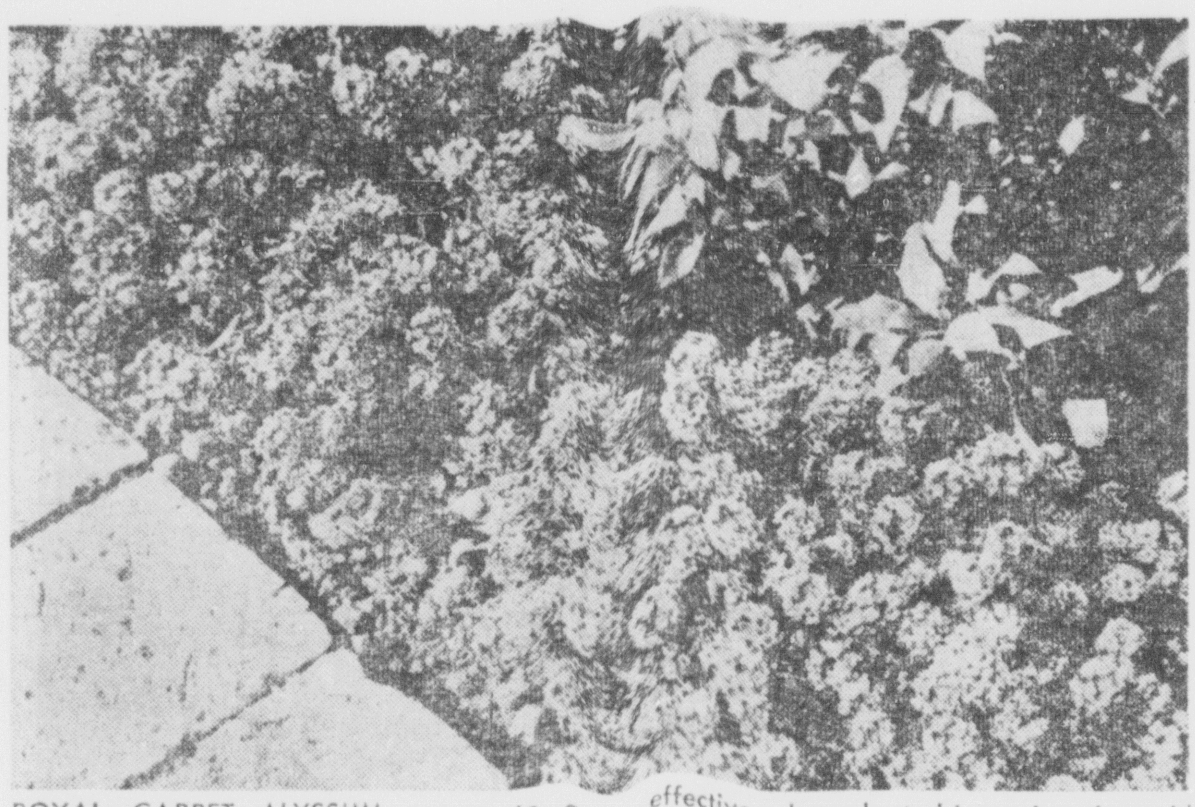

Whether you eat them or merely look at them, the many varieties of dwarf citrus are a joy to have in the garden.

The fruit can be decorative as well as delicious, while the trees themselves are both useful and good looking.

You can grow dwarf citrus in tubs for specimen use on patios and decks. You can fill a foundation planting with them or grow them as a dense hedge-screen on a sunny property line. Moreover, these drawfs can be grown up against a wall to catch heat and ripen the fruit in areas where citrus is normally hard to ripen.

Meyer Lemon was the first popular dwarf citrus offered by members of the California Association of Nurserymen. Today, however, it has been joined by practically every citrus fruit commonly seen and many that are not so commonly seen. Nurseries today carry varieties of limes, lemons, oranges, grapefruit, tangerines and kumquats as well as hybrids such an tangelo (a cross between grapefruit and tangerine) and limequat (a cross between Mexican lime and kumquat).

From the decorative standpoint, dwarf citrus stands out because there is more fruit per square foot of foliage than on full size trees. This is due largely to the fact that the fruit is natural size while the tree is not, but it is also due to the dwarf's tendency to bear relatively more abundant crops.

ROYAL CARPET ALYSSUM grows to a height of about for or five inches, making it ideal for borders. Its purple is especially effective when planted in conjunction with a row of white Snow Cloth Alyssum. Photo by Mandeville & King)

Low Borders Of Annuals Can Set Off House Attractively

A colorful ribbon of flowers along a drive, in front of a shrubbery border, or as an edging for a garden of taller flowers, can be most attractive for a home if it is done effectively.

For border plants you should take into consideration not only the height and color of the flowers but also the time of blooming. When you make your selections, be sure to look on the back of the seed packets before you buy them. You should purchase only seed that tell the period of bloom as well as the height of the flowers and the time of germination.

Ideally, it is desirable that your low-growing border plants should bloom from early spring till late fall. For this reason it is perhaps advisable to select several varieties for your border. Such an assortment will also help to provide a most attractive color contrast.

Here are a few suggestions for good border varieties:

Snow Cloth Alyssum is easy to grow and will give your garden a lovely ribbon of white from early spring till late in the season. It reaches a uniform height of four or five inches, and goes well with any color. If the combination of purple and white appeals to you, plant a row of Royal Carpet Alyssum next to the Snow Cloth. Both of these lovely strains grow to about the same height.

If you prefer the second variety a trifle higher, try Violet Queen Alyssum. Though it's called violet, its color is really quite close to the Royal Carpet's purple.

Another possibility would be Blue Cap Ageratum. It's definitely taller than the Alyssums, though still a low-growing variety. The blue and white make an excellent combination.

If you'd prefer to begin with a color rather than white, there are several delightful possibilities. Among them are the dwarf Marigolds like Yellow Pygmy (a light lemon yellow) and Golden Pygmy (a golden yellow).

For a mixture of edging colors, I find nothing better than Portulaca, though it requires plenty of sunshine and would not do for even a partially shady spot. Twinkle Little Star Phlox is still another good border choice. It's a very dwarf variety, but somewhat similar to the Star of Quedlinburg. Both have the same star-shaped flowers with chintz-like markings and coloring.

If blue is your favorite color, by all means try the Blue Bells of California. This is a low growing plant known botanically as Phacelia.

Crystal Palace Lobelia is another very dwarf flower, less than six inches tall. A somewhat taller blue is the Jubilee Gem Bachelor Button, growing to about one foot—considerably lower than most Bachelor Buttons. Jubilee Gem is the original dwarf variety of this family.

No discussion of edging varieties is complete without some mention of Verbena. These fine flowers are also available either in mixed or separate colors, and an outstanding one is the bright Scarlet Defiance. Another is Lavender Glory, a most delicate shade of lavender with just a touch of white in the strain to brighten up the bed.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Aster frikartii, the blue daisy, makes an excellent companion to yellow Marguerites, and may be planted now.
- Spring-flowering deciduous shrubs that have finished their bloom should be pruned to promote new growth for next year's bloom.
- Plant tuberous begonia seedlings this month. The top-heafy young plants need staking for support.
- Let spring-blooming bulbs continue to ripen. Cutting the tops when they're still green reduces bloom next year.
